THE PIANO AND THE DAIRY.

For the Bureau of Dairy Information
By J. H. Monrad.

There is a tendency among our American farmers' daughters to despise the dairy work and many young ladies have pouted at the idea of my asking them how many cows they milked, meaning how many cows were milked on their father's farm.

A few weeks ago I paid a very pleasant visit to a well-to-do Scotch farmer. There were two sons and two daughters: one son attended to the general farm work the other made the cheese, one daughter attended to the house-keeping while the other looked to it, that the ten milkers who milked the 104 cows do their work well, and, if necessary strip those that are not milked clean. I thought that girl looked quite as well in the morning in her simple dress as when she played the piano to me in the afternoon and her sister sang those old Scotch songs for me. I did not wonder that Burns fell over-much in love with the Scotch lassies. I fear that many girls think it under their dignity, forsooth, to milk their father's cows and to make the butter and cheese. I think that they think that work incompatible with refined manners, with singing and with playing the piano, that unlucky ambition of so many unmusical minds. And so they leave their home for a poor boarding house in the large city, and stand behind the counter from early in the morning till late at night, calling themselves sales ladies, while the general public terms them shop girls. Or they teach school, whether they have ability and liking for it or not. Or they become type-writers without any special liking for it, receiving small pay and lots of impudence from their fellow clerks. Indeed it is a wonder to me they do not see what a well paid work is lying, so to say, at their feet in the dairy.

It takes an intelligent girl to make a good dairy maid, and a good education makes it easy for her to keep the accounts so as to tell which cow to keep, which to sell, and the musical knowledge comes handy while milking as the cows are fond of listening to the girl crooning a tune while the milk goes foaming into the bucket. On the other hand a good butter maker should be able to turn the churn at a steady, uniform speed, and that comes handy at the piano, indeed the metronome has been used at the churn as well as at the piano. If any farmer's daughter who reads this and whose father keeps from 12 cows upward is willing to take right hold of the matter, and induce her father to allow her a share in the increased profits of the dairy, and if she will test their milk carefully both as to quantity and quality, if she will not deem it below her dignity to see the milking done and do some herself, if she will pay strict attention to the details of the business, in fact will put the same price in her dairy as in her piano, I venture to say that she will be able not only to buy a new piano but also [illegible] a dairy room that she will be [illegible] not only that new sash [illegible] and spring bonnet but also [illegible] dairy floor laid with glazed tiles. It can be done, it has been done [illegible] I sincerely hope it will be done again and again in our western states.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know something, and when such a man speaks we should heed what he says.

[illegible] Ill., Jan. [illegible], 1885.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.: [illegible] I have been in the general practice of medicine for more than forty years, and would say that in all my experience, have never prescribed a preparation that I could [illegible] with as much confidence of success as Dean Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effects are wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

Are You Taking It?

"Are you taking the F. E. C. Kidney Remedy?" is becoming a common inquiry. The F. E. C. is known to be an honest remedy and is doing a world of good. J. J. Orr sells it.

QUEER PEOPLE.

This is the title of the latest, and by all odds the most charming book for little people we have seen. Its fairies or stories, are delight all, but the illustrations are simply immense.

The author, Palmer Cox, is a new star in the juvenile firmament, but he shines with unique brilliancy. His charming fairies rival those of the world famed Æsop, and he far outshines that celebrated literary comet by his inimitable illustrations. He dresses up his birds, animals, insects, giants, fairies, goblins, etc., in grotesque style and makes them reason, talk, dance, and cut up all sorts of the oddest pranks imaginable, affording infinite delight as well as excellent instruction to the young. This series of his book "Queer People" has brought a perfect ovation of praise from the brightest men in the land. For instance, Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, says "It has set my children wild with delight," and Col. Russell H. Conwell, the famous lecturer, says "Don't send me another such a book, for I can't get my children to bed."

The famous statesman diplomat, and wit, Sunset Cox, says: "The Queer Kapers are simply incomparable," while the distinguished theologian, Dr. Howard Crosby says "they have the fascination that belongs to Æsop and Uncle Remus, and the Vegetable poet, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, writes "I am sorry I have not a nursery, full of little folks to enjoy its bright pictures and stories."

Æsop's fables are enjoyed by old and young and are quoted by the greatest orators and surely these equally charming stories, so profusely and exquisitely illustrated will charm young and old for generations to come.

The sale of this book will run into enormous. It is published by the well known house of Hubbard Bros. Phila., Chicago, and Kansas City, to whom any person desiring an agency should apply.

CONGRESSIONAL STENOGRAPHERS.

The Work They Have To Do and Men Who Are Difficult To Report.

The reporting in the House is managed differently from that in the Senate, and in the former, being a body so much larger and noiser than the Senate, the reporters are compelled to chase around after the members who speak. In a running debate, where members are jumping up in all parts of the hall, it is extremely difficult to catch all they say, yet it is done quite well, and only in times of great excitement and commotion do the stenographers lose their connection.

Over in the Senate the two head stenographers sit at tables near the presiding officer's desk. The chamber being small, they can hear distinctly what is said, and seldom have to call on Senators to supply missing portions of sentences or paragraphs.

Five rapid men do the work in the House, who are veterans in the service, and who are so hardened to their work that it looks as if they would never wear out. In the House the five men take turns, relieving each other at the expiration of eight minutes.

They do not write out their notes into long hand themselves, but go downstairs, where there is an army of less experienced stenographers to whom they can leisurely dictate what they have taken in the hall, and these people in turn write out in long hand the debates.

Nearly every member who makes a speech of five minutes duration wants to see the manuscript before it goes to the Record office, and this makes it necessary to send the roll of manuscript to the member's house or hotel. It is a big job, and what a member says has to pass through many hands before it is finally issued in the Record.

Usually the stenographers work only twelve out of the twenty-four months, although the chief stenographers—that is, the shorthand writers who take the proceedings—are paid annual salaries of $5,000 each. They certainly earn their salaries and but for the long rest every other year they could not stand the strain.

When statesmen become either excited or enthusiastic they are, as a general rule, rapid talkers. The longer a man is in Congress the more fluent does he become, and some of the Senators who are given to long speeches talk "like a blue streak."

The most difficult Senator by long odds to report is Mr. Plumb of Kansas. He not only rattles away at a lively rate but chops off his words. He can say more in a shorter space of time than any one in the Senate.

Messrs. Morgan of Alabama and Blair of New Hampshire are next to him in the way of rapid speaking, perhaps. Mr. Hoar has such a twang that he is hard to report, though he speaks slowly and deliberately.

The hardest to report of all the senators is Mr. Evarts. The old gentleman, so famous for long sentences, is wind broken and his voice is husky and indistinct. He speaks slowly enough, but he is so indistinct these days that people who have heard of his fame as an orator are disappointed when they go to the Senate chamber.

Messrs. Ingalls, Frye, Vest, Spooner, Blackburn, Edmunds, Butler and others are quite easy to report, as they speak distinctly and deliberately, and nearly all of the best Senatorial orators seem to have followed the advice of a once noted elocutionist, who insisted that it was well for public speakers to "cultivate the pause."

MONEY AND MATRIMONY.

The Franklins Expressed Views of a Wife on the Connection of These Two Things.

I am certain that money, or, rather, the want of it, is at the root of most failures in marriage. We have everything to make us happy but that, and I can assure you it is an evil of no mean growth or limited influence.

My husband is a soldier, and one of the very best and finest gentlemen on God's earth. He is wise, and in many ways a very good one, for I learn one lesson of economy with really good appearances as far as they go, and I work very hard, and yet hold my own among the "society" people to which we belong.

But, oh! if you had any idea of the "drive" that it is to do this. The struggle, I feel, is spoiling me. I am so cantankerous at home, so full of cares, so impatient and snappish, so annoyed at the smallest waste of money, that I am, I know it, often unbearable to my good man.

He would often settle the question, I feel, and let me live alone if we didn't love each other and the child so dearly.

ODD SLIPS IN DISCOURSE.

Some Entertaining Instances of Infelicities of Speech.

A lecturer said, all unconscious of his awkward expression:

"I must beg you to give me your undivided attention, indeed, it is absolutely impossible that you could form a true idea of the hideous animal of which we are about to speak, unless you keep your eyes fixed on me."

A certain preacher discoursing upon Bunyan and his works caused a titter among his hearers by exclaiming:

"In these days, my brethren, we want more Bunyans."

Another clergyman pleading earnestly with his parishioners for the construction of a cemetery for their parish, asked them to consider the "deplorable condition of 50,000 Christian Englishmen living without Christian burial."

Still more curious was this clerical slip. A gentleman said to the minister:

"When do you expect to see Deacon S. again?"

"Never," said the reverend gentleman solemnly, "the Deacon is in heaven."

THE VEHICLE OF THE FUTURE.

Prognostications That Make Us Want To Be Young Again.

A recent writer suggests that we shall in the next century, have very little use for horses. He supposes airships to be not only an achievement, but to be as common as wagons are now.

The farmer has then only to hitch a load to his airboat, and lift it clear of trees, and move straight to market.

The effect of navigating the air will, however, be most marked on urban life. Cities will no longer be needed to any such extent as now. The airship, avoiding streets, can make a location in the country as desirable for a great store as one in a city.

Will not also a vast amount of land now needed for highways be given over to tillage? Go ahead and give us the airship.

The Everyday Puzzles of Life.

After a century of hot discussion we are not certain whether coffee is a wholesome stimulant or a deadly poison, whether we should have hot baths or cold or no baths at all, whether we should keep our feet dry or pay no attention to wet feet and soaked clothing, whether tobacco is a blessing or a curse, whether we over-eat or under-eat, whether we should eat at night or go to bed hungry, whether we should exercise more or should exercise less, whether we should drink much water or little.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Cure for Sleeplessness.

Is sleeplessness curable? A correspondent who says he has tried the remedy and found it efficacious declares that thinking of a dream and going over and over the scene it presented will induce sleep.

He is entitled to be believed so far as his own experience goes, and at any rate he rightly urges that the expedient of counting numbers or repeating easy flowing verses often, if not always, fails.

In the Art Gallery.

"You want to be careful of that umbrella," said an art dealer to a countryman who was indicating the fine points of a picture to his wife.

"All right, mister," responded the agriculturist, "I won't let go of that umbrel till I git back home."—Utica Observer.

Variety the Spice of Life.

To an old couple, who boasted that they had lived man and wife for fifty years, and never had a dispute, the listener replied: "What a doleful, monotonous life you must have had!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

THE question has often been asked, "to what does The Century owe its great circulation?" The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that "it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department." In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue throughout the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln History and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

THE SIBERIAN PAPERS,

by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." As is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters. A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons. George W. Cable will write "Strange, True Stories of Louisiana." There will be novelettes and short stories by leading writers, occasional articles on war subjects (supplemental to the famous "War Papers" by General Grant and others, which have been appearing in The Century), etc., etc.

The Century costs four dollars a year, and it is published by The Century Co., of New York, who will send a copy of the full prospectus to any one on request.

An interesting letter for Ladies:

August 26, 188[illegible]

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Dear Sirs—Pardon me the liberty of addressing strangers, but we are indeed benefactors of mankind. Your medicine is a boon and blessing to man and more especially women. It renews the very life principle in the system and takes away the terrible scourge of woman and takes place of weakness brings strength. It is indeed doing wonders for the afflicted and no one need to suffer from the terrible drain on the system arising from a disordered state of the kidneys, or from female weakness, that will try this, for it is sure. Hoping you will not consider this letter impertinent, I remain,

BRITTON BUDGET.

Thanksgiving Day was enjoyably passed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bartley. As customary for some years, this family comprised of four brothers and four sisters, all married, alternate with each other, and upon the eighth consecutive year all of these brothers and sisters are found in the home of a brother, or a sister, enjoying an annual social feast. "Behold how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The widowed mother was also present; some of the grand children, also a great grandchild. But absent from this gathering was Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Soule, now residing near Farmington, Michigan. The good woman of the house spared nothing in having a well prepared dinner that all might partake of with thanksgiving. Next Thanksgiving day all are to meet in the home of Mrs. Lyman Hause. Can it be said in the next annual gathering, as it could in the last, death has not entered our circle during the year?

This is a beautiful December morning, from all the threatening of snow that has been in the clouds for over a week; and last evening it seemed certain that we would look upon the ground all white this morning, and behold there is no mark left of snow or rain. Three years ago to day winter closed in covering the earth about us with snow Dec. 3d. Two years ago winter came Nov. 20th and one year ago winter came Nov. 15th.

There is much added to the appearance of our Britton, in the Union Block. Who will next be the men of business to fill those new stores?

We are having remarkably fine weather in these parts for the time of year, and all who have business on the roads, we think, must enjoy it as the wheeling is extra good.

Dr. Swartout has moved his family into the village and occupies the rooms over his store.

I. S. Osborne has rented his dwelling house, just built, to Frank Rose of Tecumseh; his goods are here waiting for the completion of the house. Mr. Rose has a place in the depot office, learning the art of telegraphy.

Mrs. Osgood, mother of Elmer and Will, spent the last week with her sons in Britton.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. John Cheever on Thursday, Dec. 13th, at 2:30 P. M. All interested in the improvement of humanity are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Samuel Gibson is laid up with a severely scalded foot.

Will Rinn, the village blacksmith, has been quite unwell for several days.

Our village depot has been greatly improved in its internal appearance, by a new coat of paint. Thanks to the railroad company.

Several parties have recently been exploring our thriving town, with eyes open to business; they have expressed themselves as favorably impressed with the flattering prospects here, and as soon as the new stores are ready they are likely to be occupied. Offers have been made for the purchase of some of the stores in the building, but the owners are not anxious to sell. However, other business lots, equally good, can be had; let those who want, come and buy and build for themselves.

Your correspondent was favored as an honored guest at a recent meeting of the Grange in South Macon. It was the anniversary of the general organization of the Patrons of Husbandry. The gathering was large and delightfully social. The Grange in Macon has been organized about 13 years. Many of the original members are gone, and some have removed to a distance, but, though old and far away, many of the original members were there in all the glee of vigorous and happy youth. Dr. Howell, W. H. Osborne, Mr. Morley, Adams and others, now of Tecumseh. There was a fine feast of musical and literary entertainment, followed by a most sumptuous dinner. Farmers live by eating and by eating that which is good. The Grange in Macon consists of a wide awake, enterprising set of men and women of large benevolence and hospitality.

I used one bottle of Mother's Friend before my first confinement. It is a wonderful remedy. I rested and lost so well afterward, friends remarked it. Would not be without Mother's Friend for any consideration.

Are You Taking It?

"Are you taking the F. E. C. Kidney Remedy?" is becoming a common inquiry. The F. E. C. is known to be an honest remedy and is doing a world of good. J. J. Orr sells it.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mrs. Willis Linn, who has been in poor health for several weeks, is failing at the present writing, with no hopes of recovery.

The German class under the supervision of Prof. H. Davis, reports very profitable and instructive meetings.

Beevers & Co., are pushing their reed mill toward completion as rapidly as time will permit.

The children, grand children, and friends of Fenner Palmer took him by surprise Monday evening—the occasion being his birthday.

Mrs. H. J. Williams and Hattie Russell started for Poultney, Vermont, last week Thursday. Hattie will remain with her parents, and Mrs. W. will make a visit of several weeks before returning.

Prof. and Mrs. E. A. Wilson of Tecumseh, spent Thanksgiving with his parents.

Notice to Tax Payers—I will be at S. P. Smith's store, Ridgeway, Dec. 7 and 21; at my office, Britton, Dec. 14 and 28, and at John G. Witt's, Dec. 13 and 27, for the purpose of receiving taxes. L. A. BABCOCK, Treas.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Helm spent several days last week with Franklin friends.

Dean Loree took Thanksgiving dinner with his sister, Mrs. Lucking of Detroit.

There was not as general attendance at the services held at the church Thanksgiving, as should have been. A splendid dinner was served by the friends and all enjoyed a pleasant time.

The entertainment given by the W. C. T. U. Tuesday evening was well attended and the exercises passed off very pleasantly—receipts $8.12.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. Willis J. Helm, Friday evening of the present week.

Mrs. David McNair and Ella Jackson of Tecumseh, spent Tuesday evening with village friends.

Walter and Ethel Gripton visited their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Barlow, from Tuesday until Friday.

Miss Ida Pocklington came home from Ypsilanti to spend Thanksgiving.

The members of the Library Association will give a box social at the parlors of the Library, next week Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the Library. The ladies are requested to furnish the boxes with eatables sufficient for two—the boxes to be sold at auction. Good music will be furnished during the evening.

The annual election of officers of the Hall Library Association was held at the Library, Tuesday afternoon, resulting in the election of the following:

Pres.—Dr. R. H. Nelson.
Vice Pres.—W. R. Wilson.
Sec.—F. J. Tempie.
Treas.—W. L. Jones.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

G. P. Warring, R. Cadmus, T. H. Temple, Dr. D. W. Loree, Miss Ella Hall, Chas. Cubertson, Jr., Mrs. H. J. Williams.

MACON MUSIC

The Macon Normal students were at home last week spending Thanksgiving.

James Mills and Miss Babcock of Leslie, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sickley.

H. Niblack and wife of Clinton spent Thanksgiving with friends here.

Geo. Langan of Ludington, is visiting at his old home.

Friends from Ypsilanti were the guests of Ella Camburn and Maud Howell last week.

Charley Allen's young friends gave him a surprise last Friday night—a good time reported.

Frank Augustus and wife of Ypsilanti, spent Thanksgiving with his mother, Mrs. Augustus.

Literary entertainment at the school house on Friday evening of this week.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

At a time when it is seriously asked whether the tariff issue did it, would it not be well for those who are engaged in this particular line of investigation to go a step further and ask how the President and the Democrat party could, if they had wished, have escaped that issue? Touching the condition of affairs which had to be met, the Buffalo Courier, in the course of a very able leading editorial, says, and says with perfect truth

"When the Fiftieth Congress came together last December, it met a financial condition of the Government unlike that which had been met by any other new Congress since the war. This condition was a large and increasing surplus and no outstanding bonds subject to redemption at the call of the Secretary of the Treasury. The Government was subjected to the necessity of doing one of two things—first, reducing the revenue by reducing the taxation: or, second, buying bonds at a premium fixed by the bond holders.

"If the President and the Democratic party in Congress had adopted a policy of drifting along, with a view of accepting as an affirmative policy the use of the surplus indefinitely in the purchase of bonds at a premium fixed by the bond-holders, both the President and his party in Congress would have inevitably and justly been subjected to most aggressive adverse criticism on the part not only of the Republican leaders and newspapers, but also of the business men of the country. This criticism would have had a powerful political effect that would have resulted in demoralizing the Democratic party. The party would have been called the "bondholders' party;" the Administration would have been accused of working in the interest of the bondholders and of dodging the tax-reduction question for purely selfish and partisan reasons. There would have been simple chaos in the Democratic ranks throughout the country.

"But it is said that the President should have recommended in general terms a reduction of the surplus by a reduction of taxation, and that he should have avoided any specific discussion of the tariff question in his message. Let us consider a moment the practical effect of that policy, if it had been adopted.

"The chief topic of discussion during the Congressional campaign of 1886 was the tariff question. The result of the election again put the Democrats in control of the House. They were pledged to the policy of reducing tariff taxation. The Ways and Means Committee was appointed with a view to the redemption of that pledge. The Democratic party throughout the country expected that every effort would be made to redeem the pledge. For ten years since the end of the war the Democrats had controlled the House of Representatives, and they had steadily failed to put a tariff-reduction bill even thro' the House. The great bulk of the Democratic party, and of independent tariff reformers who sympathized with the party because of its tariff-reform pledges, were getting tired of these repeated failures. The Ways and Means Committee of the new House was looked to for action.

"If when that committee met last December a message from the President containing simply milk and water recommendations respecting the tariff had been put before it, what would have been the result?

"Chaos, bitterness, dissension. And why?

"As in duty bound, and in accordance with their convictions as to wise public policy, and in accordance with the general expectation of the people, the majority members of the Ways and Means Committee would have set to work on a tax-reduction bill. The preparation of this bill would have necessarily involved the tariff question in all its phases. The tariff reform members would have been justly irritated by the failure of the administration to take a positive, clearly defined position. The Randall Democrats would have said to them, in effect: 'Better follow the lead of the President. He evidently thinks that nothing material should be done with the tariff before the Presidential election. You should respect his wishes.'

"The Republicans would have talked in a similar strain; but, taking advantage of the Democratic dilemma, they would have gone further. They would have accused the President of cowardice; of evading his duty with a hope of smoothing the road to a re-election; of failing to meet a financial emergency with a clear-cut policy; of sacrificing principle to expediency; of working in the interests of bondholders and so forth. In the eyes of a great many Democrats, this criticism would have been very effective nobody can doubt.

"In the midst of all this wrangling, irritation and confusion a tariff bill would have been reported from the Ways and Means Committee. No matter what the provisions of this bill might have been, it would undoubtedly have encountered fatal opposition in the House. For purely tactical party reasons, the Republicans would have opposed it. The Randall Democrats would have been re-enforced by timid, time-serving Democratic members desirous of avoiding a contest which would have appeared to be against the judgment of the Administration.

"Meanwhile, the Democratic press of the country would have been torn into factions; some newspapers sharply criticising the President for failing to sustain a large majority of his party in Congress, others earnestly entreating the Ways and Means Committee to postpone the tariff reduction to the next session.

"There would have been quarreling in the Democratic ranks all along the line. Is there any reasonable doubt of it?

"The tariff bill would have been defeated or dropped. The tariff reformers, composing the overwhelming majority of the party, would have held the President responsible for this latest failure—the sixth failure of the Democratic majority to put a tariff reduction bill through the House after the reporting of the bill from the Ways and Means Committee.

"The bitter wrangle at Washington would have been transferred to the National Convention, and the party would have entered upon the campaign discordant and dispirited; ashamed of itself, and the larger part of it thoroughly dissatisfied with the Administration.

"How different was the course of events which followed the wise action of the President. Responding eagerly and gladly to the eloquent and patriotic appeal of the tariff message the Democrats of the House, with but few exceptions, rallied to the support of the Ways and Means Committee, and after a superb battle they redeemed the oft-repeated pledges of their party by passing a tariff reduction measure. For the first time since the war the Democratic newspapers of the country were practically united in a great national contest. It was a magnificent fight, an honorable and honest fight, and the Democratic party, we firmly believe, came much nearer victory on November than it would have come had President Cleveland not sent his bold, manly message to Congress last December.

"The message fairly represented the principles of the party as proclaimed year after year, in National conventions, in Congressional debate, in newspaper discussion. By being true to those principles the President not only did that which was right within itself, but that which was politically expedient.

"Under the circumstances, defeat is far more honorable to President Cleveland and to the Democratic party than success would have been if achieved by evasion and a shirking of duty in a public emergency. But success could not have been thus achieved.

"Though defeated, the Democratic party, as a party, will never regret its tariff fight of 1888, and it will ever be rightfully proud of the part taken therein by Grover Cleveland."

The fountain of perpetual youth was one of the dreams of antiquity. It has been well-nigh realized in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which purifies the blood, gives vitality to all the bodily functions, and thus restores to age much of the vigor and freshness of youth.

I have had nasal catarrh for ten years so bad that there were great sores in my nose and one place was eaten through. I got Ely's Cream Balm. Two bottles did the work. My nose and head are well. I feel like another man.—C. S. McMillen, Sidney, Jackson Co. Mich.

For all forms of nasal catarrh where there is dryness of the air passages with what is commonly called "snuffing up," especially when going to bed, Ely's Cream Balm gives immediate relief. Its benefit to me has been priceless.—A. G. Case, M. D., Milwood, Kas.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

HEAD TOWARD THE NORTH.

An American Physician Thinks This the Right Way To Sleep Well.

There is no doubt in my mind that the belief that human beings should sleep with their bodies lying north and south has its foundation in true scientific facts.

Each human system has magnetic poles—one positive and one negative. Now, it is true that some persons have the positive pole in the head, and the negative pole in the feet, and vice versa. In order that the person sleeping should be in perfect harmony with the magnetic phenomena of the earth, the head, if it possess the positive pole, should lie to the south, or, if the feet possess the positive pole, the head should lie to the north.

The positive pole should always lie opposite to the magnetic centre of the continent, and thus maintain a magnetic equilibrium. The positive pole of the person draws one way, but the magnetic pole of the earth draws the other way, and forces the blood toward the feet, affects the iron in the system, tones up the nerves, and makes sleep refreshing and invigorating.

But if the person sleeps the wrong way and fails to become magnetically en rapport with the earth, he will then probably be too magnetic, and he will have a fever resulting from the magnetic forces working too fast, or he will not be magnetic enough, and the great strain will cause a feeling of lassitude, sleep will not be refreshing, and in the morning he will have no more energy than there is in a cake of soap.

Some persons may scoff at these ideas, but the greatest scientific men of the world have studied the subject. Only recently the French Academy of Science made experiments upon the body of a guillotined man which go to prove that each human system is in itself an electric battery, one electrode being represented by the head, the other by the feet.

The body was taken immediately after death and placed upon a pivot, to move as it might. After some vacillation the head portion turned toward the north, the body then remaining stationary. One of the professors turned it half way round, but it soon regained its original position, and the same result was repeatedly obtained until organic movements finally ceased.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THOMAS F. MARSHALL.

As Seen in His Prime and afterward When a Wreck.

I never saw Mr. Marshall but twice, once when he was in the meridian of his intellectual strength, the accomplished and magnetic orator, and again when he had fallen from his high estate to be the slave of intemperance, an object of painful commiseration.

A few days after the unsuccessful efforts made in the House in 1837 to pass a resolution of censure against John Quincy Adams for his temerity in presenting a petition from slaves, in which effort Mr. Marshall took a leading part, I happened to be seated with some Southern members of Congress at the dinner table of one of the Washington hotels when Mr. Marshall came in.

It seemed that Mr. Adams had said or done something that day which had irritated these gentlemen, and as Mr. Marshall was taking his seat at the table one of them exclaimed:

"Well, Marshall, the old devil has been at work again; you must take him in hand."

"Not I," replied Mr. Marshall, with a decisive shake of the head; "I have been gored once by the d——d old bull, and have had enough of him. If there is to be any more of this kind of work, it must be undertaken by somebody else. The old devil, as you call him, is a match for a score of such fellows as you and I."

Many years after I saw Mr. Marshall in Washington. He was pointed out to me in the Lake House, in Chicago, sitting upon a bench with the messenger boys, and talking to them incoherently—a mental and physical wreck.

He had joined temperance societies, and made temperance speeches equal to the best of Gough's, for, like Gough, he spoke from his own experience. His description of the terrible next morning following the night's debauch was as truthful and touching as it was graphic.

For months together he seemed to have conquered his enemy, a thirst for intoxicating drink, but its hold had become too strong to be overcome. He resolved, and re-resolved, and died the victim of alcohol.

I have known many victims of intemperance, but none who have fallen from so distinguished a position, whose ruin was so lamentable and complete.—H. McCulloch in Scribner's.

VARIETY IN LAUGHTER.

The Significance of Different Modes of Cachinnation.

An authority on laughter says with more or less reason:

It has been observed that laughter is indicative of a particular temper and character, according to the sound of the vowel that prevails in cachinnation.

Persons that laugh in a broad Latin "A" are open hearted, honest people, fond of noisy jocundity, but perhaps of voluble mood. Excessive jerking laughter, however, is an evidence of vulgarity. Those laughing in a dry "e" are respectable, but little expansive, and a hard lot of people.

When the Latin "E" prevails there prevails also a phlegmatic, melancholy temper.

Timorous, unsteady people, also those endued with malignity, lag in a kind of swelling "I."

Laughter in "O" is the utterance of proud, bold, imperious, somewhat bantering people.

Beware of those that laugh in "oo" tin. They are treacherous haters, scorners.

Cramped for Room.

Saturday night in Chicago is one of the busiest nights in the week.

"I say, my friend," remarked a policeman to a well-dressed woman resting his head against a curbstone, "don't you think a lamppost would be a little more respectable than this sort of thing?"

"S'help me God, officer," replied the citizen earnestly, "I tried seven lamp posts an' they all found 'em all occ'pied."

Sand To Run the Senate.

Senatorial five minute speeches are timed by an old fashioned time glass.

When a Senator at Washington begins his remarks the glass is turned so that the sands begin to run. When the last grain drops through the tiny opening the presiding officer's gavel descends, and the stream of eloquence is cut off short.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival in the business of A. Wright & Co's Drug Store as giving away to their customers so many free trial bottles of Dr. Kennedy's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply astonishing in this very valuable article and it always cures coughs, colds, incipient consumption, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and all diseases of throat, chest and lungs quickly and permanently. Call at their store and get a trial bottle free before buying, as you can then learn how well you will be satisfied by purchasing a regular size bottle which is warranted to do all that is claimed for it.

Curt Court Courtesies

"Judge," said the Montana lawyer as he leaned back in his chair and threw one foot up on the table, "I object to the witness answering that question, and I'm ready to argue the point. It stands to reason—"

"So will you, young man," roared the Judge, "if you've got any speech to make. Get up on your feet or I'll clap you into the calaboose for contempt of court."

And the young lawyer stood to reason.—Chicago Tribune.

He Wouldn't Be Swindled.

Mr. Byam Kegs (from Kalamazoo, with intense disgust) "Here, waiter, I ordered raw oysters. What on airth are those nasty black stones?"

Waiter (petrified)—"Oystahs, sah—on de haff shell, sah?"

Mr. Byam Kegs—"Half shell, is it? Oh, git out. I've eat 1,000,000 canned oysters out to me and never saw a shell on any one of them."—Puck.

CATARRH

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever, and Head Colds.

Small tubes are used to blow medicine into the nostrils that these diseases are caused by living parasites in the tubes and lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proven this to be a fact, and the only way to reach these parasites is blot a simple remedy which is mailed free by addressing Dr. Chas. Marchand, 31 Pine St., New York City.

Catarrh is a local disease, and can not be cured by blowing powders into the nose, or by the use of wash, douche, or syringe. Catarrh is a blood disease, and can be cured only by a constitutional remedy. Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane, and Dr. Marchand's Catarrh Powder is a specific for it. Sold by druggists, or sent by mail, one month's treatment, $1; three months' treatment, $3; one box, $1; three boxes, $2. Dr. Marchand's Catarrh Powder is sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Dr. Marchand's Catarrh Powder is a positive cure.

MESSRS. PROCTER & GAMBLE, CINCINNATI, O.

GENTLEMEN:—Although a stranger to you, and my testimonial entirely unnecessary, as it certainly is unsolicited, yet I take great pleasure in testifying to the excellence of your IVORY SOAP, and thanking you for putting it on the market at so low a price.

It has entirely supplanted the use of Castile and other fine soaps in my household for several years past, being in no way inferior and from fifty to seventy-five per cent. more economical.

A good test I find for the purity of a soap is to try it with a brush for cleansing the teeth, and the taste of the Ivory so used is perfectly sweet and clean.

Very Respectfully Yours, W. S. BAKER, M.D.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

WHEN JIM WAS DEAD.

"Hit served him right," the nabors sed,
An' cussed him for the life he'd led,
An' him a-lying thar at rest
With not a rose upon his breast!
Ah! mony cruel words they sed
When Jim was dead.

"Jes' killed hisself." "Too mean ter live."
They didn't hav' one word ter give
Of comfort as they hovered near
An' gazed on Jim a-lying there!
"Thar ain't no use ter talk," they sed
"He's better dead!"

But suddenly the room growed still,
Whil' God's white sunshine seemed to fill
The dark place with a gleam of life,
An' o'er the dead she bent—Jim's wife!
An' with her lips close, close to his,
As tho' he knew an' felt the kiss,
She sobbed—a touchin' sight ter see,

"Ah! Jim was always good ter me!
I tell you when that cum ter light
It kinder set the dead man right;
An' round the weepin' woman they
Throwed kindly arms of love that day,
And mingled with her own they shed
The tenderest tears—when Jim was dead.

THE DREAD OF DEATH.

Facing the Monster without Fear—Observations of a Writer Who Has Seen Many Persons Pass Away.

It is singular how small is the proportion of persons who have witnessed the closing scene of the human tragedy. Even physicians do not see their patients expire so frequently as would be thought. But what they see is sufficient to strip death of its consternations.

Their presence at the unmasking of the fancied monster prepares them for the inevitable. When their time comes they go at least resigned through the silent portal. They are no braver than others, but they have learned not to be scared at spectres.

Very few men, in truth, are afraid to die when the point comes. They do not, as may be supposed, relish it, and they are anxious as a rule, to live, so long as their chances are good and they do not suffer. When suffering grows acute their desire dwarfs (few of us but prefer death to pain), and when they lose hope they yield themselves without a murmur.

I have seen, I repeat, an extraordinary number of persons die, and my observations and experience contradict the theories and opinions on the subject. At first I was surprised at the evidence of my own senses; afterward I was convinced that they revealed the actual truth.

I remember, though but a small boy at the time, the first man who passed away before my eyes. He was patient, tranquil, philosophic, while conscious of his doom. I had expected him to be terrified, to perish in agony, and the circumstances made an indelible impression on my budding mind.

I have seen the last moments of delicate, highly nervous women who would shriek at the sight of a spider and who could not bear the mention of death. Any one who had known them would have thought that their closing scenes must have been distressing.

They longed to live in the beginning, but as they ebbed away and were conscious of the fact, peace and renunciation came to them. No hero of a hundred fights could have borne lingering illness and its end more serenely.

Women, weak and timid as they seem, horrified as they often are, at the grim monarch while remote, are calm and intrepid when he stands at their side. As he advances to see them they do not blanch or sigh or complain.

I have wondered how persons who had appeared to be afraid of everything would meet their fate, and yet they have met it with equal mind and becoming fortitude. —Junius Henri Browne, in Forum.

OATMEAL OR NOT OATMEAL?

An Attempt To Settle an Important Domestic Question.

You can get all the opinion you want on both sides of a question nowadays.

Oatmeal had not long been reputed to be a healthful food when some physician arose to deny it and to assert that it produced dyspepsia.

Allowance is always to be made in such a question for the variation of human stomachs and constitutions, so that what may be good food for one person may not be for another.

The truth about oatmeal for the generality of persons (and they are the only persons you can speak for) is that if it is eaten in only a partially cooked condition it is not healthful; and neither is flour, corn meal and many other articles of food.

Indigestion and acidity of stomach are caused for some people by the eating of sugar or other sweets on oatmeal, and they get the same effect if they eat these sweets on rice or bread. Cream, too, may be too much fat for a sensitive stomach if put on oatmeal. In these cases it is not the oatmeal, but either its insufficient preparation or the addition of an improper food, that causes the stomach trouble.

If a person will at a moderate amount of oatmeal cooked and prepared as his needs may demand, there can be no question that it is healthful, digestible and highly nutritious.

CARRYING THE CANE OR UMBRELLA.

A Chapter of Instruction for the Youthful and Aspiring Dude.

The accompanying will, I am confident, be of interest to my readers of the dude persuasion. It is a serious matter this carrying the cane or umbrella wisely and well.

It will be noted that the popular impression that a cane should be carried grasped with both hands and in a "present arms" position is erroneous.

It will also be seen that the elevation of the stick with out-bend so that the head comes in exact line with the mouth, thus presenting an easy solution of what is popularly known as "nursing the cane head" is equally wrong.

This from a man who is "over there" where he can see that of which he writes gives emphasis to his statement:

"Always carry an umbrella or a cane with a large head. But the manner of carrying these, that is the most important item of my article on 'form.'

"I have observed this very carefully, and all styles are proscribed but this one. Turn the head of your umbrella or cane to the rear as you bring it up to your side at right angles with your body, and seize hold of it about a foot from the end.

"Never take hold of it in the middle or allow the head to appear in front. You would be voted a hireling at once.

"When you get it in this position you can let loose with the old 'arms akimbo' English swing, and you have it all in a nutshell."—Toledo Journal.

OUR FAMILIAR FRIEND THE RAT.

The Original Home of This Useful and Troublesome Animal—Facts for Lovers of Natural History.

The black and brown rats are particularly deserving of notice, and are the most widely distributed over the world. It is not known where or how they were introduced into Europe first, but it must have been in recent times as the ancients did not know them.

They both appear to be natives of the central part of Asia. The brown rat found its way to Europe in the beginning of the eighteenth century, and reached Britain and the Western countries of Europe about the middle of that epoch.

The brown rat is larger and more powerful than the black rat, and they are deadly foes. The brown rat has succeeded in causing an almost total disappearance of the black rat in places where it was very numerous.

According to Mr. Rodewell's theory, the manner in which the brown rat has supplanted its black foe is by love instead of war. The browns being the stronger carry off the females of the blacks by force, and thus he accounts for the curious kind of parti-colored offspring which may be found in France.

These rats infest ships, and so are carried to the most distant parts of the world, some of them getting ashore at every port and establishing new colonies.

The black rat is nearly seven inches long, and the brown rat grows to be ten inches, with a tail eight inches long. Both species are extremely prolific, producing from ten to fourteen at a birth. When they are pressed by hunger they do not hesitate to devour the weaker of their kind.

The rat's never-failing appetite is especially useful in devouring animal and vegetable substances, the putrefaction of which would otherwise be productive of pestilence. It is said that the visits of the plague to Western Europe and Britain have ceased from the time when rats became plentiful.

Their sense of smell is very acute, so much so that ratcatchers are careful to glove their hands when setting their traps.

The professional ratcatcher in England wears a brass image of a rat as a sign of his business. The ways and means of catching them are a professional secret.

They procure them alive and sell them to ratpit keepers. These pitkeepers have a sort of hole where they let the rats loose and dogs are set on them. Crowds of boys and men pay to see this cruel sport.

The skin of rats is made into gloves in Paris, and in Siberia there is a field mouse that stores up such quantities of dried roots and other food to last through the long winter of that country that half-starved people there hunt their nests and carry off most of the food for their own use.

A troop of trained rats were exhibited some time ago, dressed like men and women. They walked on their hind legs and went through a sort of play, one act of which was to hang a cat and dance around the body.

CUSTOM-HOUSE INSPECTRESSES.

Women Who Make Female Smugglers Very Unhappy.

Passing the New York Sub-Treasury recently I noticed near the entrance a number of young women whose appearance was so peculiar that it immediately arrested my attention. If the young reader should ask me what that peculiarity was I could hardly explain it.

Perhaps it might be termed a free manner that indicated disregard for observation. They had a cool audacity which, though not brazen, was bold enough to face any opposition, and though I could see at a glance that they were not stage-players, yet it was evident that they were in public life, and could be at home even before a crowd.

I saw them step up to the cashier's window, where each presented a check and drew the money and then I learned that they were the Custom House inspectresses, who were collecting their month's pay.

No wonder they had such nonchalant, resolute faces! These are the women that coolly order a passenger into a private room and strip her sufficiently to reveal fraud. These are the women who find laces packed in bustles and diamonds concealed in tresses of hair, and I need hardly say that they are the terror of smugglers.

In a recent case they found a passenger wearing a petticoat that weighed twenty-five pounds, being made double so as to carry smuggled goods.

These inspectresses are among the most useful public servants and they have almost broken up the once extensive system of woman's smuggling which men could not do, for Shakespeare says, "to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offense."

OLD RUBBERS.

Despised Articles of Considerable Commercial Value.

The value of old rubbers of the first-class ranges from $50 to $100 a ton, delivered at the railway depot in the city of the buyer. Many retailers throw old rubbers away or sell them to junk men at one-half cent a pound (or $10 a ton), when, by uniting and saving them up, they could sell them to manufacturers at from five to ten times as much.

A number of manufacturing firms have issued a circular to the effect that in the future old rubber boots and shoes will be expected to be backed free from all other material, and no articles, hose or belting will be accepted. Leather and iron-bottomed boots will be taken at one-fourth price, arctics at one half price, hose at a very small price, while belting and clothing are of no value.

Gunny bagging, when used for the covering of bales, in fair quantities, will be paid for at the full price of shoes, while waste carpets or other material, or extra bagging used in baling, will be weighed out as tare. All printers' rolls, leather shoes, boots, rags, iron, dirt, etc., will be weighed out and deducted from the bill.

Retailers who can offer old rubbers in ton lots can sell to any manufacturer in the country, and at prices that will pay him to save his old rubbers.—St. Louis Leather Gazette.

A Literal Reading.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phœbe Chesley, Peterson, Cady Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lamened for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and now able to do all my own housework and owe my thanks to Electric Bitters. I having renewed my youth, and for moved completely all disease and pain."

An Unfinished Appearance.

A little girl was walking the other day with her governess.

They met a man with a club foot, at whom the child looked a little wonderingly as he passed and then laughed.

"You must not laugh at him," said the governess.

"Why not?"

"God made that man."

"Humph!" said the child, "it must have been the first man he made!"

Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic is not a stimulant but a nerve food, restoring nerve force lost by sickness or excessive mental work or the use of liquor, opium, morphine or tobacco. It supplies food for nerve tissues and by its gentle aperative action, removes all restraint from the secretive organs, hence curing all diseases of stomach and liver. Dr. Geo. Ferguson will supply the genuine Red Clover Tonic at 50 cents a bottle.

Great Cause for Gratitude.

"Madam, I have come to thank you," murmured a tramp to a Hawley street woman yesterday afternoon.

"What have I done for you?" asked the woman surprised.

"You refused to give me one of those dumplings you had for dinner yesterday."

"Yes, I remember," she replied impatiently.

"And you gave one to an old man who cleaned up your door-yard."

"True again. He was as industrious as you were lazy, and deserved it."

"Madam," continued the tramp solemnly, "I owe you my life. It killed him."—Binghampton Republican.

DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame, every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

The Ranch National spoken of in my last letter as being purchased by the Kimmel Brothers, is mostly valley and mesa land bordering on the bay for a distance of three miles or more, and seen in the dry season it appeared like a barren tract of land, except in the valleys, and here vegetation nearly all dried up. There was no water only by sinking wells, except from the winter rains—wells were deep and expensive to sink.

The Kimmels conceived the idea of utilizing the bay and harbor, by building towns and improving the land. They thought that most kinds of fruit could be successfully grown here, and they began experimenting and demonstrated the fact that most of the tropical and semi-tropical fruits would grow to perfection. Quite a number of pioneers came in and bought small tracts of land along the valleys and began raising fruit, but as water was necessary they had to dig wells and erect wind mills, and lay pipes, purchase trees, etc. As there was no rail roads they had to depend upon water transportation, which made a beginning expensive, but they persevered and have had their reward in seeing this comparatively barren wilderness "bud and blossom as the rose."

The Kimmels had the Ranch surveyed and a town site laid off. While surveying and running up the Sweetwater Valley they came to a narrow gorge or canyon, about six miles back from the bay, where the nearly perpendicular walls of solid rock rose over 100 feet high and was less than 20 feet apart at the base, and above the gorge the valley opened again extensively. Through this canyon ran the Sweetwater river, which after it left this canyon dried up and no water run after the winter rains ceased. In this narrow gorge Mr. Kimmel conceived the idea of constructing a dam to form a reservoir to hold the water for the purpose of irrigating this large tract of land. As they had no means of their own to carry out their project they labored to induce capitalists to come here and develop the recourses of this country, but without success until about six years ago; and now, after fifteen years of hard labor they find their efforts crowned with success in the building of the railroad, the building of two large cities, and the completion of one of the best, if not the best, water system there is in the whole country, and find themselves rich men.

About fifteen years ago, the Kimmels formed a company of such local capital as they had here, to develop this water project and to get a railroad built to the bay. They tried to induce capitalists to come here and build the road on the resorvoir. They thought they saw a great fortune for this section, but failed in their efforts to get capitalists to undertake the task. About six years ago, one of the Kimmels went to Boston and laid the matter before some Boston capitanists, and finally by offering them the bay port and 17,000 acres of land if they would build a railroad through the country and make this the terminal point, and locate their shops here, induced them to send out a man to investigate the matter, who was so favorably impressed of the feasibility of the plan and future prospects of this region, that he reported favorably and the contract was consummated, and the result has been the completion of the Santa Fe R. R. to this place and the completion of the water system.

The building of the Sweet Water dam was began Nov. 17, 1886, and completed April 7, 1888, at a cost, including the laying of the pipes, of over $1,000,000. The banks where the dam is built, is of solid rock from base to summit; the dam is built in the segment of a circle, the arch being up the stream; the rock banks were excavated so the ends of the dam could be built into them. The dam is 76 feet long and 46 feet thick at the base, and 390 feet long and 12 feet thick at the top and 96 feet high from the foundation. The reservoir forms a lake three miles long and three-fourths wide; it will hold water enough to cover 12,000 acres of land one foot deep. It receives the water from over 30 miles of watershed. It is estimated that there will be an abundance of water to supply Chula Vista, National City and the surrounding country with an abundance for both domestic and irrigation purposes. The water is under pressure; it has been tested through 200 feet of 2½ inch hose, with a ¾ inch nozzle, a stream was thrown 70 foot high; it was also tested with four streams at once, through 50 feet of hose and a ¾ in. nozzle each, with equal results. It was demonstrated that we had an efficient fire protection at an expense only for horse and appliances, the elevation of the reservoir above the town furnishes the pressure, the dam is over 7 miles from the terminus of the water supply. This is a gigantic enterprise carried to a successful completion.

There is one incident in connection with this work worthy of mention. A man named Pat Logan commenced the first day and worked until it was completed, He never lost a day and never drew a dollar of his wages, and when the work was done he had all his checks for his pay in his pockets. He was appointed keeper of the dam at a good salary in view of his faithfulness.

My next will contain an account of the improvements of the bay region, and will be followed with an account of the resources and productions of the county. A. D. STOCKING

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The second annual convention of the Lenawee county Sunday School Association was held in Hudson on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

About fifty delegates from the Sunday schools throughout the county were in attendence. The program was carried out as published in the HERALD, with one or two slight changes. All the sessions were interesting and well attended. One of the best papers presented was by C. A. Slayton, of Tecumseh, on the topic "How to interest church members in Sunday-school work." The address of Rev. W. K. Spencer, of Adrian, on "The divine call of the Sunday school teacher" was the leading address of the convention. A. L. Arner, of Raisin, read a carefully prepared paper on "Personal Preparation."

The following officers were elected:

President—Rev. A. B. Storms, Hudson.

Secretary—Rev. L. M. Belden, Raisin.

Asst. Sec.—P. S. M. Kinsey, Tecumseh.

A vice-president for each township was elected. In this part of the county are:—

L. G. North—Tecumseh.
A. L. Arner, Raisin.
W. S. Kimball, Clinton.
J. W. Baker, Macon.
M. D. Alexander, Franklin.

The next session will be held at Weston at such a time as the executive committee may appoint.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The Farmers Union met at H. B. Eaton's, Nov. 30. There was a large attendence and a very pleasant evening was spent. The election of officers resulted as follows:—

President—Minor Davidson.
Vice Pres.—Will Raymond.
Sec. and Treas.—Emma Brown.

The next meeting was appointed at M. Smeltzer's, Friday evening, Dec. 14th. Program—

Song—Mrs. Edwin Taft.
Select Reading—Mrs. Blood.
Song—Mary Me Intyre.
Dec.—Bert Comfort.
Inst. Music—Hettie Cadmus.
Rec.—Mollie Rappleye.
Dialogue—
Music—John Van Vleet and Jared.
Debate—Resolved, That woman suffrage would be beneficial to the United States.

Aff., Mrs. Smeltzer, Mrs. Blood and Mrs. Eaton. Neg., W. F. Raymond, M. Smeltzer, B. F. De Puy and others. All are cordially invited.

A Valuable Offer.

The American Poultry Journal is the leading publication of its class in America. It is about to begin its 20th volume. Farmers will find it of great profit to read the Journal and farmers' wives and children can learn how to make "pin money" by raising fowls for market. We club with this remarkable monthly at $2.00 per year. Each subscriber to the Journal will receive a valuable premium free; either a sample of American Poultry Food to keep fowls healthy and make them lay in winter, or the Poulterer's Guide, the best book on diseases of fowls yet issued. Send your orders at once and secure the Journal before winter. It may prevent the loss of many fowls by telling you how to protect them.

TO OUR READERS.

We can not too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family weekly newspaper of the first class—such for instance, as The Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for steady and careful reading to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly the Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine and review, all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 21 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, condition or employment may be, The Independent will prove an instructor, a help, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal card for a free sample copy, or for thirty cents the paper will be sent one month enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

Destroying Weeds.

One of the uncertain factors in butter making is the special influence of the weeds in our pastures. In some cases so called weeds may impart a fine aromatic flavor as in certain Swedish and Norwegian as well as in Swiss alpine pastures, but as a rule the effect is injurious. For this reason the BUREAU OF DAIRY INFORMATION prints the following article from the "Country Gentleman," and hopes the readers will scan it carefully and act upon it when the time of action arrives.

The philosophy as well as the practice of the best modes for destroying the weeds which interfere with the growth of farm and garden crops, is imperfectly understood by too many cultivators. A common course largely pursued is to waight until the weeds have grown several inches high, and then to attack them with plow, hoe harrow. Sometimes they are allowed to ripen seeds, and thus to provide for an abundant new crop another season, even when destroyed for the present year. But intelligent farmers and gardeners have learned a better way. They have found by theory and practice that young weeds are far more easily exterminated, when as yet they are nothing but tender white sprouts just ready to reach the surface, then after they have acquired large and tough stems and branches; and the farm and garden crops make a much better growth with nothing but clean and yellow soil to grow in, than when smothered with a dense mass of weeds. Pulverizing the surface frequently, and thus keeping it constantly clean, is found to be much cheaper than struggling against a horde of strong foreigners which already have possession. This work is accomplished by the use of the labor saving tools. The slant-tooth harrow with its numerous fine teeth, repeatedly used at the right time to a day, makes an easy and wholesome destruction of the sprouting seeds, the cultivated crop having already grown sufficiently to be uninjured by the passing teeth, whether it be in the young corn field, the potato patch, or in the wheat or oats. The same result is reached by the use of the steel rake in the garden.

The common rule, that all weeds may be destroyed if some months they are not allowed to breathe through their leaves, is a good one, and continued cultivation to keep them constantly under the soil will, therefore, extirpate them. It is, of course, quite necessary, that no intervening respite, even of a single day, be given them at any time, or they will recover their loss. But different weeds require unlike treatment. Annual weeds, which multiply by the million through their seeds, and in no other way, are to be met in a different manner from creeping rooted perennials. Weeds with large seeds will sprout when buried at a greater depth than minutte ones. Stirring the soil will therefore reach them at a greater depth, and a foul soil filled with them will be more quickly cleansed by cultivation than when infested with fine seeds. The latter will not sprout unless brought quite near the surface, and the operation must, therefore, be repeated many times to get them all out. This is the reason that successive seasons are often required to cleanse foul land. Plowing will not eradicate them, for a very heavy furrow-slice only turns under again what ought to come to the shallow surface. Repeated surface stirring in connection with plowing is necessary. It is the small seeds of the purslane which render this weed so difficult to eradicate; and although only an annual, it will retain possession of the ground for years. Its seeds are produced in vast numbers, and when the plants are cut up and carried away, they drop enough for an abundant growth another season, and the soil thus becomes thoroughly infested. The difficulty is increased by its tenacity of life, and simply cutting the stems does not kill it.

Perennial rooted running weeds, which increase chiefly under ground, and which the scythe or mower prevents from dropping their seeds, like quack grass or Canada thistles, are not to be treated with this fine surface work, but they may be taken in hand with the plow or coarse harrow and cut and buried at several inches depth, to prevent the stems and leaves from reaching the light. Canada thistles, for example, if merely cut above the top of the ground, will spring up in a few days with all their vigor, but if turned under well with the plow, they will require some weeks to reach the light, and successive plowings to keep them constantly smothered will finish the work. Quack grass requires both plow and harrow, and more unremitting treatment.

Annual weeds increase and spread chiefly in cultivated ground; perennials and creeping weeds mostly in meadows and pastures. Some of the latter are crowded out by a dense growth of grass and clover, but with most of them it becomes necessary to plow the ground and to treat them as already mentioned.

Much labor may be saved, and much disappointment prevented in attemps to eradicate weeds, by studying the character of the different classes, and soils may be more easily and thoroughly cleansed of foul stuff by understanding appropriate modes of treating them.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh.

J. J. Orr, the druggist, has on hand and will keep the celebrated Indian Pill, manufacured by Dr. R. MacFarland, Genoa, O. This is the Pill that cures sick headache and headache of all kinds; also constipation and costiveness, and for one failure we will give $100. We can tell you more: this pill cures rheumatism, sciatic and chronic inflammatory; all stomach diseases yield to this wonderful discovery. Paralysis is prevented and dropsy cured by this pill. The high standard of excellency in this medicine is the result of years of hard study and experience in these diseases by the eminent Dr. MacFarland. Price $1 a box, 50 pills in a box. Dose, one pill on going to bed. J. J. Orr, keeps them. Tecumseh Mich.

Southrons Visit Harrison.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 4.—A distinguished party of southern gentlemen was here yesterday to see Gen. Harrison. The party included Gen. James Longstreet, the distinguished ex-Confederate soldier; E. A. Angier, an attorney, and A. Angier, of the general passenger department of the Western & Atlantic railroad, all the gentlemen being residents of Atlanta, Ga. Gen. Longstreet, though 69 years of age, bears up well. When asked for his views on the southern question he said: "Now, young man, please don't. There is not the least bit of political significance in our visit. I can tell you this much, though," laughed the general, "the south wants everything. It wants the earth—if it can get it. But it wants, more than anything else, a good, honest, and friendly spirit manifested toward it. We want to be treated kindly and considerately."

Secession in the Colonies.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—[Copyright.]—The colonial question has come up in connection with the appointment of a governor for Queensland, the colonists exhibiting a determination to have something to say in the matter. The Times bitterly oppose the appointment of Sir Henry Norman, and says it believes that the Queensland colonists are more than ever anxious to secede from the empire, and questions the wisdom of continuing to allow them the liberty they have hitherto enjoyed.

A Bishop Opposes Boycotting.

DUBLIN, Dec. 4.—Bishop O'Dwyer, of Limerick, has intimated that unless the boycotting of a man named Ryan for taking an evicted farm shall cease he will close the church of the parish in which the farm is located, and suspend all masses, sacraments, and burials.

The Trouble with John Bright.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—[Copyright.]—John Bright is suffering from a complication of Bright's disease and diabetes. There is a copious formation of sugar in his blood, and it feared by his physicians that he will ultimately fall a victim to dropsy.

He Astonished the Prussians.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—Mr. Ira Payne, the American pistol shot, gave an exhibition of his skill Monday before a select party of Prussian military officers, using pistols of American design and manufacture. The exhibition evoked expressions of wonder.

Death of an Irish Revolutionist.

BOSTON, Dec. 4.—Corporal Thomas Chambers, the famous Irish revolutionist, died here Sunday at the Carney hospital, aged about 48. He was a native of Kilkenny, Ireland. From his boyhood he was a rebel against England's rule of Ireland.

COUGH! and COUGH! and COUGH!!

What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. J. J. ORR, Druggist.

PASSED AWAY.

The following obituary notice is taken from the Ketchum Keystone of Idaho.

Mrs. Roxana L. Powers, wife of the late William R. Powers, D. D., and mother of Mrs. A. J. Pinkham of Ketchum, passed from our midst Thursday morning, November 22d. Mrs. Powers was born at Elbridge, Onondaga county, N. Y., and was in her 66th year at the time of her decease. She came among us some two years and a half ago, and in that time she has endeared herself to all who came in contact with her by the quiet loveliness of her character. The active part of her married life was mainly spent at Mattoon, Ill., where her husband, who was a clergyman and an accomplished scholar, died thirteen years ago, and where she was known and loved for her amiability and charity, for which traits she was especially noted. Her bereaved daughter and friends have the sympathy of our community in their loss. The funeral took place yesterday at the residence of her son in-law, Major A. J. Pinkham, and was quite largely attended. Rev. George Ritchie officiated, assistance by Rev. F. K. Gillette.

A Good Scheme.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. have appointed a committee to get up a Fair for the benefit of the Miners' and Lumbermens' fund. This is an important feature of the W. C. T. U. work. Mrs. N. M. Sutton, of Tecumseh, is district president of this department, and earnestly desires all Unions to take active interest in the work. Good literature is wanted to send to the lumbermen. If Unions can do no more, they can each buy one copy of "Temperance Work of the World," and send into the lumber camps. Save your temperance papers and send them also. A young man from one of the camps of the Northern Peninsula told the writer that the men would read anything they could get in the camps.—The Lance.

OBITUARY.

Sarah, wife of Jacob G. Roberts died at her residence on the morning of November 29. Aged 81 years.

Mrs. Roberts was born in Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y. and at the age of 7 years removed with her parents to Groveland, Livingston county, in the same state; where she was married to Jacob G. Roberts Oct. 24, 1832, living in the same county until her removal to Tecumseh in 1854, celebrating with their children and grand-children the 55th anniversary of their marriage on Oct. 24, 1888. She was a woman who possessed a mind of more than ordinary wealth, but retiring in her habits; and but few knew her excellence of character. She was a faithful wife, a loving mother and a true friend; and although the years of her life were more than is alotted to many, her death leaves those who loved her under the shadow of a deep sorrow.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Winter came in like a lamb.

F. E. Smallidge is now agent for the Detroit Sunday Sun.

Clara Waldron was home from Ypsilanti to spend thanksgiving.

D. C. LeBaron of Toledo, ate Thanksgiving turkey with his Tecumseh friends.

Birdsall, Glenn & Co., have put up some shelving in their market, which will be used for canned goods.

Geo. and Henry Wissing, who went on a trip to Wisconsin last fall, have returned to their home in Newburg.

Al Heesen, who clerks at Adamson's, is becoming an expert engraver on silverware. He has executed some very handsome jobs lately.

Minnie Wescott closed her school Nov. 23d., in fractional Dist. No. 1, Raisin, and as she has given satisfaction will teach the winter term which begins Dec. 10.

Elliott Gray returned last week from the North woods. He was troubled with a lame foot most of the time and hence his detours from camp were short and few. The party with whom he went killed ten deer and a large amount of smaller game.

We call attention to the card elsewhere of Galbraith Bros. of Janesville, Wis., importers of the celebrated Clydesdale horses. To any person sending his address, they will forward by mail a copy of their discriptive pamphlet.

The young people of the M. E. church will give a social Friday evening, Dec. 7. Supper will be served from 5 to 7:30, for 15cts., the proceeds to be used toward carpeting the lecture room. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

About thirty friends and neighbors gave Mrs. Aaron Aten a complete surprise, Saturday evening. She was well remembered with presents, for which she wishes to return to them her heart felt thanks for their kind remembrance.

The landlord of the Lilley House served a sumptuous dinner on Thanksgiving Day. A large number of village guests partook of the feast and it was thoroughly enjoyed by the participants. "Mine host" Patterson is a host on such special occasions.

The Ladies Library Association is in need of a building. One of our well-to-do citizens has offered to start a subscription paper for that purpose with a liberal donation. The enterprise ought to be pushed ahead at once.

Levi Bowen of Franklin, has seven acres of celery land on his farm and has grown some fine samples of the plant this season. A bunch of his raising was distributed among the HERALD boys the other day to good advantage.

The Holiday supplement which we send out this week is the finest extra sheet ever issued from the HERALD office. We doubt whether it has ever been excelled in the county.

Every lady wants to know what to wear and how to make it. Godey's Lady's Book tells all that, and much more. The December number is peculiarly rich, both with illustrations and literary matter; fashions, stories, poetry, shopping hints, and all that a refined and practical lady wants to know.

Hon. A. L. Milliard, Capt. Fred Wood, of Tecumseh, and Mr. John Bird, of this city, have formed a new law "trust" under the firm of Millard, Wood & Bird, and will commence operations Dec. 1, in the rooms over the post-office lately occupied by Bean & Lane. Our people extend to Capt. Wood a hearty welcome to the county seat, and The Times assures him that he will be treated well.—Adrian Times.

"The Highest Type of Life"—subject of sermon for Sunday morning, Dec. 9th, at 10:30 at the Universalist church. In the evening at 7 o'clock, the Warden of the State Prison, Mr. H. F. Hatch, will speak on Reformatory Work and Method in Prisons. We urge the people of this community to attend and hear Capt. Hatch's earnest word. We think your hearts will be touched and you will the better see what holy work that is for all to do, to bring in the better day of the divine good, love and victory.

The next meeting of the farmers' Social Club will be held at I. H. Schreder's, Tuesday evening, Dec. 11. Program—

Vocal music by the club.
Rec.—Grace Gillespie.
Essay—Ellen Fisher.
Music—Grant Schreder and Henry Horton.
Select Reading—Mrs. Scott Remmington.
Charade—Will Fisher, Eva Rector and Clara Farley.
Question—Resolved: That the collecting of farm statistics by the supervisors of the various townships, as now required by law, is of no practical value to the farmers, and the law should be repealed as a useless expense.

Jim Cummins was in Tecumseh last week.

Geo. Kies, of Elkhart, was in town yesterday.

A nice snow fell yesterday but not enough of it.

O. P. Bills spent Thanksgiving at St. Louis, Mich.

Walt Fowler spent Thanksgiving with Tecumseh friends.

Michael Wilson has gone to Grayling to visit his children.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Dewolt returned from Detroit Wednesday.

The President's message appears in full in our supplement sheet this week.

Henry Durling of Jackson was in town yesterday and to-day visiting friends.

J. S. Kies of Clinton was shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends this morning.

Mrs. Henry Keyser and Miss Chatterdon visited friends in Adrian yesterday.

Henry Mensing has removed back to Tecumseh and will take up his abode among us.

Harry Stevens went to Detroit Tuesday, expects to hold a position in D. M. Ferry's seed house.

Will Anderson is shipping large quantities of his "Creamery Rose" butter to Chattanooga Tenn.

V. J. Woodard is making arrangements for running an ice skating rink in connection with his toboggan slide this winter.

On Wed. Nov. 21st. Mr. David Blood of Leslie and Mrs. Miriam Taylor formerly of Macon, were married at the home of Mrs. Thomas Smith, daughter of the bride.

Ell Gray returned from his shooting expedition in the northern part of the State last Thursday. He walks rather lame in consequence of having a tussle with a b'ar.

D. P. and W. H. Spaulding of Tecumseh are engaged in roofing the new block at Britton, with tin; they are good reliable workmen and our Britton friends seem to know it.

In the Chicago Evening Journal of Nov. 30th, is a list of probable appointees under the new administration. Among those mentioned for pension agent is Mrs. Minerva K. Elliott, nee Minnie Spaulding of this village. The present pension agent at Chicago is a Mrs. Mulligan.

The kind invitation extended by the Macon Grange to dine with them today is reluctantly declined. Thursday is our "press day" and even a good dinner cannot entice us away from home on that day. We shall expect some of the brethren to send in a good report next week.

J. W. Wightman, who has been practising law recently at Morenci has taken up his residence in Tecumseh and will occupy the rooms just vacated by Capt. Wood. His reputation as a legal practitioner is good and we bespeak for him as liberal a patronage as the peaceful character of our community will afford.

The regular monthly Mother's Meeting of the W. C. T. U. will convene in parlor no 1 of the M. E. Church on Friday at 3 o'clock P.M. An interesting programe was prepared by the Superintendent Mrs. N. R. Merritt. All mothers and women interested in child culture are earnestly invited to be present.

Thanksgiving was very generally observed in Tecumseh last Thursday; nearly all the business houses were closed during the day, and the shops were shut down. Services were held at the Baptist Church in the morning and a fine discourse was given by Rev. J. S. Joslin. People gave themselves up to the pleasure and festivities of the day.

We had a pleasant visit with Wm. DeMott, at his home the other evening and confess to our surprise at the extent of his life insurance business. He represents a district of several counties for the Northwestern Mutual Life of Milwaukee, and his list of policy holders is constantly increasing. The strange thing is that some of our accomplished young ladies don't make an impression upon him.

A call at M. P. Brown's gallery the other day was well spent in examining the samples of pianos and organs which he now has for sale from the house of Whitney and Currier, of Toledo. The Boardman and Gray Pianos and the Cottage organs are not excelled by any instrument made and they ought to find sale in this vicinity. Mr. Brown is also to rush the "photo" business for the holiday trade.

Last Sunday four adults and two children crossed the trestle bridge of the Mackinaw road on foot. While on the bridge an extra freight came along and they barely escaped being caught on the bridge. It is a hazardous piece of business crossing a lengthy railroad bridge at any time. One is liable to become dizzy and fall, or to be caught by a passing train. We venture to say that the persons who had the escape last Sunday will hardly care to repeat the experiment.

Mrs. E. A. Tribou went to Detroit Tuesday morning.

The ladies of this village are organizing a musicale society.

Charlie Eldridge and family visited Adrian friends over Sunday.

Walter Kinney and wife went to Battle Creek to eat Thanksgiving turkey.

Over 80,000 pounds of celery were shipped by the U. S. Express Co. alone during the month of November.

Settle up—All persons indebted to B. S. Scudder will please call and settle their accounts before Jan. 1st.
B. S. SCUDDER, Macon.

Ernest Gamble started yesterday morning to take his mail route. He will run between Cleveland and Chicago.

Tom L. Hilton, representing the Richmond & Backus Co., of Detroit, was in town to-day in the interest of his firm.

The school board have had a large number of library and school books rebound and also intend having a new unabridged dictionary in each room of the high school.

Owing to the extra work involved in issuing our holiday extra, we are compelled to defer until next week an obituary notice and considerable other local matter.

The Ridgeway and Macon Telegraph Co. have engaged R. J. W. Bowen to manage their line and their wire will soon be in working order and remain so under his efficient management.

The Lilley House was the scene of a quiet wedding party yesterday forenoon. Mr. Thos. Moffett, the clerk of the Hotel was married to Miss Ellen Riley, one of the lady employees, by Rev. J. M. Getchell. Mr. Moffett is setting up the cigars to-day. The event will cause no change in the Hotel force, as both parties will retain their old positions. The HERALD extends its congratulations.

An old Tecumseh boy has been heard from since election. Lew Mathewson, a former resident of these "diggins" has been holding down the official chair of the post office at Avoca, N. Y., but since Cleveland's election he desires some republican to cover the chair, and on the night of the ratification in that place he posted up conspicuously the following official notice: "No snivel service here, come and get your post office."

A NEW FIRM FOR CHRISTMAS.

At the old corner store in the Lilley House block the new firm of Adamson Bros. and Santa Claus announce that they are headquarters for everything in the line of Christmas presents for the season 1888-89. Come one and all and see their large display of new goods arriving daily. The store will be open until eleven o'clock every week day evening until Jan 1st.

They wish to show their patrons and friends the largest stock of watches, clocks, jewelry and novelties ever on exhibition in Lenawee county, all of which must be sold by Jan. 1st. Watches, from the finest Howard to a cheap Waterbury. Clocks, from a marble mantel to a nickle timepiece.

Everything in the line of Christmas goods, and all at prices lower than ever before offered in Tecumseh.
Adamson Bros.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

We have this day taken posession of the brick planing mill formerly occupied by the Ohio & Mich. Coal and Mfg. Co. and are now prepared to do all kinds of planing, matching, turning, sawing and general custom work. We are also prepared to manufacture for wholesale and retail, all kinds of sash doors and blinds and almost everything that is made of wood. We cordially invite everybody to come and you will be treated squarely and can have goods as cheap as can be afforded. The Tecumseh Coal & Mfg. Co., S. W. & C. W. TEMPLE, Managers.

Attention G. A. R.

The annual election of officers of Beers Post occurs Dec 7. A full attendence of the members are requested to be present. Aside from the election of officers, important business will come before the Post to be acted upon. Let us have a full Post on that evening.

COUNTY W. C. T. U.

Report of the Eleventh Annual Convention.

The Lenawee County W. C. T. U. met in its eleventh annual convention at Blissfield, Wednesday evening, Nov. 20th, at 7 P. M. The convention was called to order by Mrs. Louise Casey, the president, and devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Rowley, of Morenci. "The Loyal Temperance Legion," numbering some 50 strong, marched to the front part of the room carrying aloft a banner giving "Welcome to the W. C. T. U." after which they rendered some fine and appropriate songs. Mrs. J. R. Carpenter gave a fine address of welcome, to which Mrs. Beck, of Tecumseh, responded in fitting and appropriate terms. Then followed the address of the president, which was well rendered and thoroughly bristled with telling points. Among other things she urged the ladies to wear the ribbon and subscribe for the Union Signal and Lance. Mrs. G. S. Bradley, of Hudson, read an excellent and carefully prepared paper on W. C. T. U. work. Miss Lottie Lamb, of Blissfield, recited "Two Glasses," in an excellent manner. Mrs Stannard, district president, urged a liberal collection and over $7.00 was received. Mrs. Helen Goff, in behalf of the young ladies of Blissfield, presented the convention with a basket of small boquets for the members. Miss Belle Rhodes gave a recitation entitled "The Empty Keys," after which the convention adjourned until Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY MORNING SESSION.

The morning session convened at 8:30, Mrs. Stannard leading the devotional exercises. When the president called the meeting to order it was found all the Unions in the county were represented by delegates but Britton. Mrs. Bartholomew and Mrs. Amy W. Jones were appointed a committee on credentials. Mrs. Mary C. Wood, Miss Hattie Johnson and Mrs. Bradley were appointed a committee on resolutions. The report of Miss Mattie Barber, secretary, was next read and adopted. There are twelve unions in the county and 426 members. Mrs. Edna Greene, the treasurer reported that the receipts for the past year were $31.25, expenditures, $5.07, leaving a balance on hand of $26.18. The annual report of local unions was next in order. Mrs. Turner, of Adrian, reporting the membership 73, a gain of 11 the past year, receipts $882.92, disbursements, $748.48, and that $100 was sent to the Temperance Temple. Addison reported by Mrs. Martin, 40 members, and all dues have been paid. Britton has 23 members, but no delegate was present. Blissfield reported by Mrs. Joel Carpenter, with 53 members, and have a mothers' meeting and Band of Hope. Mrs. Gay reported 21 members Hudson, and receipts $72.76. Morenci reported by Mrs. Green, 22 members and receipts $38.60. Mrs. V. Rowley reported for Rollin, which was only organized in October, 22 members. Tecumseh reported, through Mrs. Stewart, membership of 40, and raised the past year $199.54, and paid out $96.15. The "Y's" of Adrian, reported by Miss Adams, and have 45 regular and 21 honorary members. Mrs. Charles Gove reported 23 members for Ridgeway. Raisin Valley was reported by Miss May Cornelius, and raised $56 the past year. Mrs. J. A. Rogers reported Lenawee Junction as having 20 members, and receipts for the year $28.21.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

The convention met at 1:30 P. M. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. G. S. Bradley. Reports from superintendents were continued and various plans and suggestions discussed relative to scientific instruction, work among lumbermen, kindergarten work, &c. Mrs. Humphrey, superintendent of flower missions, made one of the best reports ever given in this department.

The election of officers followed, with Mrs. W. W. Goff in the chair. Misses Hattie Johnson and May Cornelius were made tellers and the secretary announced 45 voting delegates present. Mrs Louise Casey was unanimously elected president; Mrs. Susan Cone, corresponding secretary; Miss Mattie Barber, recording secretary; Mrs. Edna Green, treasurer.

Mrs. Wood, Chairman of the Committee, read, and the convention unanimously adopted the following

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That in the future as in the past, we rely on the aid and seek the blessings of our Heavenly Father upon all our work for the uplifting of humanity, and having full faith that He is ever on the side of the right and justice, we therefore renew our zeal in the temperance work and reaffirm our loyalty to the W. C. T. U. and pledge ourselves anew to aid as far as possible its various lines of work.

Resolved, That we endorse the first resolution adopted at the last county convention which is as follows:

Resolved, That we, as members of the W. C. T. U., remain uncompromising on the subject of absolute prohibition, and will do all to our power to secure this result.

Resolved, That since our cause is just and right, and must eventually prevail, we will continue to pray and work with [illegible] earnestness and patience, but strive [illegible] possible, that out [illegible] bitterness in the hearts [illegible] those who believe differently from what we do in the way of accomplishing the desired end.

Resolved, That we urge upon our local unions special work among mothers, either by holding mothers' meetings regularly, or by visitation, the organization of Y unions wherever practicable, and where it is not, hold meetings statedly to address young ladies upon all questions pertaining to Social Purity, temperance and right living, and we especially emphasize the work among children.

Resolved, That as a county convention we hold ourselves unalterably opposed to the use and sale of all narcotics, and as far as in us lies, will in the future use all laudable endeavors for their suppression and that we are in full accord with the State Union and will do our share in the petitioning the next legislature for a law prohibiting the sale of cigarettes and tobacco to minors.

Resolved, That as heretofore we have nearly all deemed the use of alcohol necessary, both as a medicine and in the preparation of essences, and realizing that in its use thus, we have found it the foe of temperance, we do hereby acknowledge the importance and the great benefit conferred upon the world by the work of the Women's Temperance Hospital, of Chicago, and we recommend it to the hearty support of our unions.

Resolved, That in "The Lance," published in Adrian, we recognize an able and effective ally in our work in this county, and we pledge to it our patronage and earnest support.

Resolved, That we extend to the people of Blissfield our sincere thanks for the generous hospitality we have received at their homes and in their churches, to the Loyal Temperance Legion for their part in the entertainment of Tuesday evening, to the young ladies for the beautiful boquets contributed and to all others who helped to make this convention a success.

On behalf of the Committee

A PHILANTHROPIC DOMINIE.

He Forced Other People To Be Liberal.

If he had been anybody but a minister of the Gospel, one of the qualities of the late Rev. H. G. Storer, who labored for many years in the towns of Washington County, Me., would be called "nerve," in these slangy days.

He was most zealous and successful in works of benevolence, and when he wanted a brother's contribution the brother had to shell out.

He asked nobody to do more than he would do himself, however. He was in the habit of visiting families where he suspected there was destitution, and if he could not understand the state of the larder by making inquiries he would walk into the kitchen or pantry and inspect the flour barrel himself.

Whatever portion of his salary remained after his private expenses were met he distributed among the worthy poor of his charge.

And when he had nothing left of his own to give he would sometimes go to the grocery kept by his wealthiest deacon and order perhaps a barrel of flour sent to a certain family, and when it had been delivered he would say, in his inimitable and unanswerable manner:

"Deacon, you just charge that flour to the Lord."—Lewiston Journal.

ODD MARRIAGE CUSTOM.

One Not Without Its Dangers and Inconveniences.

A curious old mariage custom, which is still widely prevalent in Brittany, was recently interpreted in a novel and amusing manner.

According to the custom, the bridegroom, immediately after the priest had wedded the couple, strikes his wife in the face, saying:

"This is how you will fare if you make me angry," and then, kissing her, he says:

"This is how you will fare if you treat me well."

A short time ago a young Breton married a German girl, and after the ceremony was over began at once to practice the first part of the time honored custom. The bride, who was ignorant of the "inner meaning" of what she considered an insult, turned round on her lord and master and returned the stroke, saying:

"Look here, I do not approve of such behavior," after which the husband is said to have performed the second part of the ceremoney with more than usual affection.—Boston Gazette.

A LITTLE GIRL'S QUAINT LETTER.

The Funny Reason Why It Is Not Longer.

The following was received recently by an eminent Sunday-school worker in New York:

Mr.———.

My dear Friend. I donot feel very well to day. I am very sorry that I am not able to go to Sunday school. for I love to go and I have a very nice teacher now but I think I will not have her long for she acts if She was going to get married in a little while. our Sunday School is going to have a fair on Tuesday Wednesday & Thursday. The children are going to have exercises in which we all take part. I have read twelve chapters in my little testament.

I am very happy because I love the lord. How are your family? My pen is poor my ink is pale my hand shakes like a monkey's tail. Good by. I must close my letter now.

Your friend Willetha F———.

No Longer Alone in the World.

"Yes," said Smith, "it is a cheerless thing to be left alone in the world. I was left an orphan and without a single relation to whom I could look for sympathy in affliction. But the world is brighter now. I have seven sisters.

"Seven sisters!" exclaimed Jones. "I thought you said you hadn't a single relation in the world."

"I hadn't a few years ago, but I have seven sisters now. I've been rejected by seven girls."—Boston Courier.

Dunning the Doctor.

Office Boy—"Please, sir, here's a man to see you."

Impecunious Doctor—"Healthy man?"

Office Boy—"Very much healthy. Got something in his hand looks like a bill."

Impecunious Doctor (struck with a brilliant idea)—"Let him come in. I'll give him 50 cents on account; he will faint, and I'll charge him $2 for reviving him."—Time.

Ghost and Bullet.

That ghost which haunted a New Hampshire sawmill turned out to be a young woman who used to go spooning around there to imagine that she was in a ruined castle on the Rhine.

After a bullet fired by a constable whizzed by her ear she imagined that she had better get out and give up.—Detroit Free Press.

Revenge Is Sweet.

"My dear boy," said a mother to her son as he handed round his plate for more turkey, "this is the fourth time you've been helped."

"I know, mother," replied the boy, "but that turkey pecked me once and I want to get square with him."

He got his turkey.—San Francisco Wasp.

A Gallant Newspaper.

It is unkindly suggested that women clerks are not only more honest than the men, but that they are too timid to steal.

In that case it is a pity that the same sort of fear doesn't pervade the sterner sex more generally. It is a rather creditable trait.—Boston Herald.

Be Fair to Yourself.

There is no harm in a moderate amount of self-congratulation, provided there is good ground for it.

It isn't wrong to be pleased with ourselves if the imagination doesn't get the better of the judgment.—San Antonio (Texas) Times.

Their Pretty Little "Squabble."

Few are the lady acquaintances who can take a ride on a street car without a pretty little "squabble" about which pays the fares.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Still Another Word Infliction.

"Pastoration," supposed to mean the settlement of a pastor in a new charge, is the latest word that the West afflicts us with.—Springfield Republican.

THE FASCINATING CIRCUS.

Mechanical Precision of Horse and Rider.

The fixed dimensions of the arena comply with a two-fold exigence—the requirements of the man and the habits of the animal.

Both are inveterate wanderers from town to town. Wherever they go they carry with them an absolute identity of movement, which secures for an exercise its mathematical and mechanical precision.

Neither the horse, and probably his riders, know centripetal and centrifugal forces, even by name; but practice enables them to measure those forces accurately and to keep them in exact equilibrium with their speed.

In circuses of invariable dimensions, the artists, biped and quadruped, are everywhere at home. On the same identical extent of sand or sawdust, a false movement is never made by experienced performers.

The horse knows his business and fulfills it without hesitation; he is not put out by having to act his part under unaccustomed conditions. And he is proud of having acted it well.

There are horses who take all the applause for themselves, and want to treat the public to an encore before it is asked for. The rider may urge them to make their exit; they will strive to linger before their admirers a little longer.

CIGARETTE PAPERS.

What the Boy-Killer Is Wrapped In.

Paper for cigarettes is made from cotton and linen and from rice straw, and is largely of foreign manufacture. Cotton paper is used in the cheapest and most poisonous grades of cigarettes, and is so cheap that the wrappers for a thousand cotton paper cigarettes cost only two cents. Rice paper is the choicest and most costly.

Tobacconized paper is made by saturating paper with an infusion of tobacco and pressing it in such a way as to produce an imitation of the veins of the tobacco leaf. Some use has been made of the fibre of the stalks of the tobacco plant in producing a paper for all-tobacco cigarettes.

The lime and other substances used in bleaching cotton and other rags for cigarette papers have a very harmful influence upon the membrane of the throat and nose. Arsenical preparations are also used in bleaching cigarette papers and oil of creosote is produced naturally as a consequence of combustion.

This is very injurious to the throat and lungs and is said to accelerate the development of consumption in anyone predisposed to the disease.

PUTTING HIM OFF.

What a Maiden's Wit Is Capable of.

"Yes, dear, I love you; but please don't be so impatient. It would be ridiculous to set our wedding day so soon."

Engaged youth—"But why?"

"You must remember that a marriage is a great and solemn event in a woman's life, and should be celebrated by a grand wedding, with everything perfectly lovely and six beautiful bridesmaids."

"All right, You can have a dozen if you wish."

"What a darling you are! Well, that's why I want to wait. Bridesmaids are out of style now, but Mrs. Society says the fashion will be revived in three or four years."—Philadelphia Record.

THE CHRISTIAN'S BADGES.

He Does Not Need a Sky-Blue Ribbon.

A writer in a London religious contemporary insists that professing Christians should wear a distinctive badge, and he suggests a sky-blue ribbon.

The Christian ought to wear three badges, not though, of silk, or linen, or cotton, or worsted, or felt, or cloth, or straw, or metal—but the triad of "a meek and quiet spirit," (First Peter, iii., 4;) "good works," (Acts, xxvi., 20,) and "a holy life," (Romans vi., 22.)

Such a collection of badges would outshine the most indigo-blue canton-spun silk that the hand of man and the art of the cocoon could devise.—Christian at Work.

REDUCING THE DEATH RATE.

The Vital Value of Scientific Knowledge.

Sir Spencer Wells finds that, while the average duration of human life in Great Britain a half century ago was only thirty years, it is now, according to statistics, forty-nine years.

In fifty years the population has increased some eight millions; and at least two millions of this increase is believed to be the fruit of improved sanitary and medical work and of success over preventable sickness.

Every Cloud Has a Silver Lining.

Sympathizing Lady (to casual acquaintance on the cars)—"Lost all your children? How very sad!"

Bereaved Mother—"Yes, it is a great trial. But there is no loss without some compensation."

S. L.—"Ah, yes; you have the consoling consciousness that they are better off."

"B. M.—"That is true, but I didn't exactly mean that——"

S. L.—"No?"

B. M.—"No, I was about to say that we can hire a house now without any trouble."—Boston Courier.

Flattering Delaware.

The little son of Le Grand Abbey of Ponckhockie uttered another bright saying yesterday.

His mother is making plans for a Martha Washington party and she made the remark that she would need the services of boys to represent States.

Stephen said:

"I want to be a State, mamma."

"No, Stephen, you can represent Yankee Doodle. You are too small to be a State."

"Oh, no, mamma, I want to be a State. I am big enough to represent Delaware."—Kingston Freeman

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS $22 TO $900 The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments but the Mason & Hamlin organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world. Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs the fact that at all of the great world's exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogue free.

PIANOS, GRAND & UPRIGHT. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos that they are generally recognized as the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority in this respect, owing to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "Mason & Hamlin Piano Stringer," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with great power and increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages. A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and dealers, sent together with descriptive catalogue to any applicant. Pianos and organs sold for cash or easy payments. Also rented. MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO. Boston. New York. Chicago.

CHANCERY NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN: The Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee: In Chancery.

William K Stamp, Complainant, vs. Parmela Stamp, Defendant.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in Chancery.

At chambers in the city of Adrian in said county on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1888.

It satisfactorily appearing to this court by affidavit on file in said cause, that the defendant Parmela Stamp, is not a resident of this state, but resides in the township of York, in the county of Sandusky in the state of Ohio, one of the United States of America,

Therefore on motion of Lamb & Pratt, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Parmela Stamp, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed with the register of said court and a copy thereof to be served on said complainant's solicitors within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill and notice of this order, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by the said non-resident defendant.

And it further ordered that within twenty days after the date hereof, the said complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county of Lenawee, and that such publication be continued therein at least once in each week for six successive weeks, or that he cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant at least twenty days before the time prescribed for her appearance.

Dated November 17, 1888.

VICTOR H. LANE, Circuit Judge.

LAMB & PRATT, Solicitors for Complainant. nov22

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made on February 1st, 1887, by W. Young and Jane Young to William K. Choate whereby the power of sale therein contained has become operative. Said mortgage was on February 8, 1887, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in and for Lenawee County and state of Michigan in Liber 117 on page 417. There is now claimed as due on said mortgage the sum of One Hundred Eleven and 80-100 Dollars ($111.80) and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained and of the statute in such case provided the land mortgaged by said mortgagee to wit:

That certain piece or parcel of land situate in the city of Adrian, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows to wit: Being lot number fifteen (15 as described and recorded on Merrick addition to the city of Adrian and bounded on the west side of Ellis street, will on the 7th day of January, A. D., 1889, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian in said county and state, to satisfy the said amount due with interest thereon then accrued and all legal costs and charges of this foreclosure as provided by law.

Dated October 3, 1888.

WILLIAM K. CHOATE, Mortgagee. oct1

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

IN the matter of the estate of James Lanting deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the probate court of said County Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the office of Fred K. Wood, in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 14th day of December 1888 and on the 14th day of March 1889, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 15th day of September, A.D. 1888, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated November 5th 1888.

Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

GIDEON'S ARMY.

LESSON X, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 9.

Text of the Lesson, Judges vii, 1-8—Commit Verses 2, 3—Golden Text, Zech. iv. 6—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Condensed from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, Publisher.]

The summary of the history of Israel under the judges for 450 years, as given in our last lesson, was that they forsook the Lord and served idols, then their enemies oppressed them, then they cried unto the Lord in their distress and He raised up judges who delivered them, the Lord being with the judge; after the judge's death they sinned again, were again oppressed, cried, were again delivered, and thus they lived, sinning and repenting. The book of Judges opens up to us this history and tells us who the oppressors were and who the deliverers were whom God raised up; the manner and duration of the various oppressions, and the manner of the deliverance, with the number of years they rested. Up to the present lesson the oppressors were the kings of Mesopotamia, Moab, and Canaan for periods of eight, eighteen and twenty years; the deliverers were Athniel, Ehud and Shamgar, Deborah and Barak, and the years of rest were forty, eighty and forty years respectively. After the rule of Deborah and Barak the next oppressors were the Midianites, who for seven years had cruelly oppressed Israel when God called Gideon to be their deliverer. The record of his call and the appearance of the Lord to him is found in the previous chapter, where we learn that the secret of his success as a saviour and judge of his people was in these words of the Lord to him: "Go in this thy might, have not I sent thee; surely I will be with thee" (vi, 14-16), which is just the secret of the life of every true believer today. Being encouraged by God he overthrew his father's altar to Baal and built an altar unto the Lord and offered sacrifice; the spirit of the Lord came upon him, he blew a trumpet, sent out messengers and gathered an army of 32,000 men. Today's lesson tells us of the sifting of that army down to 300 men, with whom God wrought Israel's deliverance.

1. "Jerubbaal, who is Gideon." Gideon signified a "feller or bruiser," and is a type of the Lord Jesus, the great deliverer and judge who came to destroy the works of the devil and who will bruise Satan under our feet shortly. He was the youngest of a poor family in the tribe of Manasseh (vi, 15), but the spirit of the Lord qualified him for the work to which he was called and made him a successful leader of men. God chooses the foolish and the weak to confound the wise and mighty that no flesh may glory in His presence. (I Cor. i, 26-31.)

Jerubbaal signifies "a contender with Baal," and Gideon was so called by his father after he had overthrown the altar of Baal (vi, 31, 32); if any one will be filled with the spirit and used of God they must first be willing to overthrow all the idols of pride and self and let the Lord alone possess and control them. Baal signifies "lord," and all the other lords must be set aside that Jesus may reign supreme.

2. "The Lord said unto Gideon." Did your heart ever say: "Oh, if I could only hear the Lord speak to me I would be strong and of good courage." Well, be sure of this, that just as truly as the Lord spoke to Gideon, He is speaking to you today in His word; and until you are sure of this the Bible will never be a very precious book to you. "The people are too many, . . . lest Israel vaunt themselves against Me." A small company surely, when compared with the great host of Midian, and yet God says they are too many. Numbers are not to God what they are to us, and until we can see the unseen Almighty One rather than the seen multitude who are only flesh we shall not be valiant for God.

3. "Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return." This was in accordance with the law, and the reason was, lest they should make others to be fearful and faint hearted. (Deut. xx, 8.) A fearful or discouraged person is not one whom the Lord can use; therefore He so often exhorts His people to "Be strong and courageous." (Deut. xxxi, 6, 7, 23; Josh. i, 6, 9, 18; x, 25; xxiii, 6; Ps. xxvii, 14, xxxi, 24, and many others.) There is one text which, it seems to me, ought to cure all discouraged workers for Christ, and it is this: "He shall not fail nor be discouraged till He have set judgment in the earth."

4. "The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will try them for thee there." If 32,000 was a comparatively small army with which to contend with Midian, what shall we think of only 10,000; and what must Gideon have thought when the Lord said to him, "The people are yet too many?" The process of weakening down our apparent strength for service is not an uncommon one; but the Lord knows what He is doing, and He must have well tried material; faith says, "Even so, Father," and yields and obeys, although it seems more and more like courting utter failure. Gideon might have said, "Lord, if you send me with less than 10,000 I cannot go, for it would be sheer madness;" but he evidently had no such thoughts; he was not managing this business and he had perfect confidence in the Lord.

5-7. "By the three hundred men that lapped will I save you." The 10,000 were brought down to the water to drink; 9,700 knelt down to drink, while the other 300 lifted the water to their mouths with their hands, and that simple test decided who should go. What a little thing, and what was there in it; why should not a soldier kneel down and take a good drink, and what virtue was there in lapping it like a dog? It was simply a matter of self indulgence or gratification in a very innocent and harmless thing, but it was at a very critical time. The three hundred seemed to feel the importance of the work before them so much, and their hearts were so set on the conquest of their enemies and the deliverance of their people that they had no time nor inclination to think of their own personal ease or comfort or gratification; theirs was a whole hearted service for their God and their country, and this test was God's way of selecting them. In the matter of the fearful ones it is easy to see why they should go home, but it is not so easy, at first sight, to see why these 9,700 should be set aside, until we remember that anything less than complete and persistent denial of self, in things harmless in themselves but evidencing a desire for self ease or indulgence, is unbecoming in followers of Him who pleased not Himself—did not His own will—sought not His own glory.

8. "So the people took victuals, . . . and their trumpets." When the time of conflict came, we see the 300 divided into three companies, and each man with a torch in his left hand and a trumpet in his right hand, their eyes upon their captain, ready to do as he does (10-20). At the appointed signal every torch flames forth from the vessel in which it had been hid, and at the same instant every trumpet sounds, and the cry is heard from every throat: "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." Among the hosts of Midian every man's sword is against his fellow; the men of Israel come together and pursue after them, and of the 135,000 of Midian's army 120,000 fall in the battle (viii, 10). Thus the enemy is subdued, Israel is again delivered, and the land has rest forty years in the days of Gideon (viii, 28).

THE MYSTERY OF THE COMB.

Use of This Aid to Personal Appearance in Religious Service.

It would be curious to know what mystic meaning our forefathers attached to so simple an act as that of combing the hair. Yet we learn from old church history that the hair of the priest or Bishop was thus combed several times during divine service, by one of the inferior clergy.

The comb is mentioned as one of the essentials for use during a high mass when sung by a Bishop, and both in English and foreign cathedrals they were reckoned among the costly possessions of the church. Some were made of ivory, some were carved, others gemmed with precious stones.

Among the combs specially known to history are those of St. Neot, St. Dunstan, and Malachias. That of St. Thomas the Martyr of Canterbury is still to be seen in the Church of St. Sepulchre, at Thetford, and that of St. Cuthbert at Durham Cathedral.

From sundry references in old legends to the use of the comb in divination, and from its appearance in combination with pagan emblems on rudely sculptured stones in various parts of Scotland, it seems probable that this was one of the objects of pagan veneration which early Christian teachers deemed it prudent to adopt, investing it with some new significance.—Cornhill Magazine.

AVOID TIPPERS AND TIPPLERS.

A Wall Street Man's Advice To Folks Who Think of Speculating.

Speculation is a business that must be studied as a specialty, and though it is popularly believed that any man who has money can speculate, yet the ordinary man, without special training in the business, is liable to make as great a mistake in this attempt as the man who thinks he can act as his own lawyer, and who is said "to have a fool for a client."

The common delusion that expert knowledge is not required in speculation has wrecked many fortunes and reputations in Wall street, and is still very influential in its pernicious and illusory achievements.

Professional advice in Wall street, as in legal affairs, is worth paying for, and costs far less in the end than the chief "points" that are distributed profusely around the Street, thick as autumn leaves in Vallambrosa, and which only allure the innocent speculator to put his money where he is almost certain to lose it.

My advice to speculators who wish to make money in Wall street, therefore, is to ignore the counsel of the barroom "tippers" and "tipplers," turn their backs on "bucket shops," and when they want "points" to purchase, let them go to those who know.—Henry Clews.

Some Lively Wit.

An enviable quickness of repartee was shown by a French actor when the head of a goose was thrown on the stage. Advancing to the footlights, he said:

"Gentlemen, if any one among you has lost his head, I shall be glad to restore it at the conclusion of the piece."

Deservedly severe, also, was the reply of Descartes to a nobleman, who, seeing that he enjoyed the pleasure of the table, remarked:

"I see, sir, that philosophers can sometimes indulge in good cheer."

"Why not?" asked Descartes. "Do you really imagine that Providence intended the good things of this earth only for the foolish and ignorant?"

Which Fiddle Do You Play?

In the grand orchestra of life everybody is anxious to play first fiddle. Nay, almost everybody does play it; for although the first fiddle absolute may take precedence of all the rest, yet every second fiddle is first fiddle to somebody.

As "fleas have smaller fleas to bite 'em, and so on ad infinitum," so every man who tickles a superior has an inferior to tickle him.

If it were not for this pleasant arrangement we should have no social harmony, and it is only when this system of relations is disturbed that we experience discords and crashes.—New York Ledger.

Important Business.

"Oh, papa," she said with a blush, "young Mr. Chestnut who owns so many coal mines in Pennsylvania, is coming again this evening, and he says he wants to see you on some important business."

"All right, my dear," responded the old man, chuckling her playfully under the chin, "I guess I know what the young man wants."

That evening Mr. Chestnut came to the point at once:

"Mr. Hendricks," he said boldly, "I want to ask you if you have laid in your winter's stock of coal."

Her Right Place.

"Have you any data on which to base a prognostication of the duration of the present period of excessive caloric in the circumambient atmosphere?" asked a young woman with spectacles of a man at the Union station yesterday.

"Yes'm," was the reply, "the next train for Boston leaves in half an hour."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

A Sensible Decision.

"J-John, d-dear," she sobbed. "D-did you ever think how near death is to us all? Wh-what would you ever d-do, dear J-John, if I should die?"

"Well," said John musingly, "I don't know as I had ever thought of it before, my dear, but now you speak of it, my first impression is that I should bury you."—Somerville Journal.

Sage Advice.

Young Softus (who is in love with the unattractive Miss Vinaigrette, daughter)—"But, my dear boy, how am I to entertain her? How can I flatter her when she is so homely? How—?"

Old Boy—"Don't do it. Speak only of the ugliness of others. She'll idolize you!"—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Only a Passing Acquaintance.

"Do you know Col. Bender?" asked a gentlemen of an Austin darkey.

"I doan' know Kurnel Bender by name, sah; I only knows him by sight. I merely has a passin' 'quaintance wid him."—Texas Siftings.

A Result of Disappointment.

The man who marries for money and fails to get it generally has a sour and ets.-less appearance.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I can cheerfully and truthfully say that S. S. S. is the greatest blood purifier on earth. In 1884 I contracted blood poison. Physicians treated me with no good results. I took a half dozen different kinds of blood medicines, but, without receiving any permanent relief! I was induced to try S. S. S. I began the first bottle with the gravest doubts of success. I had been so often deceived. But improvement came, and I continued its use until perfectly well. I have since married, and have a healthy family. No trace of the disease is seen. Swift's Specific did all this for me, and I am grateful. Yours truly,

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper W. A. Noyes, 149 Powers block, Rochester, N. Y.

Honesty the Best Policy.

As illustrative of the average negro character, a gentleman said that an old negro woman made application for the loan of $5. He lent her the money and, true to her promise, she returned it.

That was several years since, and nearly every time she has seen him since she would accost him with the salutation:

"Mr. Blank, you loaned me $5, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, I paid it back, didn't I?"

"That you did."

"Well, don't you think you oughter give me a quarter?"

The gentleman said he generally thought so, and that he had responded to her calls cheerfully.

A Modern Miracle.

Mrs J. W. Wentworth, of Elkhart, Ind., was long subject to pain in the side, shortness of breath, weakness, pain in the side, slight cough, swelling of the ankles and other symptoms of serious heart disease. She was expected to die at any time. Doctors in New York, Toledo, etc., failed to help her. But two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart cured her three years ago and she has remained well ever since. Heart disease can be cured. Sold by Baker & Hall.

The Homelest Man in Tecumseh

As well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on Baker & Hall, and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely upon its merits and is guaranteed to cure and relieve all Chronic and Acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Price 50 cents and $1.

A FAVORITE WITH THE FAIR SEX.

Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure is superior to all the much-advertised skin beautifiers with the advantage of being beneficial, and not like the mineral preparations usually sold which are very poisonous. It will remove all inflammation, chafing and roughness of the skin, sunburn, freckles and unseemly blotches, and leave the cuticle fair and soft as an infant's. An actual necessity for the complete toilet table. Large bottles only $1.00.

GRAPE WINES

A180

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal churches for communion. Excellent for females, weakly persons and the aged.

ADOPTED IN HOSPITALS AS THE BEST FOR INVALIDS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This celebrated wine is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal hospitals and boards of health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particular beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that effect the weaker sex.

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Oporto Grape preserved in its natural fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the exciter of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's Socialite Claret.

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry.

Is a wine of superior character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

Is a pure distillation of the grape, and stands unrivalled in this country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

Look Out for Windy Weather at the Capital,

FOR CONGRESS HAS RE-ASSEMBLED,

And Senators and Representatives Have a Deal to Talk About—Quiet and Uneventful Opening of the Chambers—The Message Read and a Prompt Adjournment Follows.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The Fiftieth congress assembled for its second and third session at noon yesterday. Long before that hour the galleries began to fill, and by 11:30 all but the diplomatic and ex-congressional galleries were crowded. The executive gallery was empty. On the floor of the senate pages were distributing baskets of flowers. The largest decorated the desk of the presiding officer. There were two baskets on Senator Beck's desk, one on Senator Butler's, one on Pugh's, and one on Daniels'. Not a blossom adorned the desks of the Republican senators.

Stewart of Nevada was the first member of the senate to make an appearance on the floor. He was soon joined by Chandler, Hawley, and Dolph. A few minutes later Spooner, Aldrich, Manderson, Frye, and Morrill came out of the cloakroom and joined their colleagues on the floor. At the same time Harris of Tennessee and Jones of Arkansas appeared on the Democratic side of the chamber. As the hands of the big senate clock moved on to the meridian mark, the chamber rapidly filled with members, and a general handshaking was going on in all of the aisles.

At 12 o'clock Ingalls entered the chamber, escorting the chaplain, Mr. Butler. When the gavel fell there were forty-two senators present. Mr. Butler's prayer was brief. He asked for a blessing on the president and the president-elect. At the conclusion of the prayer, Ingalls announced the senate in session. Sherman asked if it was necessary to call the roll. Ingalls said it was not. Sherman then offered a resolution instructing the secretary of the house that the senate was ready for the transfer of business. The resolution was adopted. A resolution was offered by Morrill, and adopted, that a committee be appointed to wait on the president. The president protem appointed Morrill and Salisbury the committee. A resolution offered by Cameron was adopted fixing the regular hour for assembling at 12 o'clock.

The senate then went into informal recess to await the president's message. The recess was later extended to 1:30. A few minutes before that time Assistant Secretary Pruden appeared at the door of the senate chamber with a large package, evidently the message, in his hands. The president protempore called the senate to order. A message from the house was received, and then Morrill and Salisbury, the senate committee, appeared in the aisle, arm in arm, and Morrill, addressing the presiding officer, said that the committee had called upon the president and that he had a message for them to be delivered immediately. Mr. Pruden then presented the message to the senate. It was handed by Ingalls to the secretary of the senate, Cook, who at 1:04 began to read it to the senate. Not more than twenty senators listened to the reading, and at its conclusion the senate, at 2:50 p. m., adjourned.

Exactly an hour before Speaker Carlisle, at 12 o'clock, struck his desk with a hard new gavel and called the house to order, a scene was presented on the floor which was highly noisy and tempestuous. The desks of the members were nearly all occupied, and members talked to the other in a loud tone of voice, exchanging election incidents and incidents. There was much hand shaking. When Randall, looking fairly well, entered and took his seat, a few minutes before 12 o'clock, he was immediately surrounded and heartily congratulated upon his convalescence. A splendid floral offering stood upon his desk. There were baskets of flowers upon the desks of the speaker and Springer, Weaver, Mills, Sayers, Richardson, and others.

Mrs. Cleveland and her mother, Mrs. Folsom, sat in the front seat in the diplomatic gallery. The president's wife was accompanied with her sister and a few friends. The other galleries were filled to overflowing. After the hand clapping had ceased Dr. Milburn, had offered supplication and the reading clerk began to call the roll of the states, the members responded now (Tuesday) continuing it while the secretary of the senate read the announcement that the first body of congress had assembled, was ready for business, and had appointed a committee to act with a similar committee on the part of the house to wait upon and notify the president that congress was ready for his pleasure.

At the conclusion of the roll-call the speaker appointed Holman of Indiana, O'Neill of Pennsylvania, and Turner of Georgia, members of the committee to notify the president. The house then took recess to 1:30, at which time the house came to order again, and the assistant secretary to the president, Mr. Pruden, appeared with the expected executive document. Having risen, Clerk Brown began reading it at 1:35 p. m., and concluded at 3:15 p. m. Nearly every member was present, the only prominent absentee being Randall, who, after answering to the roll-call, left the capitol. The closest attention at the beginning of the reading was given by members on both sides of the chamber. The first subject to receive applause was at the conclusion of the paragraph favoring the tariff. The Democrats led by Springer and others, broke out in a round of handclapping. It was of short duration, however, and did not cause the clerk to halt in his reading. Warm applause followed the dismissal of Minister Sackville, and still more was given to the dignity of this government in the new personal status of representation with Great Britain, the Republicans joining in heavily, while the Democrats were not in serious earnest. When the reader came to the passage saying that the British minister's offense had occasioned no interruption of a presidential election, and again when he read the reference to Minister Sackville as "the person," interest in the message flagged when the reading of long extractions of the various departments was reached and members crowded the cloakrooms and lounged in the aisles or talked one another, and in most cases failed to give heed to the reader. As soon as the reading of the message was concluded the house adjourned.

Fire in an Armour Packing House.

SIOUX CITY, Dec. 4.—Fire was discovered in the sausage room of Armour's packing house at 7 o'clock this morning, and spread very rapidly. The fire department was called in from Omaha but before the fire was gotten under control the damage amounted to $25,000. The flames were confined to the upper part of the house, which is the finest in the country.

Smuggler Gardner Sentenced.

AUBURN, N. Y., Dec. 3.—Erwin A. Gardner, the convicted opium smuggler, was Saturday afternoon sentenced to four years in the Erie county penitentiary and to pay a fine of $10,000.

LITTLEWOOD IS CHAMPION.

The English Pedestrian Beats Albert's Record—Albert's Challenge.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—There was an immense assemblage in Madison Square garden Saturday night to witness the closing scenes of the six days go as you please, which began shortly after midnight Monday last. It is estimated that from 8,000 to 10,000 people were present. From 5 o'clock and up to the close of the race most of the pedestrians remained on the track, and every time the band played the men would spurt around at a lively rate. The sporting men unanimously declared that but for the lack of heart Cartwright would have been posting Littlewood for first place.

GEORGE LITTLEWOOD.

At 6 o'clock Littlewood was ten miles ahead of Albert's record. He was going around gamely, although it was evident that one of his feet was sore, as he limped in rather a painful way. Littlewood's intention when he started was to cover 675 miles, his sickness prevented this, but he was determined to break the record. At 7:30 he made his 659th mile, and the crowd cheered loudly. The excitement was great as he drew near Albert's record. Albert and his wife sat in a box and saw Littlewood win the title of champion walker of the world. Shortly after starting out on the 622d mile it was stated that he would on completing it retire for good. While Littlewood was covering his 623d mile the crowd grew more enthusiastic. When he had completed it he was presented by Guerrero with a handsome wreath, a present from Jockey Garrison, while the band played "Hail to the Chief," and followed with "Yankee Doodle." It was 8:02 precisely when he finished. Albert came down with him carrying a broom, while the other pedestrians bore aloft American flags. One circuit of the track was then made in a sort of triumphal procession, and Littlewood left the track.

ALBERT.

Moore, Cartwright, Hart, Connor, Golden, Mason, Campana, Taylor, and Smith followed shortly after, but Herty remained on the track running in splendid form. It was announced that he had determined to beat Rowell's record of 662 miles and 165 yards. At 9:04 he made the 663d mile, and shortly after passed Rowell's record, making the greatest record of his life. All the contestants returned to the track between 9 and 10 and indulged in frequent spurts. At 9:26 Littlewood, escorted by Manager O'Brien and limping badly, went around the track amid great cheering. After making a couple of laps Littlewood and Herty were stopped by Kelly, of the Boston Base Ball club, and presented with wreaths of laurel. After Littlewood made a few more laps he was stopped in front of the scorer's stand and presented with the diamond championship belt by Mike Kelly, who made a few brief remarks. He said that while Americans bowed to his superiority now, he hoped that soon an American would again get possession of the belt and the title of champion of the world. The belt was then fastened around Littlewood's waist, and he thanked the speaker for his good wishes, and said he had won the belt once, but supposed he must win it twice more to hold it.

BELT.

Albert then stepped forward and challenged Littlewood to another race for the championship of the world under the conditions that each man entering put up $1,000, to be divided among the walkers in addition to the gate receipts.

The 24 in score was: Littlewood, 623 miles 1, 20 yards; Herty, 663; Moore, 575; Cartwright, 540; Noremac, 542; Hart, 529; Howarth, 526; Connor, 526; Golden, 524; Mason, 518; Taylor, 456; Campana, 454; Elson, 421; Peach, 262; C. Smith, 201. The receipts for the week amounted to about $29,125. Of this sum $9,561 50 will be divided among the walkers. Littlewood gets $3,824, with $1,000 a-piece for breaking the record. Herty will get $1,721; Moore, $1,147; Cartwright, $860; Connor, $286; Golden, $691; and Mason, $95.

Official Returns.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Dec. 4.—The electoral vote of California as announced by the secretary of state yesterday, is: Harrison, 124,806; Cleveland, 117,520; Fisk, 5,761; Curtis, 1,596.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 4.—The official returns from the election in this state give these results: Harrison's plurality, 21,271; Hoard's plurality, 20,935. The Prohibition vote for president was 14,277, and the labor vote for president 8,952; total vote, 354,664.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 4.—Official vote of the state: Harrison, 19,293; Cleveland, 26,524; Fisk, 1,679; Streeter, 355; scattering, 61; total vote, 46,908; Harrison's plurality, 6,769.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 4.—The count of the vote of Texas for presidential electors was completed yesterday. The total vote cast was 215,901; Cleveland's majority being 135,366.

Cheap Fares to Inauguration.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—At a meeting of the committee on transportation to the inaugural ceremonies of March next, held last evening, a report was presented showing that a circular letter had been sent to every railroad in the United States, remotely or intimately interested in business at the national capital, suggesting that the rate to Washington for the inauguration be made one fare for the round trip from all points. Replies have been received and responded, agreeing to accept that rate from all points on the line, and answers were being received from other roads every day.

Chicago Wins at Foot Ball.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—The foot ball game between the university clubs of Chicago and the University of Michigan at the Chicago base ball park yesterday afternoon, resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 10 to 4. There were one-half of the Chicago team who played against New Haven and expected to play the game in New Haven.

Another Victory for Bell.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Judge Blodgett has rendered an important decision, forever restraining the American Inter State Telephone company from using, renting or infringing on the patents of the American Bell telephone company.

Most Devilishly Done

The Calumet Mines Alleged to Have Been Fired.

EIGHT MEN MEET AN AWFUL DOOM,

And Over Two Hundred Others Have a Very Narrow Escape—Distressing Scenes at the Shaft—A Heavy Loss in Money—What Would Be Done with the Incendiary.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The Herald's Hancock, Mich., special says the Calumet and Hecla mine was deliberately set on fire at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Of the 300 or 300 men on duty at the time, all but eight escaped unharmed. As soon as the fire was discovered the men began to work their way up, and when they reached the fire itself, made an attempt to turn on the water, but the pipes had been disconnected and no water was to be had. The signal wire had also been cut, and there was nothing left but to fight for life. Under the guidance of cool-headed leaders the men worked their way around the burning tunnel to other connections with the main engine shaft, and thence to the surface.

While the scenes below were being enacted the cry above that the mine was on fire had reached the homes of the miners, and the wives, children and friends of the men below soon crowded around the shafts, wild with grief and anxiety. As each man came up out of the death trap he was seized by weeping wife and children or anxious friends, and cries of grief were changed to shouts of rejoicing. The men kept coming up until it was known that all but eight had been rescued. For these no possible hope remains, as the only avenue of escape is cut off. They were doubtless smothered between the sixth level, where the fire originated, and the surface. Their names are: Antony Langin, Andrew Hansen, Joe Roe, Antony Kalskie, Gustav Tava, John Funk, Joe Mossoglie and John Vanderbilt.

At the spot where the fire originated no one was working, and this fact, taken in connection with the disconnecting of the water pipes and the breaking of the signal wire, leaves no room to doubt that the fire was the work of an incendiary. Just one year ago the mine took fire under circumstances which pointed strongly to incendiarism. It is hinted that an interested syndicate is at the bottom of the fires, and that the work is that of their hired accomplice for the purpose of checking the production of copper, and hence booming the price. The management had a standing reward of $2,000 for the discovery of the man who set the fire a year ago, and if human agency can discover the perpetrator of this deed it is openly declared that he will be hurled headlong down the burning shaft.

No means of approximating the probable loss to the mine company are at hand. The other fire burned for thirteen weeks, and did millions of dollars worth of damage. It was nothing in fierceness as compared to the present one. Late last night the fire burst its way through the surface, and a huge pillar of flame and sparks shot upward like a volcano, but it was again smothered by coverings of earth.

Another theory is that the fire was caused by the carelessness of the man in charge of the donkey pumps, which are run by compressed air. Unless the moving parts of the machinery, for which air furnishes the motive power, are kept warm they are likely to freeze. Cotton waste saturated with oil is burned in the troughs of the pumps. This theory is that the cotton waste fell from the trough and ignited the timbers in the shaft. The underground fire is fed solely by the timbers which support the overhanging walls and roof, and this amounts almost to a forest. It would take years to burn it all, and to save it from burning is a task which may well be called herculean. Carbonic acid gas will probably be resorted to to put out the fire, as was so successfully done a year ago when 20,000 cubic feet per day were forced down the burning shaft.

MUCH LAND INVOLVED.

A Question Before Secretary Vilas Which Interests Many Michigan Men.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—An important hearing, involving hundreds of cases of land in Michigan, took place before Secretary Vilas at the interior department yesterday. The case involved some 1,300 acres of swamp lands claimed by the state of Michigan under the act of Sept. 28, 1850. Subsequently the lands were resurveyed and declared not to be swamp. They were taken from the state and as such opened by the government to private entry. This action the state disputes, holding that the action of the government in originally declaring the lands swamp lands was final. The roads to whom the odd sections of the lands in question were granted have disposed of a large portion of them, and the present owners comprise many of the wealthy men in the northwest, including both of the Michigan senators and several members of the house. The secretary's decision is not expected for several weeks.

WANTED FOR NEXT YEAR.

Estimates of Appropriations Needed by the Several Departments.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The secretary of the treasury has transmitted to congress estimates of appropriations needed for the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890. They aggregate $523,467,488, which is $40,065,305 less than the estimates for 1889, and $5,550,511 more than the appropriations for the current fiscal year. The estimates are as follows:

Legislative establishment, $4,881,063; executive establishment, $18,635,081; judicial establishment, $4,196,000; foreign intercourse, $1,917,565; military establishment, $25,519,322; naval establishment, $25,105,628; Indian affairs, $5,475,410; pensions, $88,000,000; public works, $21,204,999; postal service, $4,400,414; miscellaneous, $26,856,395; permanent and annual appropriations, $195,091,055; total, $523,467,488.

Severe Storm in Kansas.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 4.—Nearly all the east bound trains on the western roads were a little late yesterday morning. The delay was caused by the severity of the storm, which seems to have swept over the entire state of Kansas. Engineers report heavy falls of snow and rain in the eastern and southern portions of the state and heavy snow in the western portion.

The War on the Mosquitoes Begun.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 4.—There were no new cases yesterday, and but one death—Edward Cawker.

The fumigating brigade, seventy-five strong, in ten divisions, started out in the morning and by 6 o'clock p. m. ninety-five houses had been disinfected.

Re-Elected Mayor of Dublin.

DUBLIN, Dec. 3.—Mr. Thomas Sexton has been unanimously re-elected mayor of Dublin.

HALF A VILLAGE DESTROYED

Conflagration at L'Erable, Ills.—One Man Fatally Burned.

KANKAKEE, Ills., Dec. 1.—An accident, by which one life was lost and a man was badly injured, resulted in the destruction of a large portion of the village of L'Erable Thursday night. An old man named Vanderpool, living in L'Erable, was lighting a lamp preparatory to retiring for the night, when the reflector from the ceiling fell upon the burning lamp, causing an explosion. The oil was scattered over the room, and in a moment the building was in flames. The contents of the lamp also spread upon Vanderpool's clothing, and ignited at once enveloped the old man in fire. Vanderpool fought as hard and as long as he could, but was soon forced to give up and fell screaming for help. Neighbors gathered at the house upon seeing the flames, and hearing Vanderpool's cry. William Adams rushed to the rescue and succeeded in carrying the old man into the street. Vanderpool was fatally burned, however, and after a night of terrible agony, died in the morning. Adams was also badly burned, but it is thought will recover. No apparatus was at hand to subdue the flames which spread from house to house until more than half the village was destroyed. The buildings were all of wood, and the loss falls heavily upon the owners and occupants.

GEN. SHERMAN BEREAVED.

Death of His Wife, Who Has Been Seriously Ill for Some Time.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Ellen Ewing Sherman, wife of Gen. W. T. Sherman, who has been seriously ill at her residence, 75 West Seventy-first street, since Sunday last, died at 9:30 Wednesday morning. She had been complaining of cardiac affection for the past five years and about three weeks ago serious symptoms began to develop.

Mrs. Sherman will be buried at St. Louis, in Calvary cemetery, which adjoins Bellefontaine. A special car has been placed at the disposal of Gen. Sherman, to convey the remains to St. Louis. The train will start Thursday evening, and will reach its destination Saturday morning. The interment will take place in the afternoon.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—After simple services at the residence of Gen. Sherman yesterday the body of Mrs. Sherman was taken to the Pennsylvania railway station in Jersey City, whence Gen. Sherman and five members of his family accompanied the remains to St. Louis.

Secretary Whitney's Report.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 1.—Secretary Whitney devotes the first part of his annual report to a review of the progress made in the construction of a navy and the best types of vessels to build. He says that everything necessary to the construction of a first class fighting ship can now be made in this country, and that when the cruisers now provided for are built we will rank second among the nations in the possession of armored cruisers—commerce destroyers. He then discusses the administration of his office, stating that notwithstanding the outlay for new vessels the expenses for the past three years have been but $46,830,030, while for the three years ending with 1884 they were $47,079,397. The report makes numerous comparisons of the same character, much to the credit of the present administration. The secretary asks $26,767,677 in all for the next fiscal year.

The Figures on Illinois.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—The official returns from the recent election in Illinois are at last complete. The total vote cast in the state was 744,576, an increase of 71,907 in four years. For president, Harrison has a plurality of 21,379 over Cleveland. For governor Fifer has a plurality of 12,547 over Palmer. The total Prohibition vote of the state was 21,595, against 12,074 four years ago. The labor party polled 7,410 votes.

The total vote of this city for president is 125,551: Cleveland's plurality over Harrison in the city, 5,664. The total vote of the county for president, including the city, is 172,868, an increase of 41,180 in four years; plurality of Harrison over Cleveland in the entire county, 5,916. Palmer's plurality for governor in the county over Fifer is 4,497.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 30, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen: I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as Dr. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

At a Reading.

The spare professor, grave and bald,
Began his paper. It was called,
I think, "A Brief Historic Glance
At Russia, Germany and France."
A glance, but to my best belief,
'Twas almost anything but brief—
A wide survey, in which the earth
Was seen before mankind had birth!
Strange monsters basked them in the sun,
Behemoth, armored glyptodon.
And in the dawn's unpraised ray
The transient dodo winged its way;
Then, by degrees, through slit and slough,
We reached Berlin, I don't know how.
The good professor's monotone
Had turned me into senseless stone
Instanter, but that near me sat
Hypatia in her new spring hat.
Blue eyed, intent, with lips whose bloom
Lighted the heavy curtained room.
Hypatia—ah, what lovely things
Are fashioned out of eighteen springs—
At first, in sums of this amount,
The eighteen winters do not count.
Just as my eyes were growing dim
With heaviness, I saw that slim,
Erect, elastic figure there
Like a pond lily taking air.
She looked so fresh, so wise, so neat,
So altogether crisp and sweet,
I quite forgot what Bismarck said,
And why the emperor shook his head,
And how it was Von Moltke's frown
Cost France another frontier town.
The only facts I took away
From the professor's theme that day
Were these: a forehead broad and low,
Such as the antique sculptures show;
A chin to Greek perfection true;
Eyes of Astarte's tender blue;
A high complexion without fleck
Or flaw, and curls about her neck.
—Thomas Bailey Aldrich in Harper's Magazine.

A Great Wonder.

We can't conceive why, with all the variety of weather we have had lately, anybody ever leaves Burlington for a change of climate.—Burlington Free Press.

Between the Horns.

Mrs. Abner (calling on Aunt Dinah)—Yo' ain't lookin' even pahsin' well dis mornin', Aunt Dinah.

Aunt Dinah (with a sigh)—No, 'deed I isn't. I doan know what I'se gwine to do wid dat ar black hiahed girl of mine; she drives me to distracshun.

Mrs. Abner—Why doan yo' hiah a white girl?

Aunt Dinah—Well, I doan know; 'Rastus favors a white girl, but I allus foun' 'em so shiffless dar's no libin' wiv 'em.—New York Sun.

Business is Business.

Railroad President—Did you get the injured passengers in that accident satisfied so they, they won't sue for damages?

Under Secretary—Yes, sir. The worst injured were drummers, who are used to that sort of thing, and $3 worth of cigars fixed them all right. The only other one was a man who had his nose broken."

"Eh! What did you do with him?"

"As the accident changed his pug nose to a very handsome Roman I charged him $100 for the operation. So, you see, we are $97 ahead."—Philadelphia Record.

Life in Russia.

First Russian Subject—In a recent railroad accident the czar's dog was killed, but the czar escaped. Shall we look glad or sorry in public?

Second Subject—If we look glad the police will say it is because the czar's favorite dog was killed; if we look sorry they will say it is because it was the dog and not the czar that was killed. Either way we are lost. See you later in Siberia.—Philadelphia Record.

A Metropolitan Noise.

Kansas City Resident (on board train to stranger)—Well, sir, we have reached the metropolis of the great and growing west at last. We are in Kansas City. This is Eight Hundred and Fortieth street.

Stranger (peering out of the window)—Well, what is that peculiar noise?

Kansas City Resident—That, sir, is the croaking of frogs. Our climate here will raise anything.—New York Sun.

A Fit Subject.

A correspondent asks The Boston Globe: "Can a person obtain admission to the Old Ladies' Home, as is reported, by collecting 1,000,000 old postage stamps?" The Globe replies in the negativ but we should think the person who performs such a task would have no difficulty in getting admitted to almost any insane asylum.—Norristown Herald.

The Great Literary Center.

The proposed exhibit of Chicago pork in Paris is very flattering to this city of culture. Nobody is trying to get up an exhibit of Boston beans in the French metropolis. Chicago is rapidly coming to be recognized as the great literary center of this country.—Chicago News.

Young Physician (quietly)—Thank you, but I'm not; I'm off duty, don't you know.—Drake's Magazine.

She Met Him the Second Time.

De Wolf Hopper has the reputation of being the most credulous man that walks the streets. It is not that he is hoodwinked by applicants for charity, but he has a repugnance to giving any one a chance to say that he is stingy. For all this it gives him a three cornered pain to know absolutely that he has been beaten. During his present engagement here he was taking a stroll one afternoon and a woman met him on the street and asked if he could inform her which depot she should go to to get a train for Evanston. Mr. Hopper happened to know that Evanston was on the Northwestern road and he knew that the depot was on Kinzie street. All this he told the woman, and while he was doing so she suddenly burst into tears and informed the comedian that she was very desirous of reaching that point, but that she only had fifteen cents in money. As she was rather comely in looks and not badly dressed, Mr. Hopper at once concluded that it was a case of deserving charity, and he was not an instant in producing a silver dollar, which he pressed into her hand, saying: "Take this, madam; take this; it's all right; don't apologize and don't thank me." Mr. Hopper continued his walk. He was trying to count all the buildings in the city that were over eight stories high, and had reached the corner of Dearborn and Adams streets, when he heard a familiar voice say: "Excuse me, but I am a stranger here, and I wish you would direct me to the right depot for Englewood." Mr. Hopper gave her one look. It was the same woman who had accosted him two hours before. With a saddened voice he replied: "Yes, madam, I can. You take the train I directed you to about two hours ago for Evanston, and if you have good luck you will get there."—Chicago Herald.

A Great Genius.

A young lady went into the office of a literary magazine.

"I have a pretty story," she said to the editor. "It is striking and strictly original."

"Leave it," the editor groaned.

"Let me read it to you."

"Not if you value your life!" the editor exclaimed.

"Sir!"

"I said that I must go home to my wife."

"Well, let me tell you a part of the story: A young girl is working in a hat factory. One day she stitches her name in the hat"——

"And afterward meets the fellow who buys the hat and marries him!" the editor exclaimed.

"Oh, no. That night the factory catches fire and is burned up."

"What! does no one rescue the hat and marry the girl?"

"No."

"Miss, your fortune is made. We want everything you write. You have done a great work for American literature."—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Llamantable Tale.

These unfortunate beautiful llamas
Were taken away from their mammas,
And in spite of their squealin's
And lacerated feelin's,
Were required to sleep in pajamas.

—Frost's Stuff and Nonsense.

Bits from Amateur Novels.

A western paper recently offered a prize for the best story to be written by a pupil of a public school. Here are a few passages from the contributions:

"Cora Brown was fortunately the possessor of a birthday, for she was the daughter of rich friends."

"But all this time a cloud was gathering over Mrs. Delaney, which grew large as years went by, and that cloud was full of grasshoppers."

"My father desired me to marry a bank president, a handsome, reckless man, fond of naught save the gaming table."

"'Vat I dell you, vat I dell you!' shouted the Irishman."

"As she entered the room a cold, damp smell met her sight."

"She forgot the Lord and all his blessings, and after that she went and got married."—New York Tribune.

A Poor Prescription.

Mr. Whiffles—Doctor, I hear you have a sure cure for insomnia. I wish you would treat me for it, as it is almost impossible for me to get to sleep.

Doctor—Certainly. My plan is very simple. As soon as you lie down at night begin to count, and keep on counting until you get to sleep.

"Is counting all it is? Why, doctor, counting is just what I do every night of my life, and it doesn't put me to sleep at all."

"Eh? What do you count?"

"Oh, household expenses, unpaid bills, time left on notes and all sorts of things."—Philadelphia Record.

Great Expectations.

Affectionate Nephew—As soon as I heard of uncle's illness I rushed over here. I must see him.

Nurse—Impossible. The doctor says the slightest shock may kill him.

Nephew—All the more reason why I should see him.—America.

An Infallible Sign.

"What makes you think Jennie loves you so much?" asked Merritt.

"Because," returned Bjones, "she called me back five times last night when I was bidding her good by."—New York Evening Sun.

FORGOT HIS CERTIFICATE.

A Careless Savannah Bridegroom Comes Near Missing His Wedding.

Eliot Dunn gave The Breeze the details of quite an amusing incident that happened on board the train while on his way to Atlanta.

Shortly after the train pulled out of Brunswick he noticed a Savannah man on board with an unusually happy smile on his face.

The man seemed wrapped in silent meditation on [illegible] pleasing subject, as he would occa[illegible]le to himself, and Mr. Du[illegible]sed at watching him.

P[illegible] the surprise of M[illegible] Du[illegible]denly to his feet, with the e[illegible]

"Gre[illegible]! I've forgotten to get a health certificate, and won't be admitted into Savannah without it."

The conductor coming through, the man explained his dilemma to him, and the urbane official introduced him to Mr. Dunn, who regretted his inability to furnish him with the desired certificate, as he had neither blanks nor pen and ink.

"But, my dear sir," said the Savannah man, "I'm on my way to get married, and if I'm detained I shall be ruined."

"If you get me pen and ink I'll write you a certificate" said Mr. Dunn.

The conductor said there was none on board, and that it would be impossible to detain the train until it could be obtained at Jesup.

"But, my dear sir, the girl, the preacher and the guests will all be waiting and wondering why I do not put in an appearance," said the man.

"Telegraph her" suggested Mr. Dunn.

"I can't! She lives some miles from Savannah, where there is no telegraph station," he replied.

Finally Mr. Dunn gave him his own certificate, and told him to see if he could pass on it.

This morning Mr. Dunn received a letter stating that the certificate had passed him all right, and after getting married he had added the words "and wife" to it, so that it read "Eliot Dunn and wife," under which alais the happy couple had gone on their bridal tour.—Brunswick (Ga.) Breeze.

Suggestions to Reporters.

One can imagine him in severe straits for a new way of putting the arrivals, and failing to hit upon a pretty term; and yet, in the bright lexicon of the enterprising youth of the press, there is no such word as fail. Just to show that the field of expression in this line is illimitable, the Listener submits some examples of hotel arrivals done in this way:

Col. Elijah Pogram, of Frankfort, Ky., slept the sleep of a just man made perfectly mellow at Young's last night.

The Hon. Peregrine Pickle, en route from Washington to Podunk, Me., relaxed his six and a half feet of bone and muscle, and kicked off the comforter at the United States hotel last night.

The Hon. Henry Q. Bent, of Barkester, N. H., folded the elegant drapery of one of Billy Park's couches about him last night.

The Rev. Auburn Hellwig, of Newport, R. I., bound in his sunny locks and lay down to pleasant ecclesiastical dreams at the Vendome last night.

Lord Beetem, of England, accompanied by his friend, Sir Cadley Bogus, Bart., alighted from his equipage at Parker's.

The Hon John D. Short, of Hangham, reined in his foaming carpet bag at the Tremont last evening.

Mr. Michael O'Finucan, Mr. Dick Swipes, Mr. Billy Slugham and several other gentlemen of perambulatory leisure found a genial Amphitryon in Lieut. Gardner at Station 2 last night.

Instances of this sort could be multiplied indefinitely, but these are enough, no doubt, to show that the thing can be done.—Boston Transcript.

The Punishment Too Great for the Crime.

"Samantha," said Mr. Chugwater, as he came down to breakfast, "I thought I heard a noise in the cellar last night. Do you miss anything?"

"Some villain has stolen one of my pumpkin pies," replied Mrs. Chugwater, wrathfully.

"Poor fellow!" exclaimed the husband, regretfully. "He has probably eaten it!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Successful Evening.

Miss Ethel—Did you enjoy yourself, Clara, at the De Dotton affair the other evening?

Miss Clara—Oh, immensely. I was asked to sing, which I can't do; also to dance and play, neither of which is one of my accomplishments; if I painted, or was fond of art in any way, if I belonged to any literary club, and all that sort of thing, all of which you know I do not do. I simply established a reputation for genius, and was intensely admired—so lovely, dear, to be a genius!—Harper's Bazar.

He Has Company.

Ernst Renshaw, of England, prides himself on the fact that he has never been beaten at tennis. That boast may sound very big in England, but here in America it goes for nothing. Ernst could go along the streets of any American city and count thousands of people who have never been beaten at tennis.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

One on the Old Man.

"I declare, Robert," said the old man irascibly, "you are the most stupid boy I ever saw. I wonder at your ignorance. It seems to me I'll never be able to learn you anything."

"Do you mean teach me anything, pa?" asked Bobby, calmly, picking a toothpick.—The Epoch.

Chicago Night Sounds.

Philadelphian (about retiring in house of an old Chicago friend)—Mercy! What's that noise? Has the chimney fallen?

Servant (reassuringly)—Oh, no sir; the chimney is good and safe. I guess it's the young ladies taking off their shoes.—Philadelphia Record.

A Hitherto Vacancy.

Miss Marigold—What's the matter, Mr. Pantley?

Mr. P.—I've got a very bad cold in my head.

Miss M.—I'm glad you've got something in it at last.—Yenowine's News.

The Sky Gratuitous.

Landrum (real estate agent)—This corner lot you may have for $400 a front foot.

Dingham (prospecting)—Isn't that a trifle steep?

Landrum—Steep! No! Just look at the magnificent sky over this lot that I don't change anything for!—Yenowine's News.

A Polite Boy.

Fond Mother—Little Dick is a perfect gentlemen, bless his little heart! Coming down stairs he politely stepped aside and allowed Mrs. Heavyweight to precede him; didn't you, darling?

Little Dick—Yes, mamma; I was 'fraid she might stumble.—Philadelphia Record.

Two Pictures.

THE BOORISH HUSBAND.

Wife (after putting on a new dress)—Well, John, how do you think I look in it?

Husband (without raising his eyes from his paper)—I guess it's all right.

W.—But, John, you might look at it.

H.—Oh, hang it! don't disturb me.

W. (with a little gurgle in her throat)—Well, John, it was to please you that I had it made.

H. (reading his paper)—It'll do pretty well, I guess.

W.—But you haven't looked at it yet.

H.—Don't bother me. Don't you see I'm reading?

W.—But, John——

H.—Don't bother me!

W.—If you would just say——

H.—You are too vain.

W.—Oh, my!

H. (gruffly)—Yes, you are.

W. (hysterically)—And it was to please you that I had it made, and I thought——

H. (impatiently)—Oh, pshaw!

THE KIND HUSBAND.

W. (with a sweet smile on her rosy lips)—How does this dress become me, John?

H. (looking up from his paper)—Why, my pet, it fits you like a glove.

W. (with a little giggle—a happy one)—Don't it now, John?

H. (throwing his paper aside and looking at her with a world of affection in his eyes)—It sets off your beauty splendidly.

W. (with a pretty pout)—Do you think I am beautiful?

H. (emphatically)—To me you are the most beautiful woman in the world.

W. (coming over and kissing him)—Do you think so, John?

H. (effusively)—Think so? I am certain of it. You are the star of my life. My kind, my sweet little wife.

W. (delightedly) — Oh, John! — Boston Courier.

A Little Mistake.

A quiet man with a very florid face was in a crowd of hotel loungers up town the other night, and the discussion turned upon "beating" the weighing machines which respectfully request that a nickel be put into the slot. One fellow could beat it with a wire pushed into it until it touched the spring which puts the weighing machinery at work and lets the needle loose. Another made it work by inserting a knife blade, and another put in a tinfoil nickel nicely adjusted as to size and shape. The quiet young man said soberly: "Why put in anything? Blow into the slot," and jumping upon the platform he fastened his mouth over the slot and puffing out his cheeks threw a small cyclone into the works.

Sure enough the old thing worked and the needle registered his weight at 150.

"Well, I declare," said one man.

"I'll be blowed," said another, with a view of proprieties.

"Try it," said the young man, "it's easy."

So they all tried it; puffed and blew and distended their cheeks until every one of them was tired; but it didn't work.

"Blow harder."

They all blew until exhausted, and still the needle never budged.

"That's funny," and the young man stepped up, blew into the hole, and it again worked nicely.

"Why can't we do it?"

"Oh, you forgot to put a nickel in your mouth first."

The crowd fell down.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Potentate Personalities.

The czar of Russia found an excelsior torpedo in his terrapin on Tuesday. The chefski was immediately blown up.

Queen Victoria is preparing, with her own hand a pot of pickled peppers for the German emperor.

Emperor Francis Josef is said to be quite willing to dye his whiskers blue, should the czar and Emperor William desire it.

King Milan is now striving to have Queen Nathalie's birth annulled, so that the woman will never in reality have existed.

The sultan of Morocco is financially strapped; and, to recoup his fallen fortunes, has commanded a leading subject to make a will in the sultan's favor and have it probated.

Alfonso of Spain has cut four teeth within two months, and the safety of the dynasty seems assured.—Puck.

BILL NYE ON DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

His Experience with Wall Papering and Turkish Baths for Home Use.

There are a great many luxuries which we may treat ourselves to, and do it very economically, too, if we will go at it right. In this way we can, at a slight expense, have those comforts and even luxuries for which we would otherwise pay a great price.

For instance, I economized once in the matter of paper hanging, deciding that I would save the paper hanger's bill and put the money into preferred trotting stock.

So I read a recipe in a household hint, which went on to state how one should make and apply paste to wall paper, how to begin, how to apply the paper and all that. The paste was made by uniting flour, water and glue in such a way as to secure the paper to the wall and yet leave it smooth, according to the recipe. First the walls had to be "sized," however.

I took a tape measure and sized the walls.

Next I began to prepare the paste and cook some in a large milk pan. It looked very repulsive indeed, but it looked so much better than it smelled that I did not mind. Then I put about five cents' worth of it on one roll of paper, and got up on a chair to begin. My idea was to apply it to the wall mostly, but the chair tipped, and so I papered the piano and my wife on the way down. My wife gasped for breath, but soon tore a hole through the paper so she could breathe, and then she laughed at me. That is the reason I took another end of the paper and repapered her face. I cannot bear to have any one laugh at me when I am myself unhappy.

It was good paste, if you merely desired to disfigure a piano or a wife, but otherwise it would not stick at all. I did not like it. I was mad about it. But my wife seemed quite stuck on it. She hasn't got it all out of her hair yet.

Then a man dropped in to see me about some money that I had hoped to pay him that morning, and he said the paste need more glue, and a quart of molasses. I [illegible] some more glue, and the last drop of glue we had in the house. It made a mass [illegible] like unbaked ginger snaps, and s[illegible] as I imagine the deluge did at low tide.

I next proceeded to paper the room. Sometimes the paper would adhere, and then it would refrain from adhering. When I got around the room I had gained ground so fast at the top, and lost time at the bottom of the walls so much, that I had to put in a wedge of paper two feet wide at the bottom, and tapering to a point at the top, in order to cover the space. This gave the room the air of one that had been toyed with by an impatient cyclone.

I went to bed very weary, and abraded in places. I had paste in my pockets, and bronze up my nose. In the night I could hear the paper crack. Just as I would get almost to sleep, it would pop. That was because the paper was contracting and trying to bring the dimensions of the room down to fit it.

In the morning the room had shrunken so that the carpet did not fit, and the paper hung in large molasses covered welts on the walls. It looked real grotesque. I got a paper hanger to come and look at it. He did so.

"And what would you advise me to do with it, sir?" I asked, with a degree of deference which I had never before shown to a paper hanger.

"Well, I can hardly say at first. It is a very bad case. You see, the glue and stuff have made the paper and wrinkles so hard now, that it would cost a great deal to blast it off. Do you own the house?"

"Yes, sir. That is, I have paid one-half the purchase price, and there is a mortgage for the balance."

"Oh. Well, then you are all right," said the paper hanger, with a gleam of hope in his eye. "Let it go on the mortgage."

So I did.

Then I had to economize again, so I next resorted to the home method of administering the Turkish bath. You can get a Turkish bath in that way at a cost of four and one-half to five cents, which is fully as good as one which will cost you a dollar or more in some places.

I read it in a paper. My wife said she would help me. So she read the directions, and I got out the alcohol lamp. There are two methods of administering the low price Turkish bath at home. One consists in placing the person to be treated in a cane seat chair, and then putting a pan of hot water beneath this chair. Ever and anon a hot stone or a hot flat iron is put into the water by means of tongs, and thus the water is kept boiling, the steam rising in thick masses about the person in the chair, who is carefully concealed in a large blanket. Every time a hot flatiron or stone is dropped in the pan it spatters the boiling water up the bare limbs of the person who is being operated upon, and if you are living in the same country with him, you will hear him wrecking his chances beyond the grave by stating things that are really wrong.

The other method and the one I adopted is better than this. You apply the heat by means of a spirit lamp, and no one, to look at a little 15 cent spirit lamp, would believe that it had so much heat in it till he has had one under him as he sits in a wicker chair.

A wicker chair does not interfere with the lamp at all, or cut off the heat, and one is so swathed in blankets and rubber overcoats that he can't help himself.

My wife got me seated that way, and then applied the torch. Did the reader ever get out of a bath and sit down on a wire brush in order to put on his shoes, and feel a sort of startled thrill pervading his whole being? Well, that is good enough as far as it goes, but it does not really count when you have been through the Home Treatment Turkish bath.

After my wife had me arranged, she went into another room to read a new book in which she was greatly interested. While she was thus storing her mind with information, she thought she smelled something burning. She went around all over the house trying to find out what it was. Finally she found out.

It was her husband. I called to her, of course, but she wanted me to wait until she had found out what was on fire. I tried to tell her to come and search my neighborhood, but I presume I did not make myself understood, because I was excited, and the fluff and bloom of my calves were being singed off in a way that may seem funny to others, but not to one who has it to pass through.

It bored me quite a deal. Once the wicker seat of the chair caught fire.

"Oh, heavens," I cried, with a sudden pang of horror, "am I to be thus devoured by the fire fiend? And is there no one to help? Help! Help! Help!"

I also made use of other expressions, but they did not add to the sense of the above.

I perspired very much, indeed, and so the bath was, in a measure, a success; but, oh, what doth it profit a man to gain a bath if he lose his own soul?—Bill Nye in Once a Week.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

Some of Their Harrowing Matrimonial Experiences.

I suppose every husband is subject to what might be called "sudden fits," and I hope every wife tries to bear up under them with philosophical patience. The other Sunday morning, five minutes after Mr. Bowser had gone to his room to get ready for church, he roared at me (Mrs. Bowser) over the bannister:

"Mrs. Bowser, are you the woman of the house or only a lady boarder?"

"Why, dear?"

"Don't why dear me, Mrs. Bowser! If I pretended to be a housekeeper I'd look after things once in a while!"

"Anything wrong?"

"Anything wrong! Do I waste my breath in talking when everything is all right?"

"What is it?" I asked as I reached the head of the stairs.

He held a clean shirt in one hand, and with the other he pointed to it with a dramatic flourish and whispered:

"Buttons!"

"Buttons—how?"

"Not a solitary button on this shirt, and yet you find time to gad down town every day. That's the kind of a wife you are!"

"Mr. Bowser, do you mean shirt buttons?"

"Do I? You don't suppose I'm looking for overcoat buttons on my shirt, do you?"

"Well, then, you haven't had a shirt button on your shirts for ten years. You and all others use collar buttons. Your collar buttons are in the shirt you have on."

It struck him all in a heap. He saw how he had trapped himself, but he went to his room, muttering:

"That's it! She always has an excuse ready for everything."

One awful hot day in July he spoke about changing his socks after his bath, and I told him in the plainest of English that he would find clean ones in his lowest bureau drawer. That night he came home and began:

"Can you tell me what day during the next month you will have two minutes to spare?"

"Why?"

"Because, if you ever get them, perhaps you can devote a few seconds to darning the holes in my socks. I've had to limp around all the afternoon on that account."

"It can't be!"

"Oh, no! You are such a model housekeeper that it can't be, of course! Look here!"

He pulled off his shoes and lo! he had on his heavy winter socks, every thread wool. There were two or three holes, but they were not to be darned until fall, of course.

"Mr. Bowser, where did you get those socks?" I asked.

"Out of the trunk in the clothes press, of course."

"And you go and put on January socks in July! You have six pairs of clean cotton socks in the lower drawer of the bureau."

"I'll bet you $10,000 there isn't even one pair there! I looked through every drawer five times over!"

I took him up and showed him the socks, counting them out pair by pair, and he looked at me very seriously and observed:

"Yes, I see 'em, but were they there when I looked for 'em? How easy for you to have sneaked up and placed 'em here an hour ago!"

He had some wearing apparel which he said I might sell to buy some toys for the baby. I got the clothes down and went through every pocket twice over. In one of the coats I found a receipted bill for $26 worth of lumber, and I laid it on Mr. Bowser's desk. A man came for the clothes and took them away, and three hours later, when Mr. Bowser came home, I told him of my bargain.

"You got just half what he would have paid me," he replied, and the subject was dropped for half an hour. Then all of a sudden he jumped up and exclaimed:

"You've finally done it, just as I expected you would!"

"Done what?"

"I remember that I left a valuable paper in that brown coat. It was a receipted lumber bill, and they may send the bill again any day!"

"I looked in the pockets."

"Oh, yes, you looked! You looked just like any other wife who was in a hurry to get the clothes out of the house and the money in her hand."

I went and got the receipt and asked him if that was the one. He grudgingly admitted that it was and added:

"I presume the old close man found it and returned it. I must reward him for his honesty."

It was only three nights ago that Mr. Bowser took $5 from his wallet and handed it to me with the remark:

"The man won't probably come with the oats until after I have gone in the morning. Take this and pay him." Next morning he sat down to breakfast looking so very sober that I asked:

"Are you sick, Mr. Bowser?"

"I ought to be. When people are robbed they are generally made sick."

"Have you been robbed?"

"I have."

"When?"

"Last night."

"For mercy's sake! but did some one get into our house?"

"I do not know. When I went to bed last night I had $55 in my wallet. This morning I have only $50."

"You don't say!"

"It seems very queer to me, Mrs. Bowser. If you want money why don't you ask for it?"

"You don't think I took your money, do you?"

"It's very mysterious."

"Why, say, you gave me that five for the feed man."

Mr. Bowser's countenance fell just twenty-six inches in the next two seconds, and in his confusion he agreed that the money was now accounted for all right. However, on second thought he observed:

"I will overlook it this time, Mrs. Bowser, but don't presume upon my good nature in future!"—Detroit Free Press.

HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

No Abatement of the "Condition" of His Former Communication—A Revision of the Customs Duties a Necessity—The Statesmen Given a Going Over for Their Sins of Omission and Commission—The Sackville Episode Reviewed—Financial, Land and Indian Questions Considered.

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES: As you assemble for the discharge of the duties you have assumed as the representatives of a free and generous people, your meeting is marked by an interesting and impressive incident. With the expiration of the present session of the congress the first century of our constitutional existence as a nation will be completed. Our survival for 100 years is not sufficient to assure us that we no longer have dangers to fear in the maintenance with all its promised blessings of a government founded on the freedom of the people. The time rather admonishes us to soberly inquire whether in the past we have always closely kept in the course of safety and whether we have, before us a way plain and clear which leads to happiness and perpetuity. The citizen of our republic in its early day rigidly insisted upon full compliance with the letter of this bond, and saw stretching out before him a clear field for individual endeavor. His tribute to the support of his government was measured by the cost of its economical maintenance, and he was secure in the enjoyment of the remaining recompense of his steady and contented toil. In those days the frugality of the people was stamped upon their government and was enforced by the free, thoughtful and intelligent suffrage of the citizens. Combinations, monopolies and aggregations of capital were either avoided or sternly regulated and restrained. The pomp and glitter of governments less free, offered no temptation and presented no delusion to the plain people who, side by side in friendly competition, wrought for the ennoblement and dignity of man, for the solution of the problem of free government and for the achievement of the grand destiny awaiting the land which God had given them. A century has passed. Our cities are the abiding places of wealth and luxury; our manufactures yield fortunes never dreamed of by the fathers of the republic; our business men are madly striving in the race for riches, and immense aggregations of capital outrun the imagination in the magnitude of their undertakings.

When the experiment of our government was undertaken the chart adopted for our guidance was the constitution. Departure from the lines there laid down is failure. It is only by a strict adherence to the direction they indicate and by restraint within the limitations they fix that we can furnish proof to the world of the fitness of the American people for self-government. The equal and exact justice of which we boast as the underlying principle of our institutions should not be confined to the relations of our citizens to each other. The government itself is under bond to the American people, that in the exercise of its functions and powers it will deal with the body of our citizens in a manner scrupulously honest and fair, and absolutely just. It has agreed that American citizenship shall be the only credential necessary to justify the claim of equality before the law, and that no condition in life shall give rise to discrimination in the treatment of the people by the government.

We view with pride and satisfaction this bright picture of our country's growth and prosperity. While only a closer scrutiny develops a somber shading, upon more careful inspection we find the wealth and luxury of our cities mingled with poverty and wretchedness and unremunerative toil. A crowded and constantly increasing urban population suggests the impoverishment of rural sections and discontent with agricultural pursuits. The farmer's son, not satisfied with his father's simple and laborious life, joins the eager chase for easily acquired wealth. We discover that the fortunes realized by our manufacturers are no longer solely by reward of sturdy industry and enlightened foresight, but that they result from the discriminating favor of the government, and are largely built upon undue exaction from the masses of our people. The gulf between employers and the employed is constantly widening and classes are rapidly forming, one comprising the very rich and powerful, while in another are found the toiling poor.

As we view the achievement of aggregated capital, we discover the existence of trusts, combinations and monopolies, while the citizen is struggling far in the rear or is trampled to death beneath an iron heel. Corporations, which should be the carefully restrained creatures of the law and the servants of the people, are fast becoming the people's masters. Still congratulating ourselves on the wealth and prosperity of our country, and complacently contemplating every incident of change is separable from these conditions, it is our duty as patriotic citizens to inquire at the present stage of our progress as to the kind of the government made with the people has been kept and performed.

Instead of limiting the tribute drawn from our citizens to the necessities of its economical administration, the government persists in exacting from the substance of the people taxes which unnecessarily swell the income of a small but powerful minority. The people must soil be taxed for the support of the government under the operation of tariff laws, but to the extent that the money of our citizens are inordinately burdened beyond any useful public purpose, and for the benefit of a favored few, the government, under pretense of an exercise of its taxing power, enters gratuitously into partnership with these favorites to their advantage and to the injury of a vast majority of our people. This is not equality before the law. The existing situation is injurious to the health of our entire body politic. It stifles in those all patriotic love of country and substitutes in its place selfish greed and grasping avarice. Devotion to American citizenship for its own sake and for what it should accomplish, as a motive to our nation's advancement and the happiness of all our people, is displaced by the assumption that the government, instead of being the embodiment of equality, is but an instrumentality through which especial and individual advantages are to be gained.

The arrogance of this assumption is uncovered. It appears in the sordid disregard of all but personal interests, in the refusal to abate for the benefit of others one iota of selfish advantages and in combinations to perpetuate such advantages through efforts to control legislation and improperly influence the suffrage of the people. The forbearance of those not included within the circle of these beneficiaries, when fully realized, will surely arouse irritation and discontent. Our farmers, long suffering and patient, struggling in the race of life with the hardest and most unremitting toil, will not fail to see, in spite of misrepresentations and misleading fallacies, that they are obliged to accept such prices for their product as fixed in foreign markets, where they compete with the farmers of the world; that their lands are declining in value while their debts increase; and that without compensating favors they are forced by the action of the government to pay for the benefit of others such enhanced prices for the things they need, that the scanty returns of their labor fail to furnish their support or leave no margin for accumulation. Our workingmen, enfranchised from all delusions and no longer frightened by the cry that their wages are endangered by a just revision of our tariff laws, will reasonably demand through such revision steadier employment, cheaper means of living in their homes, freedom for themselves and their children from the doom of perpetual servitude, and an open door to their advancement beyond the limits of a laboring class. Others of our citizens, whose comforts and expenditures are measured by moderate salaries and fixed incomes will insist upon the fairness and justice of cheapening the cost of necessaries for themselves and their families.

When to the selfishness of the beneficiaries of unjust discrimination under our laws there shall be added the discontent of those who suffer from such discrimination, we will realize the fact that the beneficent purposes of our government, dependent upon the patriotism and contentment of our people, are endangered. Communism is a hateful thing, and a menace to peace and organized government. But the communism of combined wealth and capital, the outgrowth of overweening cupidity and selfishness, which insidiously undermines the justice and integrity of free institutions, is not less dangerous than the communism of opposed poverty and invites it, exasperated by injustice and discontent, to attack with wild disorder the citadel of rule. He mocks the people who proposes that the government shall protect the rich, and that they in turn will care for the laboring poor. Any intermediary between the people and their government or the least delegation of the care and protection the government owes to the humblest citizen in the land makes the boast of free institutions a glimmering delusion and the pretended boon of American citizenship a shameless imposition.

A just and sensible revision of our tariff laws should be made for the relief of those of our countrymen who suffer under present conditions. Such a revision should receive the support of all who love that justice and equality to American citizenship; of all who realize that in this justice and equality our government finds its strength and its power to protect the citizen and his property; of all who believe that the contented competence and comfort of many accord better with the spirit of our institutions than colossal fortunes unfairly gathered in the hands of a few; of all who appreciate that the forbearance and fraternity among our people, which recognize the value of every American interest, are the surest guarantee of our national progress, and of all who desire to see the products of American skill and ingenuity in every market of the world with a resultant restoration of American commerce.

The necessity of the reduction of our revenue is so apparent as to be generally conceded, but the means by which this end shall be accomplished and the time of direct benefits which shall result to our citizens, present a controversy of the utmost importance. There should be no scheme accepted as satisfactory by which the burdens of the people are only apparently removed. Extravagant appropriations of public money with all their demoralizing consequences, should not be tolerated, either as a means of relieving the treasury of its present surplus or as furnishing pretexts for resisting a proper reduction in tariff rates. Existing evils and injustice should be honestly recognized, boldly met and effectively remedied. There should be no cessation of the struggle until a plan is perfected, fair and conservative toward existing industries, but which will reduce the cost to consumers of the necessaries of life while it provides for our manufacturers the advantage of free raw materials and permits no injury to the interests of American labor. The cause for which the battle is waged is comprised within lines clearly and distinctly defined, and it should never be compromised. It is the people's cause.

It can not be denied that the selfish and private interests which are so persistently heard when efforts are made to deal in a just and comprehensive manner with our tariff laws are related to, if they are not responsible for, the sentiment largely prevailing among the people that the general government is the fountain of individual and private aid; that it may be expected to relieve with paternal care the distress of citizens and communities, and that from the fullness of its treasury it should, upon the slightest possible pretext of promoting the general good, apply public funds to the benefit of localities and individuals. Nor can it be denied that there is a growing assumption that, as against the government and in favor of private claims and interests, the usual rules and limitations of business principles and just dealing should be waived. These ideas have been unhappily much encouraged by legislative acquiescence. Relief from contracts made with the government is too easily accorded in favor of the citizen. The failure to support claims against the government by proofs is often supplied by no better consideration than the wealth of the government and the poverty of the claimant. Gratuities in the form of pensions are granted upon no other ground than the needy condition of the pensioner for reasons less valid than the large sums are expended for public buildings and other improvements for which representations scarcely claimed to be related to public needs and necessities. The extent to which the consideration of such matters subordinate and postpone action upon subjects of great public importance, but involving no special private or partisan interest, should arrest attention and lead to reformation.

A few of the numerous illustrations of this condition may be stated. The crowded condition of the calendar of the supreme court, and the delay to suitors and denial of justice resulting therefrom, has been strongly urged upon the attention of congress with a plan for the relief of the situation approved by those well able to judge of its merits. While this subject remains without effective consideration many laws have been passed providing for the holding of terms of inferior courts at places to suit the convenience of localities, or to lay the foundation of an application for the erection of a new public building.

Repeated recommendations have been submitted for the amendment and change of the laws relating to our public lands so that their spoliation and diversion to other uses than as homes for honest settlers might be prevented. While a measure to meet this conceded necessity of reform remains awaiting the action of congress, many claims to the public lands and application for their donation in favor of states and individuals have been allowed.

A plan in aid of Indian management, recommended by those well informed as containing valuable features in furtherance of the solution of the Indian problem, has thus far failed of legislative sanction, while grants of doubtful expediency to railroad corporations, permitting them to pass through Indian reservations, have greatly multiplied.

The propriety and necessity of the erection of one or more prisons for the confinement of United States convicts, and a postoffice building in the national capital, are not disputed. But these needs yet remain unanswered, while scores of public buildings have been erected where their necessity for public purposes is not apparent.

A revision of our pension laws could easily be made, which would rest upon just principles and provide for every worthy applicant. But while our general pension laws remain confused and imperfect, but deeds of private pension laws are annually passed, which are the sources of unjust discrimination and popular demoralization.

Appropriation bills for the support of the government are defeated by items and provisions foreign to private ends, and it is freely asserted by responsible and experienced parties that a bill appropriating money for public internal improvements would fail to meet with favor unless it contained more for local and private advantage than for public benefit. These statements can be much emphasized by an ascertainment of the proportion of federal legislation which either begins upon the floors of the house of representatives or which upon examination develops such a motive power.

And yet the people wait and expect from their chosen representatives such patriotic action as will advance the welfare of the entire country; and this expectation can only be answered by the performance of public duty with unselfish purpose. Our growth among the nations of the earth and our success in accomplishing the work God has given the American people to do require of those entrusted with the making and execution of our laws perfect devotion above all other things to the public good.

This devotion will lead us to strongly resist all impatient encroachments upon the limitations of federal power, and to persistently check the increasing tendency to extend the scope of federal legislation into the domain of state and local jurisdiction, upon the plea of subserving the public welfare. The preservation of the partitions between proper subjects of federal and local care and regulation is of such importance under the constitution, which is the law of our very existence, that no consideration of expediency or sentiment should tempt us to enter upon doubtful grounds. We have undertaken to discover and proclaim the richest blessings of a free government, with the constitution as our guide. Let us follow the way it points out. It will not mislead us. And surely no one who has taken upon himself the solemn obligation to support and preserve the constitution can find justification or solace for disloyalty in the excuse that he wandered and disobeyed in search of a better way to reach the public welfare than the constitution offers.

What has been said is deemed not inappropriate at a time when, from a century's height, we view the way already trod by the American people and attempt to discover their future path. The seventh president of the United States—the soldier and statesman, and at all times the firm and brave friend of the people—in vindication of his course as a protector of popular rights and champion of true American citizenship, declared: "The ambition which leads me on is an anxious desire and a fixed determination to restore to the people unimpaired the sacred trust they have confided to my charge. To heal the wounds of the constitution and to preserve it from further violation. To persuade my countrymen, so far as I may, that it is not in a splendid government supported by powerful monopolies and aristocratic establishments that they will find happiness, or their liberties' protection, but in a plain system, void of pomp—protecting all and granting favors to none—dispensing its blessings like the dews of heaven, unseen and unfelt save in the freshness and beauty they contribute to produce. It is such a government that the genius of our people require—such an one only under which our states may remain, for ages to come, united, prosperous, and free."

In pursuance of a constitutional provision requiring the president from time to time to give to the congress information of the state of the Union, I have the satisfaction to announce that the close of the year finds the United States in the enjoyment of domestic tranquility and at peace with all the nations. Since my last annual message our foreign relations have been strengthened and improved by performance of international good offices and by new and renewed treaties of amity, commerce and reciprocal extradition of criminals. Those international questions which still await settlement lie all reasonably within the domain of amicable negotiation, and there is no existing subject of dispute between the United States and any foreign power that is not susceptible of satisfactory adjustment by frank diplomatic treatment. The questions between Great Britain and the United States relating to the rights of American fishermen under treaty and international comity in the territorial waters of Canada and Newfoundland, I regret to say are not yet satisfactorily adjusted. These matters were fully treated in my message to the senate of Feb. 20, 1888, together with which a convention concluded under my authority with her majesty's government on the 15th of February last, for the removal of all causes of misunderstanding, was submitted by me for the approval of the senate.

This treaty having been rejected by the senate I transmitted a message to the congress on the 23d of August last, reviewing the transaction and submitting for consideration certain recommendations for legislation concerning the important questions involved. Afterwards, on the 12th of September, in response to a resolution of the sen-

state, I again communicated fully all the information in my possession as to the action of the government of Canada affecting the commercial relations between the Dominion and the United States, including the treatment of American fishing vessels in the ports and waters of British North America. The communications have all been published, and therefore opened to the knowledge of both houses of congress, although two were addressed to the senate alone. Comment upon or repetition of their contents would be superfluous, and I am not aware that anything has since occurred which should be added to the facts therein stated. Therefore, I merely repeat as applicable to the present time the statement which will be found in my message to the senate of Sept. 12 last, "That since March 3, 1887, no case has been reported to the department of state wherein complaint has been made of unfriendly or unlawful treatment of American vessels on the part of the Canadian authorities, in which reparation was not promptly and satisfactorily obtained by the United States consul general at Halifax.

Having essayed in the discharge of my duty to procure by negotiation the settlement of a long-standing cause of dispute and to remove a constant menace to the good relations of the two countries, and continuing of the opinion that the treaty of February last, which failed to receive the approval of the senate, did supply "A satisfactory, practical and final adjustment upon a basis honorable and just to both parties of the difficult and vexed question to which it related," and having subsequently and unavailingly recommended other legislation to congress which I hoped would suffice to meet the exigency created by the rejection of the treaty, I now again invoke the earnest and immediate attention of the congress to the condition of this important question as it now stands before them and the country and for the settlement of which I am deeply solicitous.

Near the close of the month of October last, occurrences of a deeply regretable nature were brought to my knowledge, which made it my painful but imperative duty to obtain with as little delay as possible a new personal channel of diplomatic intercourse in this country with the government of Great Britain. The correspondence in relation to this incident will in due course be laid before you and will disclose the unpardonable conduct of the official referred to in his interference by advice and counsel with the suffrages of American citizens in the very crisis of the presidential election, then near at hand, and also in his subsequent public declarations to justify his action, superadding impugnment of the executive and senate of the United States, in connection with important questions now pending in controversy between the two governments.

The offense thus committed was most grave, involving disastrous possibilities to the good relations of the United States and Great Britain, constituting a gross breach of diplomatic privilege and an invasion of the purely domestic affairs and essential sovereignty of the government to which the envoy was accredited. Having first fulfilled the just demands of international comity by affording full opportunity for her majesty's government to act in relief of the situation, I considered prolongation of discussion to be unwarranted, and the envoy was declined to further recognize the diplomatic character of the person whose continuance in such function would destroy that mutual confidence which is essential to the good understanding of the two governments, and was inconsistent with the welfare and self-respect of the government of the United States. The usual interchange of communication has since continued through her majesty's legation in this city.

The president then calls attention to the necessity of action for the protection of the fur seal industry in Behring sea, and hopes soon to submit a satisfactory solution of the matter to the senate; also to the importance of establishing the boundary line between Alaska and British Columbia; the desirability of reaching an agreement with Great Britain in regard to alleviating the dangers to life and property on the great lakes by reciprocal action, which has not been reached because Canada has not acted concurrently with us; the protection of our citizens of French origin from the claims of that government for military service, in which connection he sees no occasion for us to recede from our position on the subject. He refers feelingly and eulogistically to the late emperor of Germany, and then calls attention briefly to the state of affairs in Samoa, referring congress to the statements already laid before it on that subject.

"I announce with sincere regret that Hayti has again become the theater of insurrection, disorder and bloodshed. The titular government of President Salomon has been forcibly overthrown, and he driven out of the country to France, where he has since died. The tenure of power has been so unstable amid the war of factions that has ensued since the expulsion of President Salomon, that no government constituted by the will of the Haytian people has been recognized as administering responsibly the affairs of that country. Our representative has been instructed to abstain from interference between the warring factions, and a vessel of our navy has been sent to Haytien waters to sustain our minister and for the protection of the persons and property of American citizens. Due precautions have been taken to enforce our neutrality laws and prevent our territory from becoming the base of military supplies for either of the warring factions. Under color of a blockade, of which no reasonable notice had been given and which does not appear to have been efficiently maintained, a seizure of vessels under the American flag has been reported, and in consequence measures to prevent and redress any molestation of any of our innocent merchantmen have been adopted.

Proclamation was duly made on the 9th day of November, 1887, of the conventional extensions of the treaty of June 3, 1886, with Hawaii under which relations of such special and beneficial intercourse have been created.

The president then announces that so far the Chinese government has not made any claim on the money appropriated for indemnity to Chinese for injuries inflicted by mobs in this country, and hopes that the cessation of the influx of Chinese into this country will remove a cause of unkind feeling. He also refers briefly to our relations with Japan, Corea, Persia and other countries, and announces the conclusion of a reciprocity treaty with Mexico, congratulates Brazil on the total abolishment of slavery, and states our relations with China, Peru, Venezuela, and other South American countries, none of which are anything but friendly. Of the "All-American" congress he says:

As authorized by the congress, preliminary steps have been taken for the assembling at the capital during the coming year of the representatives of South and Central American states, together with those of Mexico, Hayti and San Domingo, to discuss and by important monetary and commercial topics. Excepting in those cases where, from reasons of contiguity of territory and the existence of a border line incapable of being guarded, reciprocal commercial treaties may be found expedient, it is believed that freer mutual exchange of products can be most advantageously arranged by independent but co-operative legislation. In the mode last mentioned the control of our taxation for revenue will be always retained in our own hands, restricted by conventional agreements with other governments.

With the rapid increase of immigration to our shores and the facilities of modern travel, abuses of the generous privileges afforded by our naturalization laws call for their careful revision. The easy and unguarded manner in which certificate of American citizenship can be obtained has induced a class, unfortunately large, to avail themselves of the opportunity to become absolved from allegiance to their native land, and yet by a foreign residence to escape any just duty and contribution of service to the country of their proposed adoption. Thus while evading the duties of citizenship to the United States, they may make prompt claim for its national protection and demand its intervention in their behalf. International complications of a serious nature arise, and the correspondence of the state department discloses the great number and complexity of the questions which have been raised. Our laws regulating the issue of passports should be carefully revised, and the institution of a central bureau of registration at the capital is again strongly recommended. By this means full particulars of each case of naturalization in the United States would be secured and properly indexed and recorded, and thus many cases of spurious citizenship would be detected, and unjust responsibilities would be avoided.

The reorganization of the consular service is a matter of serious importance to our national interests. The number of existing principal consular offices is believed to be greater than is at all necessary for the conduct of the public business. It could not be our policy to maintain more than a moderate number of principal offices, each supported by a salary sufficient to enable the incumbent to live in comfort, and so distributed as to secure the convenient supervision, through subordinate agencies, of affairs over a considerable district. I repeat the recommendations heretofore made by me, that the appropriations for the maintenance of our diplomatic and consular service should be recast; that the so called notarial or unofficial fees which our representatives abroad are now permitted to treat as personal perquisites should be forbidden; that a system of consular inspection should be instituted; and that a limited number of secretaries of legation at large should be authorized.

Preparations for the centennial celebration on April 30, 1889, of the inauguration of George Washington as president of the United States at the city of New York have been made by a voluntary organization of the citizens of that locality, and believing that an opportunity should be afforded for the expression of the interest felt throughout the country with this event, I respectfully recommend fitting and co-operate action by congress on behalf of the people of the United States.

The report of the secretary of the treasury exhibits in detail the condition of our national finances and the operations of the several branches of the government related to his department.

The total ordinary revenues of the government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1888, amounted to $979,966,074.76, of which $816,091,172.66 was received from customs duties and $124,296,871.99 from internal revenue taxes. The total receipts from all sources exceeded those for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, by $7,862,797.10. The ordinary expenditures of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, were $251,058,958.67, leaving a surplus of $119,612,116.09. The decrease in these expenditures as compared with the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, was $8,878,520.35, notwithstanding payment of more than $5,000,000 for pensions in excess of what was paid for that purpose in the latter mentioned year. The revenues of the government for the year ending June 30, 1889, ascertained for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1888, and estimated for the remainder of the time, amount to $877,000,000, and the actual and estimated ordinary expenditures for the same year are $273,000,000, leaving an estimated surplus of $104,000,000. The estimated receipts for the year ending June 30, 1890, are $877,000,000, and the estimated ordinary expenditures for the same time are $275,767,488.81, showing a surplus of $101,232,511.66.

The foregoing statements of surplus do not take into account the sum necessary to be expended to meet the requirements of the sinking fund act, amounting to more than $47,000,000 annually.

The cost of collecting customs revenues for the last fiscal year was 3.44 per cent.; for the year 1885 it was 3.77 per cent. The excess of internal revenue taxes collected during the last fiscal year over those collected for the year ended June 30, 1887, was $5,469,724.26, and the cost of collecting the revenue decreased from 3.4 per cent. in 1887 to less than 3.2 per cent. for the last year. The tax collected on oleomargarine was $721,948.64 for the year ending June 30, 1887, and $864,159.88 for the following year.

[Referring to the purchase of bonds which has been going since April last the president gives the total amount and cost, and says the saving to the government represented by the transactions aggregates about $27,165,000. He then proceeds:]

At first sight this would seem to be a profitable and sensible transaction on the part of the government, but as suggested by the secretary of the treasury, the surplus thus expended for the purchase of bonds was money drawn from the people in excess of any actual need of the government and was so expected rather than allowed to remain idle in the treasury. If this surplus under the operation of just and equitable law had been left in the hands of the people it would have been worth in their business at least 6 per cent. per annum. Deducting from the amount of interest upon the principal and premium on the bonds, and the time they had to run, at the rate of 6 per cent., the saving of 27½ per cent. inured to the people by the purchase of such bonds, the loss would be reduced to $5,165,000.

This calculation would seem to demonstrate that if excessive and unnecessary taxation is continued and the government is forced to pursue this policy of purchasing its own bonds at the premiums which it will be necessary to pay, the loss to the people will be hundreds of millions of dollars. Since the purchase of bonds was undertaken, as mentioned, no any all that have been offered were at last accepted. It has been made quite apparent that the government was in danger of being subjected to combinations to raise their prices, as appears by the instance cited by the secretary of the offering of bonds of the par value of only $325,000 so often that the aggregate of sums demanded for their purchase amounted to more than $19,750,000. Notwithstanding the large sums paid out in the purchase of bonds, the surplus in the treasury on the 30th day of November, 1888, was $52,234,610.01, after deducting $20,000,000 just drawn out for the payment of pensions.

The secretary of the treasury's recommendations, the most important of which is that the coinage of silver dollars be suspended, are indorsed. Also reports of the war office and the operations of supplying heavy ordnance, etc., are summarized, and the secretary's recommendations adopted and urged upon congress. Reference is made to the imprisoned Apaches; and the report from them is stated to be satisfactory, but he opposes returning them to their reservation.

The death of Gen. Sheridan in August last was a national affliction. The army then lost the grandest of its chiefs. The country lost a brave and experienced soldier, a wise and discreet counselor and a modest and sensible man. Those who in any manner came within the range of his personal association will never fail to pay deserved and willing homage to his greatness and the glory of his career; but they will cherish with more tender sensibility the loving memory of his simple, generous and considerate nature.

The report of the secretary of the navy demonstrates very intelligent management in that important department and discloses the most satisfactory progress in the work of reconstructing the navy made during the past year. Of the ships in course of construction, five, viz.: the Charleston, Baltimore, Yorktown, Vesuvius and the Petrel, have in that time been launched and are rapidly approaching completion; and in addition to the above the Philadelphia, the San Francisco, the Newark, the Bennington, the Concord and the Herreshoff torpedo boat are all under contract for delivery to the department during the next year. The progress already made and being made gives good ground for the expectation that these eleven vessels will be incorporated as a part of the American navy within the next twelve months.

The report shows that notwithstanding the large expenditures for new construction and the additional labor they involve, the total ordinary or current expenditure of the department for the three years ending June 30, 1888, are less than by more than 20 per cent than such expenditures for the three years ending June 30, 1884.

The message then takes up the postmaster general's report, and after going over the figures says: The increase for correspondence with foreign countries during the past three years is gratifying, and is especially noticable and exceptional with Central and South American states and with Mexico. As the greater part of mail matter exchanged with these countries is commercial in its character, this increase is evidence of the improved business relations with them. The practical operation of the parcel post conventions so far as negotiated has served to fulfill the most favorable predictions as to their benefits. In January last a general postal convention was negotiated with the Dominion of Canada, which went into operation on March 1, and which practically makes one postal territory of the United States and Canada. Under it merchandise parcels may now be transmitted through the mails at fourth class rates of postage.

A bill proposed by the postmaster general, was introduced at the last session of the congress, by which a uniform standard in the amount of gross receipts would fix the right of a community to a public building to be erected by the government for postoffice purposes. It was demonstrated that, aside from the public convenience and the promotion of harmony among citizens invariably disturbed by chance of leasings and of site, it was a measure of the highest economy and of sound business judgment. It was found that the government was paying in rents at the rate of from 7 to 10 per cent. per annum on what the cost of such public buildings would be. A very great advantage resulting from such a law would be the prevention of a large number of bills constantly introduced for the erection of public buildings at places, and involving expenditures, not justified by public necessity. I trust that this measure will become a law at the present session of congress.

Of the total number of postmasters 54,874 are of the fourth class. These, of course, receive no allowances whatever for expenses in the service, and their compensation is fixed by percentages on receipts at their respective offices. This rate of compensation may have been and probably was, at some time, just; but the standard has remained unchanged through the several reductions in the rates of postage. Such reductions have necessarily cut down the compensation of these officials, while it undoubtedly increased the business performed by them. Simple justice requires attention to this subject, to the end that fourth class postmasters may receive at least an equivalent to that which the law itself fixing the rate intended for them.

Another class of postal employes whose condition seems to demand legislation is that of clerks in postoffices, and I call special attention to the repeated recommendations of the postmaster general for their classification. Proper legislation of this character for the relief of carriers in the free-delivery service has been frequent. Provision is made for their promotion; for substitutes for them on vacation, for substitutes for holidays and limiting their hours of labor. Seven million dollars has been appropriated for the current year to provide for them, though the total number of offices where they are employed is but 358 for the past fiscal year, with an estimated increase for the current year of but 40, while the total appropriation for all clerks in offices throughout the United states is $5,950,000.

The legislation affecting the relations of the government with railroads is in need of revision. While for the most part the railroad companies throughout the country have cordially co-operated with the postoffice department in rendering excellent service, yet under the law as it stands, while the compensation to them for carrying the mail is limited and regulated, and although railroads are made postroads by law, there is no authority reposed anywhere to compel the owner of a railroad to take and carry the United States mail. The only alternative provided by act of congress in case of refusal is for the postmaster general to send mail forward by pony express. This is but an illustration of ill-fitting legislation reasonable and proper at the time of its enactment, but long since outgrown and requiring readjustment.

In the report of the secretary of the interior, which will be laid before you, the condition of the various branches of our domestic affairs connected with that department and its operations during the past year are fully exhibited. But a brief reference to some of the subjects discussed in this able and interesting report can here be made, but I commend the entire report to the attention of the congress, and trust that the sensible and valuable recommendations it contains will secure careful consideration. I can not too strenuously insist upon the importance of proper measures to insure a right disposition of our public lands, not only as a matter of present justice, but in forecast of the consequences to future generations. The broad, rich acres of our agricultural plains have been long preserved by nature to become her untrammeled gift to people civilized and free, upon which should rest, in well distributed ownership, the numerous homes of enlightened, equal, and fraternal citizens. They came to national possession with the warning example in our eyes of the entail of iniquities in landed proprietorship, which other countries permitted and still suffer. We have no excuse for the violation of principles urgently taught by reason and example, nor for the allowance of pretexts which have so oftimes exposed our land to colossal greed. Laws which open the door to fraudulent acquisition, or administrations which permits favor to rapacious seizure by a favored few of expanded areas that many should enjoy are accessory to offenses against our national welfare and humanity which are not to be too severely condemned or punished. It is gratifying to know that something has been done at last to redress the injuries to people and check the perilous tendency of the reckless waste of national domain that over 80,000,000 acres have been wrested from illegal usurpation, improvidant grants and fraudulent entries and claims to be taken for the homestead of honest industry—although less than the greater areas thus unjustly lost—must afford a profound gratification to right-feeling citizens, as it is a recompense for the labors and struggles of the recovery.

Our dear experience ought sufficiently to urge the speedy enactment of measures of legislation which will confine the future disposition of our remaining agricultural lands to the uses of actual husbandry and genuine homes. Nor should our vast tracts of so-called desert lands be yielded up to the monopoly of corporations or grasping individuals, as appears to be much the tendency under the existing statute. These lands require but the supply of water to become fertile and productive. It is a problem of great moment how most wisely for the public good that factor shall be furnished. I can n t but think it perilous to suffer either these lands or the sources of their irrigation to fall into the hands of monopolies, which by such means may exercise lordship over areas dependent on their treatment for productiveness. Already steps have been taken to secure accurate and scientific information of the conditions which is the prime basis of intelligent action. Until this shall be gained the course of wisdom appears clearly to lie in a suspension of further disposal which only promises to create rights antagonistic to the common interest. No harm can follow this cautionary conduct. The land will remain and the public good presents no demand for hasty dispossession of national ownership and control.

I commend also the recommendations that appropriate measures be taken to complete the adjustment of the various grants made to the states for internal improvements, and of swamp and overflowed lands, as well as to adjudicate and finally determine the validity and extent of the numerous private land claims. All these are elements of great injustice and peril to the settlers upon the localities affected, and now that their existence is more pressing, we should fix as soon as possible their bounds and terminate the threats of trouble which arise from uncertainty.

The condition of our Indian population continues to improve, and the proofs multiply that the transforming change so much to be desired which shall substitute for barbarism enlightenment and civilizing education is in favorable progress. Our relations with these people during the year have been disturb d by no serious disorders, but rather marked by a better realization of their true interests and increasing confidence and good will. These conditions testify to the value of the higher tone of consid ration and humanity which has governed the later methods of dealing with them, and commend its continued observance. Allotments in severalty have been made on some reservations, until all those entitled to land thereon have had their shares assigned, and the work is still continued. In directing the execution of this duty I have not aimed so much at rapid dispatch as to secure just and fair arrangements which shall best conduce to the objects of the law by producing atisfaction with the results of the allotments made. No measure of general effect has been entered on from which more may be fairly hoped, if it shall be di ccetly administered. It proffers opportunity and inducement to that independence of spirit and life which the Indian peculiarily needs, while at the same time the stability of title affords security against the risks his inexperience of affairs or weakness of character may expose him to in dealing with others. Whenever begun upon any reservation it should be made complete, so that all are brought to the same condition, and as soon as possible community in lands should cease by opening such as remain unallotted to settlement. Familiarity with the ways of industries and successful farmers will perhaps add a healthy emulation which will both instruct and stimulate.

But no agency for the amelioration of this people appears to me so promising as the extension urged by the secretary, of such complete facilities of education as shall at the earliest possible day embrace all teachable Indian youths of both sexes, and retain them with a kindly and beneficent hold until their characters are formed and their faculties and dispositions trained to the sure pursuit of some form of useful industry. Capacity of the Indian no longer needs demonstration. It is established; it remains to make the most of it, and when that shall be done the curse will be lifted, the Indian race saved, and the sin of their oppression redeemed. The time of its accomplishment depends upon the spirit and justice with which it shall be prosecuted. It cannot be too soon for the Indian nor for the interests and good name of the nation.

The average attendance of Indian schools increased over 900 during the year and the total enrollment reached 15,212. The cost of maintenance was not materially raised. The number of teachable Indian youth is now estimated at 40,000, or nearly three times the enrollment of the schools. It is believed the obstacles in the way of instructing all are surmountable, and that the necessary expenditure would be a measure of economy.

The Sioux tribes on the great reservation of Dakota refused to assent to the act passed by congress at its last session for opening a portion of their lands to settlement, notwithstanding modification of the terms was suggested which met most of their objections. Their demand is for immediate payment of the full price of $1.25 per acre for the entire body of land, the occupancy of which they are asked to relinquish. The manner of submission insured their fair understanding of the law, and their action was undoubtedly as thoroughly intelligent as their capacity admitted. It is at least gratifying that no reproach of overreaching can in any manner be brought against the government, however advisable the favora le completion of the negotiation may have been esteemed. I concur in the suggestion of the secretary regarding the Turtle Mountain Indians, the two reservations in California, and the Creeks. They should in my opinion receive immediate attent on.

The number of pensioners added to the rolls during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1888, is 60,252, and an increase of pensions was granted in 45,716 cases. The names of 15,730 pensioners were dropped from the rolls during the year for various causes, and on the close of the year the number of persons of all classes receiving pensions was 452,557. Of these there were 806 survivors of the war of 1812; 10,787 widows of those who served in that war; 16,000 soldiers of the Mexican war, and 5,104 widows of said soldiers. One hundred and two different rates of pensions are paid to these beneficiaries, ranging from $2 to $416.66 per month. The amount paid for pensions during the fiscal year was $76,775,861.92, being an increase over the preceding year of $5,808,280.22.

The expenses attending the maintenance and operation of the pension bureau during that period was $3,384,534.67, making the entire expenditures of the bureau $82,038,396.57, being 21¼ per cent. of the total expenditures of the government during the year.

I am thoroughly convinced that our general pension laws should be revised and adjusted to meet as far as possible, in the light of our experience all meritorious cases. The fact that 103 different rates of pensions are paid can not in my opinion be made consistent with justice to the pensioners or to the government and the numerou private pension bills that are passed predicated upon the imperfection of general laws, while they increase in many cases existing inequality and injustice lend additional force to the recommendation for the revision of the general laws on this subject.

The laxity of ideas prevailing among a large number of our people regarding pensions is becoming every day more marked. The principles upon which they should be granted are in danger of being altogether ignored, and already pensions are often claimed because the applicants are as much entitled as other successful applicants, rather than upon any disability reasonably attributable to military service. If the establishment of various precedents be continued, the granting of pensions be not divorced from partisan and other unworthy and irrelevant considerations, and if the honorable name of veteran unfairly becomes by these means but another term for one who constantly clamors for the aid of the government, there is danger that injury will be done to the fame and patriotism of many whom our citizens all delight to honor, and that a prejudice will be aroused unjust to meritorious applicants for pensions.

The department of agriculture has continued, with a good measure of success, its efforts to develop the processes, enlarge the results and augment the profits of American husbadry. It has collected and distributed practical information introduced and tested new plants, checked the spreading of contagious disease of farm animals, resisted the advance of noxious insects and destructive fungus growths and sought to secure to agricultural labor the highest reward of effort and the fullest immunity from loss. Its records of the year show that the season of 1888, has been one of medium production. A generous supply of the demands of consumption has been secured, and a surplus for exportation, moderate in certain products, and bountiful in others, will prove a benefaction alike to buyer and grower. Four years ago it was found that the great cattle industry of the country was endangered, and those engaged in it were alarmed at the rapid extension of the European lung plague of pleuro-pneumonia. Serious outbreaks existed in Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky and in Tennessee animals affected were held in quarantine. Five counties in New York and from one to four counties in each of the states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland were almost equally affected.

With this great danger upon us, and with the contagion already in the channels of commerce with the enormous direct and indirect losses already being caused by it, and when only prompt and energetic action could be successful, there were in none of those states any laws authorizing this department to eradicate the malady or giving the state officials power to co-operate with it for this purpose. The department even lacked both the requisite appropriation and authority.

By securing state co-operation in connection with authority from congress, the work of eradication has been pressed successfully, and this dreaded disease has been extirpated from the western states and also from the eastern states with the exception of a few restricted areas which are still under supervision. The danger has thus been removed and trade and commerce have been freed from the vexatious state restrictions which were deemed necessary for a time.

During the first four years the process of diffusion, as applied to the manufacture of sugar from sorghum and sugar cane has been introduced into this country and fully perfected by the experiments carried on by the department of agriculture. This process is now universally considered to be the best, economical one, and it is through it that the sorghum sugar industry has been established upon a firm basis and the road to its future success opened. The adoption of this diffusion process is also extending in Louisiana and other sugar parts of the country, and will doubtless soon be the only method employed for the extraction of sugar from the cane. An exhaustive study has also within the same period been undertaken of the subject of food adulteration and the best analytical methods for detecting it. A part of the result of this work has already been published by the department, which with the matter in course of preparation will make the most complete treatise on that subject that has ever been published in any country. The departm nt seeks a progressive development. It would combine the discoveries of science with the economies and amelioration of rural practice. A supervision of the endowed experimental station system recently provided for, is a proper function of the department, and now in operation. This supervision is very important and sh uld be wisely and vigilantly directed to the end, that the pecuniary aid of the government in favor of intelligent agriculture should be so applied as to result in the general good and to the benefit of all our people, thus justifying the appropriation made from the public treasury.

The adjustment of the relations between the government and the railroad companies which have received land grants and the guaranty of the public credit in aid of the construction of their roads should receive early attention. The report of a majority of the commissioners appointed to examine the affairs and indebtedness of these roads, in which they favor an extension of the time for the payment of such indebtedness in at least one case where the corporation appears to be able to comply with well guarded and exact terms of such extension and the reinforcement of their opinion by gentlemen of undoubted business judgment and experience appointed to protect the interests of the government as directors of said corporation may well lead to the belief that such an extension would be to the advantage of the government. The subject should be treated as business proposition with a view to a final realization of its indebtedness by the government rather than as a question to be decided upon prejudice or by way of punishment for previous wrong doing.

The report of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, with its accompanying documents, give in detail the operations of the several departments of the district government and furnish evidence that the financial affairs of the district are at present in such satisfactory condition as to justify the commissioners in submitting to the congress estimates for desirable and needed improvements. The commissioners recommend certain legislation which, in their opinion, is necessary to advance the interests of the district. I invite your special attention to their request for such legislation as will enable the commissioners without delay to collect, digest and properly arrange the laws by which the district is governed and which are now embraced in several collections, making them available only with great difficulty and labor. The suggestions they make touching desirable amendments to the laws relating to licenses granted for carrying on the retail traffic in spirituous liquors, to the observance of Sunday, to the proper assessment and collection of taxes, to the speedy punishment of minor offenders and to the management and control of the reformatory and charitable institutions supported by congressional appropriations, are commended to care and consideration.

I again call attention to the present inconvenience and the danger to life and property attending the operation of steam railroads through and and across the public streets and roads of the District. The propriety of such legislation as will properly guard the use of these railroads and better secure the convenience and safety of citizens is manifest.

In conclusion the president says:

The consciousness that I have presented you but an imperfect statement of the condition of our country and its wants, occasions no fear that anything omitted is not known and appreciated by this congress, upon whom rests the responsibility of intelligent legislation in behalf of a great nation and a confiding people.

As public servants we shall do our duty well if we constantly guard the rectitude of our intentions, maintain unsullied our love of country, and with unselfish purpose strive for the public good.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 3, 1888.

IS HE "JACK THE RIPPER?"

New York Police Keeping Sight of an Erratic American.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Dr. Francis Tumblety, an erratic American who was suspected by the London authorities of being implicated in the Whitechapel atrocities and who suddenly disappeared from England, arrived in the city Sunday from Havre on the French Line steamer La Bretagne. The detectives were awaiting the arrival of the steamer at the pier, and though he had travelled under an assumed name, his identity was discovered. He was permitted to land without any interference and was traced to a boarding house on West street, where he is now domiciled. As there is no charge or indictment against Dr. Tumblety for any criminal offence he will not be arrested. Detectives will keep him under surveillance for several days to come, so as to be able to reach him in case he is wanted.

Big Failure at Rochester, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 4.—The biggest failure recorded in this county for years is that of Volney P. Brown and Chester H. and Charles T. Brown, farmers, wool growers and horse dealers of the town of Wheatland. Their combined liabilities will aggregate nearly $200,000 and their assets are about one-third as much. They own nearly 1,200 acres of beautiful farm land, which, however, is heavily mortgaged. The Browns are well-known men of western New York, Volney P. Brown being an ex-assemblyman and Charles ex-supervisor. They are influential Republicans. The cause of their failure is ascribed to a long series of losses and the fact that farming has not been a profitable business for years.

Disaster on the Rail.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 4.—Two freight trains traveling in opposite directions on the New Jersey Central railroad collided with great force at Solomon's gap Monday morning. Both firemen were killed, one of the engineers was fatally scalded, and the other seriously injured. The engineer of the south-bound freight is charged with disobeying orders, which was the cause of the accident. He received orders from the operator at Proostot not to pass Solomon's gap until he received orders. Instead of stopping at the station he dashed by and was met a short distance on by the other train. About forty freight cars were wrecked and all traffic is stopped.

Lucy Was Not a Success.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Mrs. Parsons, of the Chicago anarchistic party, left for home Saturday, after spending much time and energy in trying to persuade the English working class that their hope was in dynamite bombs. As a matter of fact, the Englishman, high or low, persists in looking on dynamite as a mixture aimed straight at him. It is associated in his mind with past explosions which threatened the lives of dukes, toilers and policemen alike, and so Mrs. Parsons has not been a success, except with a few wild haired foreign gentlemen who favor noise and gore however produced.

EYES AND VOICES.

I.

If I could look with gently perfect eyes
On this strange human world—as one who fears
No duty and no task, and who reveres
Truth more than any dream that minds devise;
One who can trace the false, the weak, the wise;
In each new day that dawns and disappears;
Who, through some wild, heart breaking clamor, hears
Hope singing sweetly in the earth and skies:

Then I should be what men and women are
When they are wholly just and wholly brave;
Then I should speak from life and from the grave,
From every sahen globe and throbbing star;
No word of mine would be a word of wrong,
And there would be no discord in my song.

II.

There are two voices in a human life—
One, the sharp cry of passion, hissing hot;
The other, calm and sweet, as though begot
Of perfect peace in some heaven hallowed spot;
One is the cruel, mocking voice of strife,
Which falls to every heart, to every lot,
And one the voice that whispers to the clot,
"Rise to thy living spirit. Death is not!"

Hearing these voices, there are men who hear
No message to their souls; they rust and plod
Under the flashing menace of a rod;
But there are natures touched so deep and near
That, like the seed of beauty piercing sod,
They break their flesh and crave the thought of God.

—George Edgar Montgomery in Once a Week.

CONSCIENCE.

The young duchess of St. Stephens was the most beautiful and most friendless woman of her time. It was her own fault that she was friendless; every one, men and women alike, would be intimates, would be lovers, she treated with a chill disdain, or indifference perhaps, which isolated her.

Of course there were would be lovers. The young duchess was a noted beauty, and her very indifference made men sigh for the distinction of conquest. There was "no harm" in this of course, for everybody knew that the duke had a very fine house at Hammersmith, standing in lovely gardens, and that he visited it daily when in town. Those who cared to observe had seen a dainty victoria, which was always much admired in the park, drive out of the gates of this house and its sole occupant always the prettiest little woman in the world, whose blue eyes looked laughter perpetually. If this was the duke's taste why had he married Claudia Mandeville, the dark, silent, sphinx like girl, who, from her first appearance in society, had always carried herself with the air of a tragedy queen? None could tell, though many conjectured. But it was quite well known that the duke and duchess had quarreled bitterly the day after marriage. Since then the duchess had dwelt alone, and the duke had found solace in the society of the merry, blue eyed little lady who accompanied him on his incognito trips abroad. In town and in Scotland, at the chief country houses where entertaining had to be done, at other people's houses on visits, the duke and duchess were always together. And oh, how bored they must be, thought every one. Itwas not difficult to amuse the duke; in the unfortunate absence of the blue eyed lady, he was a man of easy and ephemeral amours. But no one ever succeeded in amusing the duchess.

It was well known that before her marriage she had been engaged to Lord Vane, and it was an accepted fact that the breaking off of that engagement had been the result of a lovers' quarrel, and the marriage of Claudia with the duke a matter of pique on her part. It was understood, therefore, that she was still attached to Lord Vane. Why in the world, then, said the cynical, did he not come and carry her prayer book and fan for her, and visit the same country houses like the elegant and indistinguishable heroes of "Ouida's" novels? But no, Vane was on the war path again; he had gone off in his yacht to unknown seas; perhaps he was shooting seals, or something equally absurd and inhuman. At all events, he was not dangling after Claudia, his one time inamorata.

And yet she was the one central spot on this globe to him. He never went near her, for he believed he loathed and hated her. Yet go where he would and amuse himself as he might, his thought was really always with this inexplicable woman.

Quite young—so beautiful that the way her dresses were made really hardly mattered, and her face was never touched with anything but honest water—a woman admired and courted, yet quite alone. Two men had loved her, and each had parted from her for life after a terrible quarrel. What mystery was it that made her so isolated? People asked the questions in vain. It was evident that the duke, though he kept up all necessary appearances before society with a painstaking punctiliousness, was in reality as far and entirely separated from his wife as was her old lover, Vane, on his distant seas.

Of course the duchess was very much talked about, but there was no scandal except the slumbering one which associated her with Vane. This woke suddenly into life when Vane came home right in the middle of the season, as he generally did. He being a person of some importance in many ways, the moment it was known he was in town his breakfast table became richly ornamented with cards and notes of invitation, on which were blazoned all sorts of beautiful crests and mottoes. The duchess of St. Stephens invited him to a political dinner. He went, and found her the same cold beauty, talking cleverly, though very little. She seemed hardly to notice him. Then the duchess of St. Stephens invited him to a great ball, one of the solemn and splendid functions of the season which it was her duty to preside over.

She looked glorious; but he caught one look of agony in her eyes, like a look in a hunted animal's. It made him sick. About 2 o'clock he left, and went away on foot along the square. It was a soft summer morning; he lit a cigar, leaning against the railings of a sleeping house, and watched that other one all alive and alight.

There he stood thinking till the carriages began to roll away, and then till they were all gone. The door was closed and the lights put out. Suddenly the door opened, and then shut quickly. A figure came down the steps and came toward him. He drew his breath hard. It was the duchess, with a traveling dress, a hat and veil on, a little bag in her hand. What on earth did this mean? He started forward as she approached him.

"What are you going to do?" he exclaimed, speaking without thought.

She opened her great eyes in amazement at the sight of him.

"What are you going to do?" he repeated fiercely, his heart panting—he knew not why. Long afterward he understood that the agony of that moment had hinged on that one thought—who was she going to?

She answered him very quietly:

"I am going to do what you neglected. I am going to give myself up to the police."

"Do you mean it?" he asked, thunderstruck.

"I mean it!" she answered, in a tone that carried conviction with it.

At that moment another voice broke in. They had not noticed any one approach.

"You will return home," said this voice, breathless with haste, "whatever else you may have meant to do."

It was the duke. Both turned and faced him, but he looked only at Vane.

"I suppose you are my wife's lover," he said, "but if you compromise her I will kill you."

Vane looked back at him. True, the duke was uncommonly like a tiger just now, but then Vane had shot more than one tiger in his time.

"Compromise me!" cried out Claudia, passionately, and both men started and turned. Neither of them had ever heard this sound in her voice before.

"I am sick of taking care of your good name," she went on vehemently; "you watch me till I am maddened by it. What is your name to me? Lord Vane is no more my lover than you are—I have done with love. I shall not disgrace you as those other women would in my place. But I will put an end to the misery of my life, and I will tell the truth honestly for once. I am sick to death of the sham and make believe of my wretched existence. You, duke, you do as you choose, and your name is not dishonored. Why, then, am I to be so dogged and watched? Why is it that I am to be so tied and bound and watched because of your name and your family? I am going to end it. I am too great a coward to kill myself, but there are others who will do it for me. I am going to the police!"

"No, no, Claudia!" cried out the duke, catching at her as she turned quickly to move away. "Not that; anything but that! Do as you like, take what lover you choose, only sail within the wind and give me power to hold my position. Don't do this mad thing—this is what I have always feared. It was your conscience waking and driving you to this folly that I had dreaded; not anything else. I will give you anything in the world that you want if you will but come back quietly and not make a public scandal!"

"A public scandal!" repeated Claudia scornfully. "What does that concern me?"

Vane was looking on at this scene between husband and wife in complete bewilderment. It was impossible to guess how it could end. A strange piece of luck brought it to a sudden conclusion. Down a side street came a night hansom on its way home. Claudia shook off the duke's hand and flew to it like a hare. Springing in she cried out some magic words to the cabman, who whipped up his horse and drove away.

Both men started in pursuit, but the duke gave in at the end of three streets. Such a life as he led does not keep a man in training. Vane, on the contrary, was full of vigor and ran like a professional. He kept on steadily, his eyes fixed on the cab, and followed it to Euston. The horse was not very fresh or perhaps he would have had to give in.

A mail train was just starting. Claudia darted into it, ticketless, and Vane did the same a few carriages from her.

Claudia went to a small seaside place and stayed at the hotel. Vane got some rooms, where he had a much prized window. It commanded the hotel door and the promenade.

How she walked and walked, to and fro, in and out! How she thought and thought, making the most of her brief respite, her momentary quiet! He read this in her strange, sad, sad face.

All the time he sat and wondered whether he should go out, meet her and address her. She was so untamed, so mysterious a creature, he feared to act. He waited and hesitated—and waited a day too long.

One bright morning she did not come out as usual. Hour after hour passed and it was afternoon, and still she had not come. Trembling with excitement, he arose from his seat, went out, entered the hotel and asked for a glass of sherry. In two minutes he heard it all. The whole hotel was in confusion—a lady had been found dead in her bed that morning, an empty bottle of chloral in her room showing how the deed had been done.

That unknown lady was never identified, but lies in a nameless grave. To this hour people in the quiet watering place marvel over the memory of her beauty, and wonder what could have driven her to such an act of despair.

The odd part of this uncomfortable story is that it is the true history of a recent scandal. It is understood that Vane ran away with Claudia and had hidden her away somewhere on the continent. It is said that he is absurdly jealous of her, and ill uses her, Claudia, who lies so still in her quiet grave.

Who among the conventional creatures of a stereotyped age could guess that Claudia had no taste for intrigue or little sheltered vices, while her passions were fierce enough to make her a murderess or a suicide? For Vane's sake she had killed her rival. He had known it; yet all the time, and even now, he wore and still wears, hidden away, a miniature of her beautiful face.—London World.

Buckthorn in Toothache.

Dr. Gretchinsky has called attention to a practice which obtains among the peasantry in some parts of southern Russia of treating toothache with a gargle of decoction of buckthorn—Pinamus cathaiticus. He states that in order to test the ground of this practice he made a series of control experiments upon a number of inmates of the local prison who were suffering from toothache. The patients were ordered to gargle their mouths with the cooled decoction every three or five minutes until the pain disappeared, and in every case the suffering ceased in about half an hour, though there still remained a vague aching or kind of itching about the teeth. A pronounced anodyne effect was produced by inserting a cotton wool plug steeped in the decoction in the cavity of a hollow tooth. Dr. Gretchinsky considers his experiments proved decoction of buckthorn to be a reliable means for mitigating such dental pain as depends upon inflammation of the pulp. He recommends the decoction to be made by boiling 100 parts of the bark in water sufficient to yield 200 parts of the strained liquid and adding ten parts of brandy. Another writer attributes the anodyne action to the powerfully astringent properties of the decoction.—London Medical Recorder.

The Sun as a Lamplighter.

The following comes from Lancaster county, Pa.: Above the doorway of a store in Mount Joy is a lantern which contains a coal oil lamp. Behind the lamp is a glittering reflector. The other afternoon a curious thing occurred. The sun was shining brightly, and the day had in it a suggestion of balmy July. The rays of the sun penetrated the glass of the lantern, thence through the chimney of the lamp, and were focused on the polished reflector. The rays were so focused that their action caused the wick in the lamp to ignite, and it burned some time before it was discovered.—Chicago Herald.

Public Whetstones.

The large stones at the base of the Gate City National Bank building are smooth and soft, and make excellent whetstones. This fact has become known to a great many citizens and small boys, and it is no uncommon sight to see a half dozen persons standing near the building sharpening their knives. Whenever two men stop at the bank corner to hold a conversation, out come their knives, and the sharpening goes on as long as the talk lasts.—Atlanta Journal.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

An Ovid girl broke an egg the other morning, preparatory to a cake-baking expedition when lo, and behold, a lively little snake jumped out of the shell. As proof that this is no newspaper yarn, we give the girl's name—Miss Bromley. But she hasn't yet solved the problem of how the little wriggler got inside the shell—or hadn't when we went to press.

A Flint financier has started a mushroom farm. If variety adds spice to life Michigan seems to do her full share toward furnishing the spice.

A $1 turkey winged its way through a $75 plate glass at Muskegon, but the owner hadn't any use for the bird. 'Twould have been too costly.

When burglars take to robbing churches it sort o' indicates that business in their line is not brisk. The Clifford church was relieved of $35 worth of goods by 'em the other night.

Fred J. Stewart has been given a six months' job in the penitentiary for embezzling $1,000 while postmaster at Newberry. A light sentence was imposed because he was well liked by his acquaintances.

An East Saginaw man is the owner of a forty-six-pound Remington rifle that was made expressly for his father, eighty years ago, at a cost of $85. 'Tis said to be a loud talker.

The inmates of the Clare county jail arranged for a runaway expedition the other day, but the plucky wife of the sheriff, aided by a gleaming revolver, held 'em at bay until help arrived. Robert Morrison, charged with robbery, got away, however, before the brave woman discovered the prisoners' game.

William Steele, an Ionia man, seems to enjoy indulging in costly luxuries. That accounts for his paying $6,000 for just one cow. Perhaps her milk makes golden butter.

Game Warden Smith has kept a sharp eye out for violators of the game and fish laws, as the 900 convictions in the state during his eighteen-months' administration amply indicates.

It cost Detroit $22,000 to do her share toward holding the late election. Most luxuries come high.

Clifford Culver, a 13-year-old lad, tried the early ice at Howell but went down to a damp, dark grave. Many pleasures are preferable when not harvested too young, and ice skating is one of 'em.

Two years ago W. B. Perkins tried his hand at capturing the prosecuting attorneyship of Kalkask county, and came within a single vote of doing it. This year he tried it again but lacked three votes of "getting there." Politics is mighty uncertain.

Kitty True, a Jackson girl, pared seventy-two bushels of apples in ten hours, and is of the opinion that the boy who beats her day's work will have to get up early in the morning and dust.

William Phillips, a Paw Paw farmer, lost his barn and contents by fire, caused by the spontaneous combustion of a quantity of cornstalks. Loss, $1,500.

The St. Jonns creamery has turned out 50,000 pounds of real, genuine butter, this year.

William O'Keefe, the chap who mysteriously made his exit from the St. Ignace jail, was caught by Deputy Sheriff Stuart on the Michigan lake shore, some sixty miles away. O'Keefe will doubtless make the trip to Jackson this time, without fail.

The Smith Purifier company—the Jackson concern that flirted with half of the larger towns in the state for a bonus, and then didn't move—is shipping purifiers to far off Constantinople. According to all reports that town will stand a deal of purifying.

The Detroit fire department has 196 fire alarm boxes and operates 293 miles of wire (108 of which are under ground), fourteen steam fire engines, and the same number of hose carriages.

W. C. Irwin, a Brooklyn man, converted the juice of 12,000 bushels of apples into cider and jelly, shipping the product to seven different states.

Ishpeming people have this year invested $250,000 in new buildings. Ishpeming is one of the upper peninsula towns that has come to stay.

Frank Godfrey, of The Lansing Republican, is credited with having designs on the government print shop at Washington. The place may be expected to capitulate some time in March next.

A Caseville citizen, who has lived in Michigan fifty-one years, and has seen 81 frosty winters, has just taken his first railway ride. 'Twas a case of better late than never.

Miss Cipriani, a Kalamazoo teacher, of Italian descent, has recently become an heir to a goodly portion of a $25,000,000 estate in Italy. She can take a vacation now.

Conrad George, the Wyandotte man who thought he was tired of life and so cut his throat, afterward became terribly anxious to live, but the most strenuous efforts of the physicians proved unavailing, and Conrad died on the 22d.

Burglars worked Belleville business houses very industriously the other night, raking in all the loose change to be found. Not to exceed $25 was secured, however, at any one place.

James Harper, the man who shot and killed James Turner at an East Jordan gaming table some time since, has been given a life job at the Jackson prison. And he won't ply the shooting biz either.

Kalamazoo is inclined to the belief that a city hospital would be the proper caper.

Dr. Goucher, of Nashville, goes into exile at the Jackson prison for a year on account of his connection with a grave-robbing expedition.

The annual meeting of the State Trotting Horse Breeders' association was held at Jackson on the 28th and was largely attended. The association is out of debt with $200 in the treasury. It was decided at this meeting to hold six stake races during the season of 1889.

Taking the vote recently cast in this state as a basis, as compared with that of 1884 and the census taken that year, Michigan now has a population of nearly 2,200,000.

The next meeting of the National Press association will be held at Detroit in September, 1889.

B. W. Long, a Lansing druggist, recently purchased a barrel of whisky from a Detroit wholesale house that proved to be adulterated and now the revenue officers are after the fellow who did the drugging.

A Lansing man has a thirty-five foot well that's turning out crude petroleum. Some of the neighbors suspect that a leaking barrel isn't located very far away.

In the case of Park vs. The Detroit Free Press, the supreme court declared the libel law of 1885 unconstitutional.

In the somewhat celebrated case of Mrs. Fiske vs. the Perrin estate, the supreme court decides the plaintiff to be entitled to $426,025, and a solicitor's fee of $20,000. Profitable lawsuit.

But ninety-two of the 752 boarders at the Jackson prison now wear striped suits, the alance being permitted to don the gray on a count of good behavior.

Charles Wight Found Guilty.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 3.—Charles Wight was assistant superintendent of mails in the Detroit postoffice for six years prior to last summer, when he was caught stealing a decoy letter. He tried to escape from Inspector Angus Smith, who arrested him, made a written confession of his crime, pleaded guilty, and then withdrew this plea, denied his guilt, and hired a lawyer who sought to get him off on the ground that a decoy letter was not mail. Judge Brown overruled this Friday and the case went to the jury, who brought in a verdict finding Wight guilty. Sentence was staid and an attempt will be made to get him off.

Composition Is the Life of Rascality.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 4.—Will Schrieber, the absconding teller of the First National bank of Columbus, Ind., made a partial settlement with President Lucas, of the bank in Windsor, Ont., yesterday, which nets him several thousand dollars. He will complete the deal to-day or to-morrow, and will be insured immunity from prosecution whenever he chooses to return to the states. President Lucas found Schr ber in Toronto Saturday, but he will not say how much he allows this young thief.

Ordered to Withdraw from the House.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—In the house of commons Saturday the speaker ordered Mr. Graham, Radical member for the northwest division of Lanarkshire, to withdraw from the house on account of his accusing Mr. W. H. Smith, government leader, of conniving at a dishonorable trick and refusing to retract the statement. In an interview Mr. Graham said in explanation of the affair, that he held Mr. Robinson, Conservative member for Dudley, guilty of a dishonorable trick in putting a motion on the paper preventing discussion on the grievances of certain chainmakers. He had also expressed the belief that the government instigated Mr. Robinson to the action. Mr. Graham says that he does not intend to apologize for his language whatever may be the result.

Injured by a Falling Elevator.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 3.—At 7:15 a. m. Saturday a powerful steam elevator, employed by N. B. Horton in the erection of a large brick barn at Olneyville for the Union Railroad company, fell from the lift, owing to the breaking of a cable, and was precipitated to the cellar, where it was smashed into fragments. The elevator contained five men and four large barrows full of brick and cements. Fred Horton, son of the contractor, had his leg fractured and one heel torn off and his spine was severely contused. Two workmen suffered compound fractures of the leg and were bruised badly. It is feared that they will not survive, as they are well advanced in years. The other men received bruises and were severely shocked.

An Attack on President Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The Tribune has the following special from Richmond, Va.: The second auditor of the state Friday published a bitter article in The Dispatch against President Cleveland. The articles concludes: "When, therefore, it was seen that Mr. Cleveland had invited Fred Douglass and his white wife and negro daughter to his social receptions at the White House at least four times, it became evident that he was ignoring the problem of his age; that he was by act a miscegenationist, and, therefore, was not entitled to be called a great man or the greatest president the United States ever had." The Richmond State defends President Cleveland, and says he is the ablest executive that ever lived in the White House.

Pittsburg Aldermen in Disgrace.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 3.—Saturday Alderman D. C. O'Brien, of the Twelfth ward, recently convicted on misdemeanor in office, and who plead guilty of extortion to the extent of $2,200 in a year and nine months, was sentenced to pay a fine of $250, and undergo imprisonment in the penitentiary for two years and six months. Alderman Ayers, 60 years of age, of the south side, who plead guilty to perjury and extortion was sentenced to jail for one year and fined $750. O'Brien's constable, J. W. Metzger, was fined $500 and sentenced to the work-house for two years. Ayers' constable, Adam Schefer, was fined $500 and sentenced to the work-house one year and nine months.

Closing Up the Hronek Trial.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—There was a big crowd in the criminal court Saturday morning to listen to the closing arguments in the case of Hronek, the alleged dynamiter. Assistant State's Attorney Elliott occupied the time until noon, and after a careful analysis of the evidence, declared the man to be guilty and asked the jury to give him the extreme penalty—twenty-five years in the penitentiary. Mr. Elliott was followed by Attorney McGaffey for the defense.

Suicide of a Newly-Married Boy.

ONEONTA, N. Y., Dec. 3.—Irving T. Copperley, aged 18 years, was married two months ago and has been living with his father in-law, Wilber Babcock, two and a half miles from this village. He was found with a bullet through his heart Friday and a revolver with one chamber discharged was found in his hip pocket. The boy was lying face downward and his vest open as when his wife saw him leave the house. No reason is known for the act.

For Robbing Gen. Bigger.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 3.—George B. Willis was arrested at Waverly, Tenn., Friday, charged with being one of the men who robbed Gen. Bigger on the night of the European hotel fire in this city. Bigger jumped from the hotel window while the building was burning and was killed. It is believed that his room had previously been robbed and the hotel set on fire to cover up the work of the thieves.

Heavy Failure in Glass.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 3.—The failure of Gallinger & Co., glass dealers of this city and New York, is for a large amount. The liabilities are estimated at above $200,000, while the available assets will not reach half of that sum. Joseph and Samuel Gallinger compromise the firm, and for more than fifteen years they have carried on a large trade in their line. The sale of their property is set for Dec. 7.

Gen. Newberry Takes Hold.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—S. Corning Judd stepped out of the position of postmaster of Chicago at 9 o'clock Saturday morning and Gen. W. C. Newberry stepped in. The transfer was effected very quietly, without the slightest bustle or confusion, and very few people around the building realized that it was being made.

Seven Train Hands Injured.

BISMARCK, D. T., Dec. 3.—A collision occurred near here Friday between a heavy loaded freight train and an accommodation train. Seven train hands were severely injured, but none fatally. The two engines were also badly wrecked.

Emperor William's Ear Trouble.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—It is known definitely that the emperor is confined to his apartments by a recurrence of his ear affection, and not by a cold, as was announced.

The ladies of W. C. T. U. wish to return a vote of thanks to all who assisted at their entertainment given recently at Cottage Hall, who are not members of the society.

BY ORDER OF PRESIDENT.

Tuesday afternoon, as Engine No. 16 drawing an extra freight from the east, while at work on the side track at the station here, was run into by Engine No. 21—regular freight from the west. The engines had their pilots broken up badly. No. 16 had the front end of her boiler stove in., No. 21 had her lead truck tore away and received slight injuries otherwise. An empty stock car attached to No. 16 was made into kindlings. An empty coal car drawn by No. 21 was thrown twice its length from the track, also a car load of wheat was smashed, letting the wheat out on the ground. A load of sand was partly thrown from the track, and the track torn up for several rods. As we understand the rules, the blame for the wreck rests, 1st with the di-patcher; 2d with the agent; 3rd with the conductor of the extra; 4th with the engineer of No. 21. It appears that the regular freight had orders waiting them here to meet the extra, and according to their rules. each had violated them. No one was hurt as both engineers and firemen jumped from their engines before they collided. A wrecking gang and section hands worked most of the night and next day, getting the engines apart and cleaning up the debris.

Your wasted cheeks may have all the plumpness and bloom of health through your use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This time-honored remedy still leads the van. It improves digestion, purifies the blood, and invigorates the system. Give it a trial.

Ed. Hardy, the wool sorter in the Woolen mills, closed his engagement here last week and left Saturday night for Chicago.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Thursday evening the home of Chas. Smith was made bright and cherry, when the marriage of Ida S. Lawton and James R. Pocklington took place. The hour of 7 o'clock came when the guests were assembled in the parlor, after which entered the bride and groom led by the pastor, to their position, and there asked to join hands and in a few moments were united in marriage by Rev. James Wright. Seldom have we witnessed a marriage that gave us more gratification than this one, and may their days be bright and many, can but be the wish of all their friends.

Sunday evening Dec. 23rd there will be a Sunday School concert given in Christian church at Britton for the benefit of the Sunday School Treasury—10 cents admission. Let all come who can, as there will be an effort made to have the concert profitable and entertaining.

The young man who swallowed by mistake the whole contents of a package of Laxador is out again. He says he feels rather "pale" but other wise is all right. He will however follow the directions next time.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Garrett Marshall is very sick and the gravest fears are entertained of his recovery.

Mrs. James Allen is improving slowly.

Mrs. John Burtless' health is very much better.

The funeral of Roy Stout occured Dec. 2. The bereaved parents feel it almost a double loss, as it is but a few months since they buried a sweet little girl.

The funeral of Uncle Wm. Whelan occured at his residence, Dec. 5th. A large circle of mourning relatives and friends gathered to bid a last sad farewell to all that was earthly of him, the quiet gentleman, who for the last twenty-six years has been a resident of Michigan.

To those who observed the tiny red-legged insect which appeared in such numbers after the heavy rains of the second week in November, the following letter may be of interest:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 4, '85.

Augusta B. Wisner, Tecumseh, Lenawee Co., Mich.—Dear Madam:—Your letter of the 27th ult., giving an account of the occurance of a small red-legged spider-like insect in great numbers in your vicinity after a cold snap has been received. I am very sorry that you did not save specimens as I am not aware that anything precisely similar has before been recorded. Your description is quite careful but you do not give us a definite idea as to size. The best guess that I can make is that they were young Harvest-Mites of the family Trombididae several species of which are parasitic upon grasshoppers and their eggs. In the first report of the U. S. Entomological Commission I have described two species having this habit. viz: Trombidium locustarum and T. giganteum. The latter attacks mature grasshoppers and the former the younger hopper and eggs. I understand that the common species of grasshopper were very abundant last season in Michigan and it is quite possible that these creatures are the ones which you observed. The ground having become thoroughly drenched may have driven them forth in these immense numbers. If you can possibly secure specimens please do so and send them to us. Respectfully yours,

C. V. RILEY, Entomogist.

Specimens been obtained and forwarded.

Doctors In Prescribing Wines.

The physicians desire to give a liquor containing the extractive parts of the grape: such as iron, grape-sugar and the other elements which give to port wine its special flavor or bouquet and its singular blood making properties from the iron that is contained in the coloring principle of pure Red Wine.

Speer's New Jersey Wines, especially his Port, are grown on a brown stone shale soil, rich in iron and from vines brought from the banks of the River Doura, in Portugal, where the finest ports in the world are made, but none ever reach this country in a pure state. Speer's Wines are regarded superior to any in the market. For sale by Druggists.

The Passion for Betting.

Years ago when riding with the late Rev. Dr. Ballard he remarked to us that he "did not like cards, so much gambling was done with them."

We replied:

"Doctor, we have just left the office and almost the last paragraph which we read was in relation to two young fellows about to attend church service, the men stopping at the door and making a bet upon the length of the sermon to be delivered."—Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph.

A Lifelike Dummy.

"Why can't they make these dummies more lifelike?" said a facetious fellow, halting with a friend in front of a clothing store on Market street and slapping a figure a vigorous blow on the cheek.

The "dummy" turned suddenly, let fly his left, and the facetious man went down on the pavement as though struck by a lightning express.—Philadelphia Times.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, DEC. 15,

THE TARIFF BATTLE ON.

Senator Allison has clearly foreshadowed the policy of the successful party by giving notice in the Senate that the Senate tariff bill be pressed for consideration daily until disposed of. That means that the tariff, tax and revenue reduction issue is the supreme question in Congress, and that both parties recognize the imperitive popular demand for positive action by Congress.

The tariff battle is on, and it will remain on until substantial tax reduction on the necessaries of business and of life shall be attained. If not attained this session, the issue will confront the new Congress as soon as it meets, and if not satisfactorily settled during the next Congress, it will go back to the people for fresh instructions which will be given in no uncertain tone.

There is little in the Senate tariff bill to commend it to the great mass of the people who pay the bulk of the taxes. It makes no material advance in cheapening the raw materials needed by our industries; it makes no pretence of cheapening the necessaries of life, and it greatly increases the cost of some of the articles in common use among consumers. It not only increases taxes on absolute necessaries but it studiedly conceals the measure of increase by cunning classification, well understood by those who contribute liberally to campaign funds, but not understood by the multitude.

It is admitted by all that our woolen industries need a revision of the tariff, in their interest. The blunder of classifying worsteds differently from woolens, has practically destroyed the worsted industry of the country; and with a more than 60 per cent. tax on woolens, which are consumed by every class and condition in every section of the country, it is admitted that England's mills are now running on American orders more largely than ever before. These facts are an imperative call for tariff revision in the woolen schedule, and the correction of that schedule goes to the very marrow of the issue between protection to labor and consumers and protection to monopoly.

There are two methods by which our woolen industries can be fully protected. One is exacting and oppressive upon the whole people; the other furnishes better protection to industry with relief to consumers. The Senate bill prefers to protect classes and to oppress masses. It increases the tariff on raw wool, in the production of which there is practically no labor to protect, and, of necessity, increases the already oppressive tariff taxes upon woolens which all consume. In all other protection countries of the world their woolen mills and labor are given free wool, chemicals and dye-stuffs, and thus cheapen woolen products without cheapening wages; but here raw materials are taxed in the name of protection, and thus the protection on r materials destroys the protection t labor and employees unless consume are taxed beyond endurance.

The great battle on the true theory of protecting labor that has but just begun, has for its vital issue the supplying of free raw materials to our mills and workingmen; and it is an open secret that a large number of the Republican Senators sincerely believe in the wisdom and necessity of free raw materials. It is the most important step to reduce the cost of necessaries of life without diminishing the wages of labor, and how long can these convictions and the necessities which created them hold out against party policy dictated by centralized capital? Now that a distinctive protection administration and Congress are assured, why do not such leaders as Allison accept the tariff policy they applauded in Grant, Garfield and Arthur, and solve the whole question of protection promptly and enduringly by giving free raw materials to our factories and labor? If not done now, it will surely be done soon hereafter; and if not done by the Republicans, it will surely be done by the Democrats. It is inevitable, and why not do it at once?

Another very grave defect in the Senate bill has been clearly dictated by the odious and oppressive trust interest of the country. The reduction of tariff taxes on raw sugar proposed by the Senate committee, would absolutely destroy the sugar-producing industry of the country. That once done, the foreign countries which produce sugar would at once abolish the rebate of home taxes they now grant on sugar for export, as they would be without competition in this country, and the cost of sugar to consumers would certainly not be reduced and more likely increased. And while the Senate bill aims at the absolute destruction of the sugar-producing industry of the country, it is cunningly drawn to give even additional protection to the sugar trust that is now extorting over thirty millions annually from consumers. It cheapens raw materials to the sugar trust by allowing a commonly used grade of molasses to come in free, and it leaves the sugar refiners, who compose the sugar trust, exclusive protection on the refined sugar that is used by the whole people.

The Senate tariff bill was logical as a campaign measure. It offered monopoly protectionists everything to appeal to their cupidity for campaign contributions, but it is too late in the nineteenth century to enact such a violent and oppressive monopoly measure as the law of the land. The tariff battle is on; it will stay until free raw materials and cheapened necessaries of life shall have been won. It is only a question of a little time as to when they will come; it is only a question of Republican stupidity or wisdom whether Republican or Democratic power will give them to the people.—Piladelphia Times.

THE POPULAR VOTE.

The returns of all the states are now either official or sufficiently well known to permit an announcement of totals in the popular vote for President of the United States. The whole vote appears to be 11,314,670.

It must be understood that discrepancies will inevitably appear in any present comparison of newspaper returns. From some states it is the "average" that has been reported; from others the "highest" on each ticket; from others the "heads" of tickets.

It will be noticed, also, that the votes for Fisk, Streeter, Cowdrey, Curtis and other "scattering," including Belva Lockwood, have not been completely returned. The missing links for these will swell the grand total by a few thousand.

The figures are as follows:

States.	Harrison	Cleveland	Fisk	Streeter

THE CARPET TRUST.

Eastern manufacturers have combined and an increase of from four to ten and twelve cents a yard on carpets, according to grade, will be the result. The good times promised because of the prospective higher tariff taxes are coming fast. Perhaps the carpet men are not sufficiently "protected" in their business. Must be something wrong when the mills are idle a third of the year the proprietors combining to raise prices, and cutting down wages of employees 10 per cent at a stroke. Maybe if the 30 and 45 per cent tariff tax were increased to 50 and 75, everybody would be happy and get rich accordingly! If "protection" is the cure for all these ills, an application of the remedy should be made. By all means let the republicans give the people an illustration of how an increase of tax on a product will keep down trusts! An example, easy to be understood and one that comes near the pockets of the people, could be made of the carpet business.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers.—For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50 cts. and $1,00 per bottle.

THE GOOD OLD TIMES.

Manners and Manners 100 Years Ago.

As to our dinners and cookery; a century ago merchants and the middle classes generally dined at 3; "society" an hour later; but the artisan's chief meal still hung back at 1 o'clock.

Where a Frenchman ate—and still eats—more bread than meat, the Englishman naturally gave himself greater, perhaps because a more northerly, latitude in the matter of flesh. Our strictly island cookery, then as now, was simpler, admitted of less disguise than the French; and few cosmopolitans will, even in these modern days of wide and eclectic travel, withhold the suffrage of their palates from the London chop or steak off the ever-multiplying grid, or cry Off to the roast beef of England, except indeed it be in the chorus of Fielding's song.

Made dishes were unknown, and the pot, the grid-iron, and the spit were almost the sole stock in trade of the women cooks. A ceremonious dinner rarely went beyond a couple of joints and some assiettes volantes, presumably what we used to call side dishes, consisting of vegetables, and (Yorkshire?) puddings; removed by a dessert of cheese or fruit according to the season.

The philanthropist praises enigmatically, the "w[illegible]ess" of the butcher's meat, which, for all that, was not so nutritive as that of Paris. Came, no mean judge, thought diff[illegible] but the so much vaunted roast [illegible] of the English, was case[illegible] than the French, being less co[illegible]. What he wanted to express, no doubt, was that it was not so tough.

The vegetables, fa[illegible] and salads were tasteless, and the c[illegible]ages, turnips and spinach near London tasted of the coal smoke which filled the air. Game, too, although abun[illegible] miles distant from London, was [illegible] spot in the country; that of P[illegible] being preferred in the capital; and we can quite believe it when we see the wa[illegible] the English farmer of the present day still allows himself to be driven to the wall by the fowls, eggs, dairy produce, and vegetables and fruits of the Continent.

Our dinner furniture included "round-handled two pronged steel forks for carrying solid morsels to the mouth with the left hand, directly after each such morsel was cut with the right, which was constantly armed with a knife, and that knife broad, and round-pointed, for use like a trowel, in taking up sauces, &c." For the Englishman did not ply his good knife and fork by awkwardly passing those weapons from hand to hand like other nations; and could thus be detected anywhere in Europe before he opened his mouth, at all events to speak.

The constant use of the knife in the right hand might, however, suggest to the ethnologist milder social manners in a race which could tolerate the custom without the apprehensions it would naturally evoke in a country where another and a lethal "use of the knife" was more common.—Westminster Review.

IT NEVER DID RUN SMOOTH.

An Unexpected Obstacle Interferes with Love's Young Dream.

"What did papa say when you asked him for my hand, Paul?"

"He didn't say anything, Annabel," replied the young man, nervously; "he didn't say a word. He just looked at me in a cold, hard way, and got down off the high stool and began to slide around the end of his desk. That's all he said, and I came away."

"But he would have spoken had you remained, Paul."

"I mistrusted that he would, Annabel, and for that reason I fled. I am foolishly sensitive, and cannot endure harshness."

"I fear, dear Paul," said the girl tenderly, but with a weary sigh, "that you do not love me; that your heart has tired of me and grown cold, or that you have no sand. Pa is always on the bluff. He acted just that way to Will Kilburn, and when he came out from behind the desk Will landed one on his neck and taught him more sense. You weaken too easily, Paul. You have more guff than business."

And rising to her feet the girl passed away from his sight, a dreamy vision of summer loveliness and grace, fair as the morning, and all that day the heaviness of the young man's heart threw a melancholy cadence into his voice as he stood among the threads and sung at intervals plaintive snatches from the old, old song, "Ca-ish!"—Brooklyn Eagle.

ABSENT-MINDEDNESS.

Amusing Instances of This Weakness of Busy and Abstracted People.

A story used to be told many years ago of a merchant who was peculiarly subject to fits of absent-mindedness.

Once he was writing a letter, and thought, absent mindedly, that he had forgotten his correspondent's first name. Turning to one of his clerks he said:

"What's John Jackson's first name?"

The clerk, accustomed to his employer's peculiarity, replied:

"John, sir."

The merchant wrote the letter, put it in an envelope and was again at a loss. To the same clerk he said:

"Excuse me, Charles, I've forgotten John Jackson's last name."

A gentleman was met by a friend one morning recently hurrying back from the station toward his home.

"What's the matter?" the friend asked.

"Oh, I've left my watch under my pillow, and I'm going home to get it."

"You'll miss your train."

"Oh, no," was the reply; "see, I've got four minutes yet," and he pulled out his watch to enforce the statement.

The Folly of It.

"You want a position in my store, do you, Miss?" said the kind-hearted merchant. "You don't look as if you had had much experience in selling goods. I have only one place vacant now. It's in the soap department, in the basement, and the salary is only $1.75 a week. But my wife informed me this morning she needed another girl in her kitchen. If you would like that place she will give you $4 a week and a good home. Which would you prefer?"

"I'll take the soapladdy position, sir," was the haughty reply.—Chicago Tribune.

The Foolish Virgins.

A Sunday-school teacher was explaining the parable of the ten virgins to her class, who were mostly boys.

When she had finished, she asked:

"Now, why were five of them foolish?"

"Because they didn't get married," said one of the boys.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proven this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permentally cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in six weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. DIXON & SON, 303 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

BEHIND THE RETURNS.

The New York World is seeking to ascertain the causes which led to the defeat of Cleveland in that State. From the reports which it has published of the extent to which the buying and selling of votes was carried on in that state, it does not need to go further for sufficient cause. As an illustration, it declares that the account which it has given of vote-buying in the Village of Herkimer is a trustworthy one. It asserts that 276 votes—more than one-fifth of those cast—were purchased; that the Republicans bought 198 votes and the Democrats 78; that the Republicans paid out $2,420 and the Democrats a little more than $900, the average cost of a vote being about $15, the bribery brokers getting nearly 15 per cent commission; that cardboard checks were handed to the bribed men immediately after they cast their ballots, and that they were cashed on demand at designated offices. The World says that a similar state of affairs prevailed in the other parts of the country, and it has published numerous reports from other counties of a like tenor. The only conclusion from the articles in the World is that the number of men in New York State who sold their votes to the highest bidder reaches well up into the tens of thousands. Its figures show that two-thirds of these went to the Republicans. If the purchased vote was eliminated—and men who sell their votes have neither character nor politics—Cleveland would be left with a larger plurality in New York than Harrison received.

The Population of Tecumseh.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY

Of the nineteenth century, can truly be said of Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure. Thousands testify to its wonderful curative powers in seemingly hopeless cases of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas and every kind of skin disease. Mr. O. P. Algier, of Hertford, Ohio, tried everything he heard of or saw recommended and suffered 1[illegible] ears with Eczema until he found Papillon Skin Cure, which cured him. Large bottles only $1.00.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

TATE SPRINGS, TENN., July 4, 1888.

The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

During the spring of 1871, while working in the field at my home in Morgan county, Ga., I pulled off my shoes to give my feet a rest. Unfortunately, I walked into a clump of poison oak, and in a few days my feet were in a terrible condition, and I could not put on a shoe because of the soreness and swelling. I was treated as poison oak cases usually are, and everything was healed up. About the same time the following spring, 1872, my feet became sore again, as at first, and every succeeding spring for five years brought back the same condition of the disease, only each time it became more distressing, because I began to think it was a lifetime trouble. Finally, I was induced to try Swift's Specific. I took six bottles, and to-day am entirely well. My improvement was gradual from the first, and no evidence of the disease remains. I shall take pleasure in testifying as to its curative properties. It is the greatest blood purifier in existence. Yours truly, J. L. MORGAN.

The foregoing certificate is taken at random from thousands of letters in possession of the Swift Specific Co., and presented simply as a sample. It is a voluntary statement, giving facts and results of the case. Its accuracy and genuineness are beyond question.

THOUGHTFUL SANTA CLAUS.

"I've traveled through the sleet and snow,
Across the country high and low,
To fill the stockings small and great
That here in line my coming wait.
In creeping baby's tiny hose
The india rubber rattle goes;
A handsome doll, with staring eyes,
Will much the little miss surprise;
And what will more delight the boys
Than musket, drum or bugle toys?
And now, before I climb the flue,
I'll bear in mind the mother true,
Who works so hard by day and night
To keep the clothing clean and white,
And in her stocking, long and wide,
Some cakes of IVORY SOAP I'll hide."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

WOMEN IN LOVE.

An Analysis Which May or May Not Be Just, but is Worth Thinking about.

In the love of a woman there is always a certain element of childishness, which has a reflex, if but temporary action upon her whole nature. The phenomenon is due partly to the fact that she is under the dominant influence of a wholly natural instinct, partly to the fact that the object of her love is of stronger make than herself, mentally, spiritually and physically.

This sense of dependence and weakness, and, consequently, of extreme youth, remains until she has children. Then, under the influence of peculiarly strong responsibilities, she gives her youth to them, and with it the plasticity of her nature.

The moment a woman falls in love, that moment she becomes an object of paramount interest in her own eyes.

All her life she has regarded herself from the outside; her wants and needs have been purely objective; consequently she has not known herself, and her spiritual nature has claimed but little of her attention. But under the influence of love she plunges into herself, as it were, and her life for the time being is purely subjective. She broadens, expands, developes, concentrates; and her successive evolutions are a perpetual source of delight and absorbing study.

Moreover, her sense of individuality grows and flourishes, and becomes so powerful that she is unalterably certain—until it is over—that her experience is an isolated and wholly remarkable one.

Naturally she must talk to someone; she is teeming with her discoveries, her excursions into the heretofore unexplained depths of human nature; the necessity for a confidant is not one to be withstood, and who so natural or understanding a confidant as her lover?

If the lover be a clever man and an analyst, he is profoundly interested at first, particularly if she have some trick of mind which gives her, or seems to give her, the smack of individuality.

If he be a true lover, and a man with any depth of feeling and of mind, he does not tire, of course; but otherwise he eventually becomes either oppressed or frightened; he either wishes that women would not take themselves so seriously and forget to be amusing, or her belief in her peculiar and absolute originality communicates itself to him, and he does not feel equal to handling and directing so remarkable a passion.—Frank Lin.

THE PIOUS RUSSIAN.

Devotions Seen by the Traveler in the Land of the Czar.

One of the first things that strikes the stranger in St. Petersburg, and still more in Moscow, is the constant crossing that goes on in the streets. Whenever a devout Russian passes a church or a shrine or a holy altar he lifts his hat and crosses himself in the fashion of the Eastern Church.

In Moscow the number of shrines is so great and the sanctity of some of them so overpowering that it must be difficult for the devout orthodox to get along the street. In St. Petersburg the number is much less, but it is still sufficient to keep your isvostchik's arms in tolerably active exercise.

One thing puzzled me much. In St. Petersburg the women very seldom crossed themselves. For one woman who would make the sign of the cross in passing the shrine of the entrance to the Gostinnoi Dvor it would be made by a dozen men. In Moscow the women were more careful to perform their devotions, but in St. Peteraburg the males were much more devout to outward seeming than the women.

Of the women who did obeisance to the holy places in St. Petersburg all were poor. I did not see one well-dressed lady cross herself in the streets all the time I was in Russia. Officers and gentlemen were not so particular as the isvostchiks and workmen, but it was no uncommon sight to see them making the sign of the cross.

I traveled with Gen. Ignatieff from St. Petersburg to Moscow. The moment the train started the General crossed himself twice, remarking that although you should always pray, it was especially incumbent upon you to do so when starting on a journey.

The number of shrines in Russia where candles are burning before holy pictures is very great, and much greater importance is attached to the science of genuflexion than is easily credible to the non-ritualistic rover.

Sunday was much more generally observed as a holiday than I expected. The shops on the Grand Morskaya and the Nevlski Prospekt are almost all shut all Sunday.

St. Petersburg is not Sabbatarian by any means; it is more a day of amusement and of visiting than of devotion, but there seemed to me to be a much more general cessation of labor on Sunday in Russia than either in Germany or in France.—Correspondent.

AFRICAN RACE OF DWARFS.

Strange Little People Seen by Emin Pasha in His Explorations.

One of the most striking things to be met with in the earlier pages of Emin Pasha's journal is a reference to a report which is brought to him between Lado and Dufile, on the Upper Nile, that a race of dwarfs inhabit mountain caves to the west of Beden.

They are said to be only forty inches high, of a brown color, and of great agility, to eat white ants and roots, and to shoot with very small arrows, which are poisoned and very difficult to extract.

The pigmies he was inclined to regard as the remainder of a dwarf population which ages ago spread itself over Central Africa.

Four years later he himself comes upon some specimens of the Akka, a pigmy people divided into numerous small tribes, who lead a nomadic life in the Monbuttu country.

One of these Akka "had a reddish but rather dark skin (probably dirt), was very prognathous, rather swag-bellied, but exceedingly nimble. His height was 3 feet 6 inches. His whole body was covered by thick, stiff hair, almost like felt, which was especially thick on the breast." A girl fourteen years of age measured 3 feet 7.8 inch in height.

These people are said to be very expert hunters, but also very vindictive, so that the neighboring tribes are glad to let them have all they want for maintenance in return for skins and feathers, the products of the chase, which they prosecute with bows and arrows alone.

FORTUNE IN THE CARDS.

What All the Cards in a Pack Stand for in Fortune Telling.

DIAMONDS.

Ace—Ring, or parcel.
King—Fair man; generally married man.
Queen—Fair woman, married or single, according to next card.
Jack—Fair young man, always single.
Ten—Money—falseness—when next to a face card (male).
Nine—Enjoyment.
Eight—Parcel.
Seven—Money.
Six—Small sum of money.
Five—Children.
Four—Marriage.
Three—Surprise.
Two—Visitor.

HEARTS.

Ace—House, or large building.
King—Red-haired man.
Queen—Red-haired woman.
Jack—Red-haired young man.
Ten—Proposal, either of marriage or business.
Nine—Wish card.
Eight—Pleasure.
Seven—Friend.
Six—Gayety.
Five—Company.
Four—Strange bed.
Three—Strange country, or a drive.
Two—Kiss, or short journey.

CLUBS.

Ace—Letter.
King—Brown-haired man.
Queen—Brown-haired woman.
Jack—Brown-haired young man.
Ten—Deep water; long journey.
Nine—Crosses.
Eight—Disappointment.
Seven—Trouble.
Six—Eating, or drinking.
Five—Falsehood; deceit.
Four—Table.
Three—Tears.
Two—Little space of water.

SPADES.

Ace—Steamer, if point is up; parcel, if point is down.
King—Very dark man.
Queen—Very dark woman.
Jack—Dark young man.
Ten—Sickness at a distance.
Nine—Anger.
Eight—Anger or disturbance.
Seven—Vexation.
Six—Anger or vexation.
Five—Death or drunkenness.
Four—Sick bed.
Three—Disappointment.
Two—Little vexed, or a coffin.

The significations attached to the face cards in diamonds apply to the rest of the face cards in the pack. A judicious amount of shuffling, wishing desperately hard, and cutting into three parts with a retentive memory as to the meanings of the several cards, and a strong desire to have everything "come out" as one wishes it, will enable one to tell her own fortune and "sell" herself (for nothing), which is better than paying 50 cents or $1 to some wandering gypsy to do the same thing.

THE HISTORY OF "GOB."

Showing How a Good Word Has Been and Is Much Abused.

A good example of a degenerate word is "gob."

As a noun this is now vulgarly applied to the mouth, and as a verb it means to swallow. "Shut your gob!" is a polite invitation to silence among certain classes of society.

Says Tom Cringle in the first chapter of Michael Scott's famous sea story:

"I thrust half a doubled up muffin into my gob."

But the word itself is a very ancient and respectable one. "Gob" formerly meant, in a general sense, a small portion, mass, or collection of anything.

In its longer form of "gobbet" it is found not infrequently in Piers Plowman, Chaucer and Wycliffe. It was often used literally or metaphorically to describe a mouthful or a piece of anything just large enough or fit to be put into the mouth at once.

In Ludowick Barry's comedy of Ram-Alley, published in 1611, one of the characters says that "Throate, the lawyer, swallowed at one gob" certain land "for less than half the worth."

A hundred and sixty years later, Foote, in his farce, "The Cozeners," describes how "Doctor Dewlap twisted down such gobs of fat."

The old general meaning seems to have survived in America. In Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad," Gibraltar is described as "pushed out into the sea on the end of a flat, narrow strip of land, and is suggestive of 'a gob' of mud on the end of a shingle."

THE SACRED NUMBER SEVEN.

An Article for the Sunday-School Scholar.

Undoubtedly seven is the sacred number. There are seven days of creation; after seven days respite the flood came; the years of famine and plenty were in cycles of seven; every seventh day was a Sabbath; every seventh year the Sabbath of rest; after every seven times seven years came the jubilee; the feasts of unleavened bread and of tabernacles were observed seven days.

The golden candlesticks had seven branches; seven priests with seven trumpets surrounded Jericho seven times and seven times on the seventh day; Jacob obtained his wives by servitudes of seven years; Samson kept his nuptials seven days, and on the seventh day he put a riddle to his wife, and he was bound with seven green withes and seven locks of his hair were shaved off; Nebuchadnezzar was seven years a beast; Shadrach and his two companions in misfortune were cast into a furnace heated seven times more than it was wont.

In the New Testament nearly everything occurs by sevens, and at the end of the sacred volume we read of seven churches, seven candlesticks, seven spirits, seven seales, seven stars, seven thunders, seven vials, seven plagues, seven angels and a seven-headed monster. Such are merely a few instances of the sacred use of the number common to all nations and to all religions.—Christian Observer.

The Numerous Very Old Soldier.

There are still on the pension rolls of the Government over 800 men who served in the war of 1812. That war ended seventy three years ago, and there were about 50,000 men who were recognized as having a pensionable part in it.

Taking these figures as a basis a Boston newspaper man calculates that if the same proportion of veterans of the war of 1861 survive for a like period, there will be as late as 1938 some 10,000 survivors.

THE GIANTS' CAUSEWAY.—The Giants' Causeway is in the County Antrim, on the northeast coast of Ireland, between Bengore Head and Port Rush. For some seven or eight miles along that coast there are cliffs of basalt, many of which are made up in great part of rude vertical columns, which alternate with layers of amorphous beds of the same class of rocks, and ranges of these in places reach the height of 400 or 500 feet. When these are viewed in front from the sea they suggest rude resemblances to architectural forms. The name of Giants' Causeway is often applied to the whole coast range, although it is properly applicable to but a small portion of it. It is a platform of basalt, composed of closely arranged columns, ranging from 15 to 36 feet in height, and it extends from a steep cliff down into the sea, till it is lost below low-water mark. Its length exposed at low-water is about 600 feet, and it is divided into three portions, called the Little, Middle, and Large or Grand Causeway.

HOW CAN PARENTS

allow their children to cough and strain and cough and calmly say: "Oh! it is only a little cold," and keep giving them cheap and dangerous medicines, until they are down with lung fever or consumption, when they can be so easily relieved by BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP? MEDICAL ADVICE.

Take the open air, the more you take the better!
Follow nature's laws to the very letter;
Let the physic go to the bay of Biscay;
Let alone the gin, the brandy and the whisky.

Freely exercise, keep your spirits cheerful;
Let no dreams of sickness make you ever fearful.
Eat the simplest food, drink the pure cold water.
Then you will be well, or at least you ought to.

Learned Professors Say.

The most serious diseases of the heart, says Prof. Da Costa, may occur without any symptoms. Prof. Trousseau, of Paris, states that death from heart disease is usually caused by congestion of the lungs, liver, stomach or kidneys, from imperfect circulation of the blood. Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is the latest and most reliable remedy for this little understood but grave disease. It has cured thousands of cases. Don't fail to try it. Ask for testimonals. DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7th, 1888.

After Speaker Carlisle struck his desk, at noon on Monday, it was fully an hour before the hilarity of the members could be suppressed, and late in the afternoon there was little attention paid even to the reading of the President's message. The reading occupied one hour and twenty minutes. In the senate forty-two Senators appeared to answer roll call, and twenty listened to the reading of the message. With a subtle irony it happened that the seven Senators whose admirers had placed flowers on their desks were all Democrats. "Rest in peace" remarked Senator Ingalls, funereally.

The throng of visitors at the Capitol was considerable but still far inferior in size to that which generally attends the opening of Congress. Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Hoyt, Mrs. Wilson and the wife of speaker Carlisle were the only occupants of the Executive gallery. Mrs. Cleveland looked particularly serene in a walking costume of fawn colored cloth, with bonnet of the same shade, trimmed with ostrich to match. With commendable patience, she listened closely to the long reading of the message, even through the reports of the Departments, and smiled when the House roared at the allusions to Lord Sackville.

As usual, the message was received with but two opinions. The Democrats could not sufficiently admire the President's manly adherence to his tariff principles, his advocacy of the workingman's cause, and his able presentation of the Sackville case. The Republicans could not sufficiently condemn his obstinacy in tariff matters, his spleen in the treatment of foreign affairs and the bitterness with which he accepted his defeat.

Mr. Sowden, the Pennsylvania high-protectionist Democrat, said that he cheerfully endorsed the message, with the exception that he utterly repudiated sympathy with the President's tariff views.

The bill for the admission of Dakota, Montana, Washington and New Mexico is again before the House, immediate consideration having been moved by Mr. Springer. The bill as it stands cannot pass, as the Democrats demand the admission of New Mexico, and the Republicans would only consent with the promise that Dakota be admitted as two States. Final action is hardly, therefore, to be expected this session. To-morrow night the Democrats will hold a caucus on the question.

To no small extent the legislation of the present session is not so much regarded as are plans for the fifty-first Congress. The little that is usually done in legislation, apart from private bills, during a short session, will be even less. The majority of Senators and Representatives regard an extra session of the Fifty-first Congress as inevitable. Every-thing is being done to favor the plan, and should it shortly become an assured fact, the Republicans will feel indifferent as to legislation during this session. The principal necessity for the extra session arises from the time consumed in organization when majorities are so small, and from present indications, the Republican majority in the House may be only one. The Republicans interested in the extra session say that if it were called in April, the Senate tariff bill could be passed; South Dakota, Montana and Washington admitted; an enabling act for North Dakota passed, and some general pension legislation accomplished.

The Speakership candidates are hard at work and the fight will be long and bitter. Messrs Reed, Burrows, Cannon and McKinley are the avowed candidates. As between Reed and Cannon the feeling is strongest. Mr. Reed's claims are based upon long service and acknowledged parliamentary and political ability. To meet these claims, Mr. Cannon's friends say the importance of the great West calls for the election of a Western man, and that Illinois is the State to be honored. It looks as if the two gentlemen would kill each other off in a neat and pleasing manner.

An enterprising Washingtonian has originated a plan to give the inaugural ceremonies the character of a centenary inauguration. It will be just one hundred year since George Washington was inaugurated, and the most will be made of this fact in the parade. It is said that the "log cabin" schemes are distasteful to General Harrison as savoring to much of the grand father's hat" idea. If this be true, an excellent out-let will be found in the centennial idea for surplus enthusiasm

On Wednesday the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the tariff. This simply means that the old wrangle has begun again, fresh as ever. The tariff talk grows to be a gigantic nightmare and one longs to rush out into the open air and revel in gore or do something equally desperate.

OBITUARY.

Died at the residence of her parents near Tecumseh, Mich., on Dec. 7th, 1888, MISS MINNIE RECTOR.

The life we briefly notice was not an extended one. It began Feb. 7th, 1870. It terminated Dec. 7th, 1888. But life is not always to be measured by length of days. Minnie was the daughter of Frank C. and Frances D. Rector. She was the youngest of a group of three sisters, and had one brother younger than herself. The first break in this pleasant family circle has just been made by her death. One so full of cheerfulness and energy, scattering sunshine in her pathway, could not but be greatly missed. Combined with her love of action was a love of study. This took her through preparatory grades, through the entire course of the Tecumseh High School and brought her to the point of her graduation with honor at the commencement in June 1888. Eager for a higher mental equipment still, she entered the Normal School at Ypsilanti in the following fall. Not many weeks had passed however, before she was compelled to give up her studies, and Oct. 26th, found her at home smitten with typhoid fever. Her sick bed was the centre of devoted care and watchfulness, on the part of her relatives, her physician, and other helpers. Hopes and fears chased each other, like the light and shadows of an April day, through the anxious watchers' thoughts. A time of brightness came, the beginning of a convalescence a relapse followed and the life struggle closed. The weary spirit took its flight. At the funeral service on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 9th, a large company of sympathizing friends assembled, completely filling the opened rooms of the spacious home. The fellow members of Minnie's graduating class were there, bringing their floral tribute with them. The large Sunday School class to which she belonged was also there, with Miss Fannie Stocking, for 10 years its faithful and beloved teacher at its head, and in the 10 years history of the class there had been no death previous to this. At Minnie's own invitation all these former companions were present. The funeral services were conducted by her Pastor, Rev. W. H. Babbitt, with efficient aid from the choir of the Presbyterian church. He was able to suggest sources of solid comfort to the mourning. Three years ago last April, at the age of sixteen, Minnie made a public confession of her faith in the Savior, by uniting with the church. This was with her no mere formal act. Two years after her sisters had taken a similar step. Her feelings prompted her to go forward, not exactly alone, but none of her intimates accompanying her. Her career of three years and a half as a professed believer, showed that she had indeed chosen the "good part." It gave promise of higher usefulness in the future. But this promising career has been unexpectedly brought to a close. It is as if the sun had gone down when he had only just arisen; as if, while it was yet morning the day had closed. But what seems to be an ended life is but the passing behind a veil. With parting messages on her lips the living one has vanished from our sight, but only to live on in a friendlier, happier clime. Her message before she left was for us to join her there. Preparations for usefulness here, are not lost yonder. They that love and serve here, shall love and reign there. May God bless this young life in its brightness and its brevity, to friends and companions all, and may the request receive fulfilment that they all direct their course to the land into which she has gone.

OBITUARY.

Edmund Hall whose death occurred on the 18th of November last, was one of the honored pioneers of Lenawee county He was born at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 20, 1807. He remained under the parental roof until coming west. He immigrated to this county in 1834 and took up 160 acres of wild land on section 25 in the town of Raisin which has ever since been his home. He returned to N. Y. the same season and came back the following year and began in earnest to carve out a home in the wilderness. In common with the early settlers of those days he often labored under great difficulties. But he had "come to stay" and surmounting every obstacle that came along he in a few years became the owner of a beautiful farm of 147 acres, one of the best farms in a town noted for its agricultural excellence. On the 10th. of February, 1836, he married Miss Lucretia Raymond, who was his help meet and companion for over fifty years, having celebrated his golden wedding on the 10th. of February, 1886.

The deceased was a grand exemplar of that hardy New England pioneer life which has transformed this state from a wilderness into one of the most prosperous commonwealths in the last half century. He was never a devotee of fashion, but a plain, honest, reliable man, prompt in meeting all obligations and always making the golden rule the standard by which his daily life and conduct were regulated. He had four children, Austin G., Ruhama E., wife of James T. Lane, James H. and Rufus R. The two former and his widow survive him.

The two latter preceded their father to the better land.

The funeral services were conducted on Nov. 20 and were attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends, for he was widely and favorably known in his section and counted among his friends and admirers many of the older settlers of Lenawee county. Henry M. Wright, of Mayville, Mich., a life long friend, could not attend but sent a most touching tribute in writing. An honest man and a faithful servant of the Lord has gone to his eternal reward.

THE DAIRY STABLE.

FOR THE BUREAU OF DAIRY INFORMATION BY C. L. GABRIELSON.

A stable is to the dairyman what the laboratory is to the chemist—his workshop. Here the gross products of the farm are transmuted into milk. The cows are his crucibles into which the grain is put and subjected to the heat generated by the combustion of three fourths of that which was ingested in order to secure the refined product from the other one fourth. If the chemist should make use of a retort which allowed the melted matter to escape, a part of his profit would be lost. So, if the dairyman keeps a cow that has weak digestive and feeble assimilative capacity, he has simply a machine for manufacturing manure. If, on the other hand his cow is of a miserly habit, storing the fat and flesh produced from the food in her own body, then he has the satisfaction of knowing that their value as a beef animal will sometimes give him the means to purchase another cow, which may come up to his expectations in the dairy.

In our northern, temperate climate, summer finds the cow nipping fresh and fragrant herbage and yielding her milk bountifully. In the heat of the day she returns to the shade, or seeks the highest point where the breeze cools and invigorates her system. The showers cleanse her skin so that the hair shines.

If we would have our cows carry their summer state into winter quarters we must make the conditions as much like those of warm weather as possible. To this end they need a stable, which should be large enough to accommodate them comfortably; with enough breathing space that the temperature may be kept up without having the air become foul. A building with two rows of tie-ups is doubtless the most economical of space. I have tried both ways of having cows stand—heads facing each other—or the reverse. When the cows face the feeding floor fodder is more easily and rapidly done; and the cows have an opportunity of communicating with each other (?) When they stand the other way, cleaning the stable is quickly and expeditiously done. After a trial of both ways I prefer the feeding floor through the center and cows facing each other.

A stable should be thirty feet in width, and of necessary length. This gives ten feet for the feeding floor, and ten feet on each side from the stanchions. I have kept cows loose in an open shed, have tried ropes, stanchions, and various forms of trying and have settled on a combined stanchion and chain stall as the most satisfactory way of securing the cows, together with convenience in caring for them. In that stable the upright supports of the frame, for the stanchions are 2x10. On each side of these and two or three inches from them, is a stationary pole about 2½ inches in diameter, on which the ring of a chain tie is placed before it is fastened in position. The movable pole of the stanchion is then put in. A single plank placed upright at right angles with the 2x10 supports, mentioned above, makes a partition; leaving stalls for two cows. Another plank, on the feeding floor, keeps the heads of cows in adjoining stalls apart. I used the stanchion under ordinary circumstances, but when a cow is dry and heavy in calf she is fastened with the chain; leaving the stanchion open so that she has more liberty in getting up or lying down. I use a slatted floor, raised 8 inches above the gutter in the rear of the cows, which prevents them from lying in their droppings. From the gutter, behind the cows, and the outside wall is a walk three feet wide, which makes access to the cows easy and also convenient when cleaning the stables.

Sunlight, one of the essentials for keeping the cows in health during the winter confinement, is supplied by means of windows on every side.

I forgot to mention, in the proper place, that the gutter behind the cows is made water tight, and supplied with the litter from the horse-stable as an absorbent. The stable is leansed out each day.

An important feature of the stable equipment is a tally sheet and scales for weighing and recording the individual cow's milk. A sheet of paper ruled so that a column can be devoted to each cow, and weighing the milk daily, or weekly, will go a long way in deciding whether a cow should be kept or disposed of.

Among the minor conveniences may be mentioned a shelf, high up, for the milk stools, another shelf fastened to the wall with hinges at a convenient height from the floor on which to set the milk cans. This shelf is held in proper position by long hooks, and when not used is held up against the wall by another hook. We use cloth strainers held in position on the can by an elastic band; and, when necessary, we also cover the milk pail with a cloth at milking time. A pair of cards and a brush belong to the outfit of a well regulated stable; also a broom, and hoe handy by, for cleaning off the platform from under the cows, must not be neglected in the stable furnishing.

Ventilation in this stable is furnished by means of doors and openings in the floor above. In addition to this there are openings in the walls behind the cows, 6 in. by 12 in, at intervals of eight feet; these can be opened or closed at pleasure and are especially useful when milking in summer, as a current of air comes through these openings and is gratefully received by both milker and cow. Much ventilation is not needed in winter, on an Iowa prairie, but I have a system of winter ventilation which answers its purpose well. A pair of upper joists are boarded on the under side except a part over the feeding floor. Holes in the outside wall corresponding to the space between the joists, are cut out. This flue being open at both ends lets in fresh air and carries off the foul air without producing much, if any, draft in the stable.

The winter season is now at hand and now is the time to apply such additions to existing conditions as may seem advantageous.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh.

J. J. Orr, the druggist, has on hand and will keep the celebrated Indian Pill, manufacured by Dr. R. MacFarland, Genoa, O. This is the Pill that cures sick headache and headache of all kinds; also constipation and costiveness, and for one failure we will give $100. We can tell you more: this pill cures rheumatism, sciatic and chronic inflammatory; all stomach diseases yield to this wonderful discovery. Paralysis is prevented and dropsy cured by this pill. The high standard of excellency in this medicine is the result of years of hard study and experience in these diseases by the eminent Dr. MacFarland. Price $1. a box, 50 pills in a box. Dose, one pill on going to bed. J. J. Orr, keeps them, Tecumseh Mich.

COUGH! and COUGH! and COUGH!!

What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. J. J. ORR, Druggist.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

Mr. B. Hurry entertained a houseful of the members of the Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club at his home, Dec. 5th.

The Question for the evening was opened by C. H. Bramble, and was quite generally discussed by the gentlemen; it was the opionion that the reports of the Supervisors and crop correspondents are more benefit to the speculators than to the farmers, and that the law obliging the supervisors to take the crop reports ought to be repealed.

The program for the next meeting was announced as follows:

Dec.—Frank Osborne.
Sel. Read.—Mrs. Hurry.
Music—Jennie Osborne.
Rec.—Lena VanValkenburg.
Music.
Essay—Lillian Brown.
Charade—Mrs. Swartz.
Paper—Clem Bramble.

Question—At what age should a hog be marketed so that he will yield the most profit to the farmer? Opened by B. Hurry.

The club adjourned to meet in two weeks at W. S. Osborne's.

FRED. B. WOOD,
Recorder.

I had a severe attack of catarrh; and become so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as I ever could, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases, catarrh, take one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1,000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh.—A. E. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Norton Case, of Manchester, was in town Tuesday.

Burt Garlinghouse, of Kalamazoo, is in the village.

Miss Mattie Snaubles, of Saline, was in town over Sunday.

Mrs. Esther Murray attended the funeral of Miss Nettie White, Tuesday.

Rev. Mr. Champey, the new rector of Christ church, Adrian, began his pulpit labors last Sunday.

Settle up—All persons indebted to B. S. Scudder will please call and settle their accounts before Jan. 1st.
B. S. SCUDDER, Macon.

The M. E. church has long been in need of a pipe organ. A movement has been started to raise the necessary funds to procure one.

Rev. Holmes, the pastor of the Adrian Baptist church for the past 10 years, has tendered his resignation, to take effect the first of January.

At a large sale of Shropshires held at Birmingham, Oakland Co., last week, Mr. N. M. Sutton purchased 12 ewes at an average price of $30 per head. He now has the best flock of Shropshires in Lenawee Co.

A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market, if you don't think so go and see Senator Lew Palmer in his musical specialty, Natural Gas, in which he plays 20 musical instruments at the opera house, Saturday night. Admission, 15c, 20c, and 25c.

We have received the biennial report of the trustees of the Eastern Michigan asylum. Dr. Hurd, the Superintendent, is an old college acquaintance of ours, and we are glad to note his success. The institution is admirably managed under his charge.

W. A. Brown, of this village is selling a new cough syrup of his own manufacture, which is meeting with a large sale. Mr. Brown is a worthy, responsible man and his medicine is a good one. There ought to be a good demand for it.

Last Friday night the barn of Blinn Tallman situated about two miles west of Tecumseh, on the Chicago turnpike was destroyed by fire. About 15 tons of hay and a large quantity of fodder and grain were also burned. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Thatcher's Orange Butter Color is now found in nearly every hamlet that can boast of a store, as well as the largest cities throughout the dairy belt in the U. S. and Canada, and has been thoroughly tested and approved by thousands of our leading creamery men.

Miss Minnie Rector, after an illness of some six weeks, departed this life last Friday evening. The funeral services were held on Sunday last. She was a graduate of our high school, class of '88, and was one of the most talented young ladies who has passed through our school in recent years. Her untimely death will be a sad blow to the family and to society as well.

We have received many compliments for our extra holiday sheet issued last week. But the enterprising business men of Tecumseh deserve their full share of the credit. Without their liberal patronage it would have been impossible for us to issue such an extra. This week the sheet is filled with interesting short stories. Next week the reading columns will contain Christmas matter.

Robt. Hastings and Geo. Chaplin have rented the A. H. Chaplin shop and machinery. They will put in some extra machines and will do a general business in the line of planing, matching, re-sawing, and manufacturing inside work, such as door, and window frames, mouldings, etc They are both industrious young men who have had experience in that line of business. They have a good location and ought to work up a good paying business. They will also give their attention to the making of easels in all the latest styles in which class of work Mr. Hastings has had considerable experience. Success to them.

The Masonic Lodge—Order Eastern Star held a public installation of officers last Thursday evening. Grand Worthy Matron, Mrs. A. A. The Michigan Farmer was never better than now, and for a practical farmer living in this state, there is no better agricultural paper published. It is well up on all subjects pertaining to farmers' work and keeps well posted on all new methods of husbandry. Its views on the tariff question are hostile to the best interests of the farmer, but if the farmers themselves are satisfied perhaps outsiders should not complain. The HERALD will be clubbed with the Farmer as usual at the lowest club rates.

At the regular meeting of Beers Post, 140, G. A. R., held Dec, 7th., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

We paid Ridgeway a short business call yesterday afternoon. In the evening an auction social was held at the Library building, and the village turned en masse to see the sport. When we left, at half past eight to take the train, Frank Davidson was rattling off the boxes at a two-forty rate. The best part of the entertainment came after our departure.

The Tecumseh Coal & Mfg Co., are now fairly started in their new enterprise. They control the brick planing mill and all the coal sheds and lumber yards connected therewith. They will keep on hand all kinds of hard and soft coal, keep a full assortment of unfinished lumber and do all kinds of finished work for buildings. S. W. Temple and his son, C. W. Temple, will be the active managers of the concern, and the shops will be run to their fullest capacity. The new firm is bound to succeed.

The old reliable Detroit Free Press leads them all. No newspaper in Michigan can compete with it, and it ranks among the very best of western journals. Men of all parties take the paper for the news it contains and on the great question of taxation the Free Press is always found battling for the rights of the people. Michigan is proud of her M. Quad, her Luke Sharp, her Wm. E. Quinby and their talented co-laborers who have placed the Free Press at the head of Michigan journalism. We take subscriptions at club rates.

Another Great Explosion. Nobody hurt, but the bottom entirely knocked out on prices of Glassware, Crockery and Teas, commencing Saturday 15th and lasting 14 days. This means business; come everybody and we will convince you that you can get more goods for the money than elsewhere. In this special sale we are going to close out at a bargain decorated crockery ware, glassware, and also six handsome China Tea-sets of 56 pieces, in fact, almost everything in our line of crockery, glassware and chinaware, We are also making big drives in our Teas, from 10c to 50c per pound for good teas. One, a specialty, 4lbs. for $1.00, which we guarantee to give satisfaction. Remember the "Sunbeam Tea" which we are selling at 25c a pound, a great bargain. We also have a fine line of hanging and hand lamps that we have marked way down. Watch out for our prices. Come everybody; give us a trial and be convinced that we are selling cheap. We are headquarters for Groceries. Everything warranted.—Remember this sale commences Saturday, Dec. 15th, lasting 14 days, ending Saturday, Dec. 29th, 1888.

ROLL CALL.

The "Roll Call" meeting of the Baptist church on Thursday afternoon and evening, Dec. 6th, was an occasion of rare interest and success. The idea of the meeting was novel, though not without precedent. The object, as stated in the circular notice, was "a general rally of all the members for fraternal greetings, and to revive and strengthen the interest of all hearts in the life and work of the church." An interesting program was arranged, including brief addresses by the members representing various departments of the work, interspersed by song and prayer, and accompanied by social greetings and festivities. A very large number assembled, among whom were many residing at a distance while letters were read from the absent bearing Christian greetings and assurances of interest.

The afternoon session opened with devotional services which were followed by words of welcome spoken by the Pastor. Then came the calling of the Roll by the clerk of the church, C. H. Bramble, with brief responses by the members. These responses in many instances took the form of reminiscences of the past, and touching tributes of gratitude for fostering spiritual care of the church with pledges of faithfulness in future service. By the vaious methods of response, reports were had from 156 out of 214 present membership, while a number more of uniformly faithful ones were unexpectedly prevented from coming, and unable at the last moment to send reports. Remarks were also made by several not members, but identified in interest and sympathy with the church. Between 5 and 7 o'clock was the social and hand-shaking, with a bountiful supper provided by the ladies committee, of which a very large number of friends partook.

At 7 o'clock, the evening session was opened by a song service led by the chorister, Mr. S. Lester, and after a second installment of the Roll Call was completed, Dr. North, Supt. of the Sunday School addressed the meeting with a stirring practical exhortation in behalf of the interests and demands of "Our Sunday School." The pastor urged the vital relation of "Our Young people" to the life and work of the church, and the need that this element of our strength be cherished and developed. C. H. Bramble spoke of "The Young Men of Our Community," our duty to them, and how to reach them. "Our mission as a Church" was presented in a practical and comprehensive view by Dea. Coddington, and O. B. Finch presented a most tender and touching "Tribute to the Departed," in words most fitly chosen and full of pathos.

The choir rendered most important service in the sacred songs selected to fit the occasion, such as "The Roll Call of Heaven," "Is my name written There?" "Where is my boy To-Night?" "Your Mission," and "I Love thy Kingdom, Lord." Altogether the occasion was one of deep interest which will leave a lasting good impression upon all concerned.

Card of Thanks.

Kind Friends—Words cannot express the thankfulness we feel for the many expressions of love and sympathy you have shown us in our recent affliction. We would be glad to take you each by the hand, and, with sorrowing but thankful hearts, thank you. May you receive like sympathy and love when passing through deep waters of affliction.

F. C. RECTOR AND FAMILY.

GIRL ATHLETES.

Recent Developments of Grace and Power in the Female Form—Value of Lawn Tennis.

Ten or fifteen years ago no man would have believed it possible that girls—that race of whose aptitudes Tom Tulliver entertained so disparaging an estimate—could ever have become such brilliant performers in the lawn tennis court. Even among men less prejudiced than the young hero of "The Mill on the Floss," it had always been an article of faith that women "can neither throw nor leap," and that the day would never come when a tennis bat wielded by a female arm would really and truly "strike" a ball instead of "spooning" it.

They knew not what could be done with the female tennis player by merely "catching her young." The girls who have learned their tennis in the school room, so to speak, who began this game at the age when they began their "scales" and "exercises," are very often nowadays a match for their brothers. And of power has been born grace, which, indeed, if it does not always spring from power, must always have power for one of its parents.

No one who has ever seen a really skilled competitor in a "ladies' tournament" but will at once retract and apologize for the impious words "awkward" and "unfeminine" if any such slanders have ever passed his lips. Lawn tennis has now fairly won its title to be considered a fitting game not merely for "young men and children," but for "old men (or at any rate, middle-aged men) and maidens" also

I have said my say on behalf of the latter, and as to the former they, if they are sensible men, are hardened against ridicule. Why may they not as legitimately breathe themselves, though unskilled, on the tennis court, as grasp the crab-catching oar, or mount the unaccustomed horse? Aquatic and equestrian facilities, moreover, are less easily come by than the opportunities in these days for a bout at lawn tennis.—English Illustrated Magazine.

PAINTING FLOORS.

A Chapter of Advice for Housekeepers.

Now that the fashion is becoming more prevalent of using carpets which do not completely cover the area of the floor, and thus escape distortion by being so cut as to coincide with every angle, recess or curve of the walls, floor painting should certainly be more generally adopted. Painted borders are all well enough, but the whole area of the floor may advantageously be laid out in color.

This painting necessarily involves priming, which of itself adapted to floors, is hygienic, as having the effect of closing the pores in which dust lodges, the dust, with its darkening effects, never failing to find lodgment—unless, indeed, the board should be of costly hardwood, which is the exception, not the rule.

It may be said that a floor painted all over will not be seen; but, without replying that a painted border where the whole area is not colored is a deception, we may remark that the entire treatment of a floor or cover affords a security against unsightliness should any portion of the central carpet be accidently raised, and that in the event of its removal for the purpose of cleaning, the painted floor suffices, more especially if enriched with a few rugs or tinted or patterned mats.

In the hot summer months a floor artistically painted will be found preferable to carpet, as aiding in the movement of air, not harboring dust, and proving, on the whole, cooler.

Paint may be so compounded and laid on floors as to suffer little injury even when exposed in a long course of time. Should the colors become dull, a slight varnishing will suffice to renew much of their pristine freshness.

There are many rooms in a house which would be all the better for not being fully carpeted. Such especially are the bedrooms.

THE GREAT NOVELIST'S DOGS.

Sir Walter Scott and His Much-Loved Four-Footed Friends.

Sir Walter Scott was very fond of his pets, and Washington Irving relates that when he paid a visit to Scott the dogs commenced barking as he approached the house, and shortly Sir Walter approached, "and by his side jogged along a large, iron-gray staghound of most grave demeanor, who took no part in the clamor of the canine rabble, but seemed to consider himself bound, for the dignity of the house, to give me a courteous reception."

This was the famous hound Maid, a descendant of which is in possession of a gentleman living in Newburyport.

After evil days fell upon Scott, he wrote in his diary:

"My dogs will wait for me in vain. It is foolish, but the rights of these dumb creatures have moved me more than any of the painful reflections I have put down. Poor things! I must get them kind masters. There may be yet those who, loving me, may love my dog because it has been mine."

Scott's heart was in the right place.

LAZY OR PIOUS—WHICH?

Something for Very Good People To Read.

Deacon Emerson was very strict about keeping the Sabbath.

One Sunday morning, as he was riding to church, Mrs. Emerson being on a pillion behind, he saw a fox chasing a rabbit, which dodged under a large log.

"Deacon!" exclaimed Mrs. Emerson, her sympathies being touched, "don't let that fox kill the rabbit! Get off and scare him away!"

"Wife," replied the deacon, with a long drawn sigh, "it would be breaking the Sabbath to interfere," and he rode on, leaving poor bunny to its fate.

"The deacon is a very particular man, said his wife, in relating the story; "but for the life of me I couldn't say then whether he was too lazy or too pious!"—History of Weare, N. H.

The Deceitfulness of Riches.

Mr. Crœsus (to luxury-loving young wife)—"My dear, there are only two of us in the house. Is there any need for so many servants?"

Mrs. Crœsus—"Why, Mr. Crœsus, you are very, very wealthy. The servants do not draw heavily on such a bank account as yours."

Mr. Crœsus—"It isn't the expense, dear, but it seems so much like a foreign boarding house; and between the French maid, the Italian cook, the English butler, the Irish coachman, the German footman and the Yankee chambermaid, I am forgetting my native tongue."—The Cartoon.

WEATHER WISDOM.

Feathered Forretellers of Storms.

The saw-like note of the great titmouse is said to foretell rain; that of the bluetit, cold.

Various proverbs would seem to indicate that the cry of the owl, if heard in bad weather, foretells a change.

Herons, says an old author, flying up and down in the evening as if doubtful where to rest, "presage some evil approaching weather"—a legend as old as Virgil.

In Germany dwellers in the country lack faith in the skylark as announcing fine weather, but when the lark and the cuckoo sing together they know summer has come.

In Hampshire swans are believed to be hatched in thunderstorms, and it is said that those on the Thames have an instinctive presience of floods. Before heavy rains they raise their nests.

In the south of France so much store is set by the wisdom of the magpie, that if it builds its nest on the summit of a tree the country folk expect a season of calm, but if lower down, winds and tempests are sure to follow.

The abhorrence in which mariners hold the swallow-like storm petrel is well known. Its appearance is believed to denote cold weather. This little bird is the Mother Carey's chicken of sailors, and is also called storm finch and water witch.

Concerning gulls in general children who live by the sea say: "Seagull, seagull, sit on the sand; it's never good weather while you're on the land;" and fisher folk know that when the seamews fly out early and far to seaward fair weather may be expected.

When rooks fly high and seem to imitate birds of prey by soaring, swooping, and falling, it is almost a certain sign of coming storm. Staying in the vicinity of the rookery, returning at midday, or coming to roost in groups are also said to be omens to the like effect.

The constant iteration of the green woodpecker's cry before the storm has given it the names of rain bird, rain pie, and rain fowl. Stormcock is a provincial name shared by this bird and the missel thrush, the latter often singing through gales of wind and rain. Storm bird is also applied to the fieldfare.

To Scotch shepherds the drumming of the snipe indicates dry weather and frost at night, and Gilbert White remarks that woodcocks have been observed to be remarkably listless against snowy, foul weather, while, according to another author, their early arrival and continued abode "foretells a liberal harvest."—Chicago News.

LEATHER FOR BOOK BINDINGS.

The Best Dress for Our Choice though Silent Companions.

Bookbinders, as well as other workers in leather, must look to nature for the best goods. Although science has made several noble efforts to supply an imitation, and in some cases has succeeded, yet for first-class work where durability is required, the genuine skin is necessary.

Russia leather, one of the oldest modern coverings, is still the most durable, so far as wear is concerned. Although American russia (cowhide) has very largely taken the place of the genuine article—American russia being larger skins, is much better adapted to factories than the imported skin—yet for a first-class blank book in every respect the genuine russia leather is best, some excellent bookbinders to the contrary, notwithstanding.

American russia was introduced about 18 years ago, and when first put on the market it was a pale red and binders used aniline to color it a deeper red, as near the color of russia as possible; but of late years tanners are making it of a beautiful color.

The splits or buffing, as it is called, is the outside of the hide; the inside is made into patent leather for carriage tops, etc. Buffing is made in all imaginable colors and grains, and some of the best moroccos and sealskin imitations are buffing.

Roans are full substance sheepskins; skivers are split skins, the outside being used for pass books, law books and a great variety of cheap bindings; also for hat linings, jewelry cases, etc.

The inside or flesh side is used on heavy blank books for buff leather.—American Bookmaker.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR CREMATION.

Showing What Too Much Scientific Study Will Bring a Man To.

Dr. Hay, an English chemist, with a leaning toward ghastliness, has invented a substitute for cremation.

He would pound and pulverize the corpse in a mortar, breaking the bones to little bits. The resulting mass he would put through a prodigious sausage machine and make it into mincemeat. Dried by means of steam heat at a temperature of 250°, the mass would attain a commercial value as a fertilizer.

Should this method fail to suit, he suggests either the boiling of the body and the conversion of the resulting oil into a lubricant for soap, or else the placing of the body into a gas retort and converting it into illuminating gas, ammonia, tar, animal charcoal, sulphate of ammonia, aniline colors and carbolic acid.

Dr. Hay is nothing if not scientific and practical.

Sensible To Be Civil.

"I have often wondered what it was that made men affable, and why there should exist so many degrees of sociability.

After pondering over this question, I have concluded that while intellect cuts a large figure in making a man affable, often the main reason may be found in self-interest.

A boor always shows that he is deficient in common sense and gains absolutely nothing by his rudeness but the dislike of his fellows. A sensible man will always be civil.—Nashville Democrat.

A Philosophical View.

"Ma," said Bobby, in a slightly injured tone of voice, "there were lots of things you let me do before the baby came that you don't let me do now."

"Do you think so, Bobby?"

"Yes," asserted Bobby. "Still," he went on with more philosophy, "I can't expect you to be so good a mother with two children as you were when you only had one."

The Reaction Came First.

"How is your employer, Sambo? I heard he had a bad fall."

"Yes, sah, but he's sufferin' most from the reaction before he fell, sah."

"Oh, the reaction came first, did it?"

"Yes, sah, de mule kicked him ober."

CHANCERY NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN: The Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee: In Chancery.

William K. Stamp, Complainant, vs. Parmela Stamp, Defendant.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in Chancery.

At chambers in the city of Adrian in said county on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1888.

It satisfactorily appearing to this court by affidavit on file in said cause, that the defendant Parmela Stamp, is not a resident of this state, but resides in the township of York, in the county of Sandusky in the state of Ohio, one of the United States of America.

Therefore on motion of Lamb & Pratt, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Parmela Stamp, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed with the register of said court and a copy thereof to be served on said complainant's solicitors within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill and notice of this order, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by the said non-resident defendant.

And it further ordered that within twenty days after the date hereof, the said complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county of Lenawee, and that such publication be continued therein at least once in each week for six successive weeks, or that he cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant at least twenty days before the time prescribed for her appearance.

Dated November 17, 1888.

VICTOR H. LANE, Circuit Judge.

WHAT IS IT?

KIDNEY F.E.C. REMEDY TRADE MARK

An interesting letter for Ladies:

Hastings Centre, Oswego Co., N. Y., August 26, 1886.

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Dear Sirs—Pardon me the liberty of addressing strangers, but you are indeed benefactors of mankind. Your medicine is a boon and blessing to man and more especially women. It renews the very life principle in the system and takes away the terrible scourge of woman and in the place of weakness brings strength. It is indeed doing wonders for the afflicted and no one need to suffer from the terrible drain on the system arising from a disordered state of the kidneys, or from female weakness, that will try this, for it is sure. Hoping you will not consider this letter impertinent, I remain,

MARY H. BEEMAN.

That dreaded backache can be Cured

Rochester, N. Y., August 2, 1886.

F. E. C. Medicine Co.: Dear Sir—Allow me to recommend your medicine to anyone suffering from backache and kidney trouble. It has cured me entirely, and I am quite sure will do the same for anyone who will give it a fair trial.

Yours truly, MRS. A. W. KELLEY, 70 Courtland st., N. Y.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS $22 TO $900

The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments but the Mason & Hamlin organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogue free.

PIANOS GRAND & UPRIGHT.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "Mason & Hamlin Piano Stringer," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant. Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

The Teacher

Who advised her pupils to strengthen their minds by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, appreciated the truth that bodily health is essential to mental vigor. For persons of delicate and feeble constitution, whether young or old, this medicine is remarkably beneficial. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring and fall I take a number of bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and am greatly benefited."—Mrs. James H. Eastman, Stoneham, Mass.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great benefit to my general health."—Miss Thirza L. Crerar, Palmyra, Md.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—F. A. Pinkham, South Molunous, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 89 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Moffitt, Killingly, Conn.

Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 79 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned."

DEATH OF SAMSON.

LESSON XI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 16.

Text of the Lesson, Judges xvi, 23-31. Commit Verses—Golden Text, Job xxxii, 9—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Condensed from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of R. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.]

In all the Scriptures the great truth is kept before us that if we would enjoy peace and have victory over all enemies, it must be by a mind stayed upon God, and by an humble walk with Him in cheerful and whole hearted obedience. Another truth brought before us over and over and over again is that God often chooses the most unlikely instruments with which to accomplish His purposes, that no flesh may glory in His presence. And everywhere we are taught God's readiness to forgive and to restore to favor and usefulness in some measure when there is a true turning from sin to Him, either on the part of a nation or an individual.

Gideon judged Israel forty years and was succeeded by Abimelech, Tola and Jair; then they did evil again and were oppressed by the Philistines and Ammonites eighteen years; God then raised up Jephtha as their deliverer and judge, and he was succeeded by Ibzam, Elon and Abdon; then they did evil again and were delivered into the hands of the Philistines, who oppressed them forty years; God then raised up Samson as a deliverer and judge, and his is the last rule recorded in the book of Judges, the closing chapters describing the condition of things when "every man did that which was right in his own eyes." (Chap. xvii, 6; xxi, 25.)

21. "The Philistines took him, and put out his eyes." Behold him, a prisoner, a slave, blind and helpless, and consider who he is and what he had been. His birth was foretold by the Lord, who appeared twice to his mother and once to his father; he was a Nazarite to God from his birth, that is, one who was fully separated unto the Lord, having nothing to do with the vine, either as to wine or grapes, and no razor was to come upon his head (Num. vi, 1-8); as to his mighty acts, he had rent a lion as he would have rent a kid, he had slain a thousand men with the jawbone of an ass, when shut in a city by those who wanted to kill him he arose in the night and took the gates and the posts and the bar on his shoulders and carried them away to the top of a hill, and many other marvelous feats of superhuman strength had he performed, but now his power and glory have departed from him, and he is in the power of his enemies, a poor, blind, helpless prisoner. What is the cause of this terrible fall, and why this reproach upon the Lord through His servant? for not only is Samson disgraced, but the name of the Lord is dishonored. Milton in his "Samson Agonistes" makes him say:

> I * * * to God have brought
> Dishonor, obloquy, and oped the mouths
> Of idiots and atheists, have brought scandal
> To Israel, diffidence of God, and doubt
> In feeble hearts, propense enough before
> To waver or fall off and join with idols.

The cause was simply that Samson had departed from his consecration and had given his time and attention to things which he should have been separated from. He saw a woman in Timnath; he saw an harlot in Gaza; he loved a woman in the valley of Sorek; and thus, instead of making a covenant with his eyes (Job xxxi, 1), he let his eyes lead him into trouble, and now he has lost them.

22. "The hair of his head began to grow again." Not that Samson's strength lay in his hair, but in his consecration to God, of which his locks were an outward token; and as we see the outward evidence of his separation to God returning, have we not reason to believe that in his heart there is true penitence and a sincere return to the God of Israel, who had so wonderfully called him, but whom he had so grievously slandered.

23. "A great sacrifice unto Dagon, their god." Dagon is mentioned ten times in I Samuel v, 2-7, and once in I Chronicles x, 10. It was the great national god of the Philistines. The name signifies "fish," and its form is said to have been the face and hands of a man with the tail of a fish.

24. "They praised their god." If Samson had only praised the living and true God by a whole hearted consecration to Him, then these Gentiles had not had this occasion to praise their god.

"Our God hath delivered into our hands our enemy." In this and the preceding verse we find this statement, and they no doubt thought it true. Nebuchadnezzar probably thought that he subdued Jehoiakim, but it is written that "the Lord gave Jehoiakim into his hand." (Dan. i, 2.)

25. "Call for Samson, that he may make us sport." A great company of uncircumcised Philistines praising and worshiping devils or demons, and a servant of the Great God of Israel in their midst making sport for them. It is true he was not there of his own accord nor was it by any means to his liking; but if he had not of his own free will and by his own choice departed from being consecrated to God, he had never come to this most pitiful and disgraceful condition.

27. "The house was full of men and women." Three thousand on the roof, but how many thousands inside we are not told; all beholding while Samson makes sport. How few such gatherings are found to worship God; one in Brooklyn, one in London, a few others here and there; but how easy to gather the thousands if there is any sport in the service of Satan. Which way does your own heart tend; I mean, which company do you honestly enjoy the most? For I know that there are Sunday school teachers who enjoy the so called good time better than the house and service of God.

28. "Samson called unto the Lord." He does not seem to have been raised up to lead forth an army, like Othneil, Deborah and Barak, Gideon or Jephthah, but rather by acts of personal valor to avenge Israel. We now see him in prayer, his last prayer, and strange as such prayer may seem to us, God answered it. We must see Sampson here on the side of the Lord desiring the overthrow of the enemies of the Lord. Some one has suggested that he had better sight now than before he lost his eyes. It is not our natural sight, but the degree in which we see God or the measure of our faith which makes us to have power in His service.

29. "Samson took hold of the two middle pillars." The people all watching, no doubt, to see what new form the sport would take, wholly unconscious that in a moment they would be in eternity. Samson knew that he would die with them, but he knew Him whom he trusted; for a moment longer they are all in the same company, for a little while their bodies lay in the same heap, but what about their souls which cannot die?

30. "He slew at his death more than he slew in his life." Thousands out into the unseen in a moment and their ways now separate; Samson, the only one among them all who knew God, and he an unfaithful witness; but we cannot follow.

UNHEEDED GIFTS.

> They placed rare lilies in her hands,
> Poor hands that scarce had touched a flower,
> And creamy rosebuds, whose perfume
> Embalmed her for her funeral hour.
> They wrapped her form in lustrous silk,
> And draped small folds of filmy lace
> About the slender pulseless wrists,
> And underneath the patient face.
> At last she lay in perfect rest;
> While voices, late so slow to praise,
> Rehearsed her many virtues o'er,
> And spoke of all her pleasant ways.
> The sleeper heeded not the wealth
> Of bloom that lay on either hand;
> And not a word of love or loss
> Her sealed ears could understand.
> Strange, we so often keep the flowers
> To lay in folded hands at last;
> And little luxuries of life
> Withhold, till care for them is past.
> Strange that we do not oftener praise
> The willing toiler by our side!
> Why keep the full-blown flower of love
> Until our friend we loved has died?

A JAPANESE TEMPLE AND BELL.

This a Marvel of Sweet Tone as Well as of Colossal Size.

If I were a good Buddhist I would say a prayer of two to the Chioin bell, the largest in Japan, but a monster breathing sweet music that thrills one from head to foot, and ringing so seldom that the dates are kept in mind carefully, lest one miss the great treat.

The bell hangs in a shady little place at the top of a stone staircase by itself, and is struck from the outside by a swinging beam that gives the soft reverberations, that do not jar on the ear no matter how powerful they are.

When the huge beam is unchained and swung it is generally at the time of the five-o'clock mass in the morning, and heavy sleepers have been unconscious of the musical booming and missed it all. Others are wakened by the strange vibration and the soft music and pulsating on the air, and in the half consciousness of waking it seems like part of some beautiful dream.

It is the greatest pity that with such a magnificent bell the temple does not see fit to ring it oftener.

The Chioin is a rich temple, and its altar one of the most gorgeous in Kioto, a mass of carved and gilded ornaments surrounding a massive gilded shrine.

Occasional worshippers come and kneel on the mats and mutter their prayers, but most often one finds the only occupant of the space is a lone old priest industriously hammering away at a modern drum shaped like a huge round sleighbell. From five o'clock in the morning until the temple closes at four in the afternoon the thunk, thunk keeps up.

A nice old woman, who must be a professional mender, from the incessant patching and darning of blue cotton garments that she keeps up, takes care of the shoes while one roams the temple stocking-footed, but she does not offer to mend the foreign stockings worn out on matted and polished wood floors.—Globe.

A HORSEY DOMINIE.

Why the Great Kentucky Senator Thinks a Great Deal of Him.

Senator Beck has among his friends a Presbyterian clergyman who lives in the northern part of New York and who is an excellent judge of horse-flesh.

"I shall never forget," said Beck the other day, "our first meeting. It was at a planter's, near Lexington, who raises some very fine colts every year.

"Accompanied by our host we took a stroll one morning among the barns and stables and looked at the stock, when presently a couple of colts, six weeks old, were brought out for our inspection, by one of the stable boys.

"'Those are Morgan colts,' said the clergyman.

"'Why,' I exclaimed in surprise and overjoyed at finding a man of the cloth who seemed to know something about horses, 'do you know a Morgan colt when you see it?'

"'Certainly,' said the clergyman promptly, 'or an Eclipse colt, for that matter.'

"Well," continued Beck, "it was the first time I had ever met a minister who knew a Morgan horse or any other at sight; and we have been fast friends ever since.

"Why, sir," added Beck in a burst of enthusiasm and admiration for his friend's knowledge of horse-flesh; "that man could have a call to any church in Kentucky."

SHEEP SHEARING BY MACHINERY

An Improvement First Introduced in Australia.

The process of sheep shearing by machinery is now performed in Australia by an ingenious kind of device, the results, as represented, being very satisfactory.

The apparatus in question is a very simple one, being made on the same principle as the cutter of a mower or reaper, and the knives are worked by means of rods within the handles, these in their turn being moved by a core within a long flexible tube, which is kept in a rotary shaft, and wheels driven by a stationary engine. The comb is in the form of a segment of a circle, about three inches in diameter, with eleven conical-shaped teeth.

Each machine is worked by a shearer, and, as the comb is forced along the skin of the animal, the fleece is cut.

The machine can be run either with a steam or gas engine, or by ordinary horse power, and does not easily get out of order.

Grotesque Goose Story.

"When I was in Alabama, between Porter's Gap and Millerville," said a gentleman living in Atlanta, "I came to a country place where a man was driving ten or twelve geese from a branch toward a cotton patch.

"'For Heaven's sake,' said I, 'what is it you have on the necks of those geese?'

"'Those are gourds, full of water. I drive these geese into that cotton patch and keep them there all day weeding out the cotton. There is no water in the cotton patch, and I have to give them water in this way to keep them there.'

"'But how do they get the water out of those gourds under their necks?'

"'They drink out of each other's gourds. Each gourd has an opening in the side so that another goose can put his bill into the gourd and drink. If you will stay here long enough you will see it yourself.'

"I waited there half a day to see that performance, and finally I saw it. The geese did just as the man said they would. When a goose got thirsty he walked up to his neighbor and coolly drank out of the gourd on his neck."—Atlanta Journal.

GRAPE WINES

ALSO

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal churches for communion. Excellent for females, weakly persons and the aged.

ADOPTED IN HOSPITALS AS THE BEST FOR INVALIDS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine !

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This celebrated wine is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal hospitals and boards of health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particular beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that effect the weaker sex.

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Oporto Grape preserved in its natural fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the exciter of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret.

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry.

Is a wine of superior character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

Is a pure distilation of the grape, and stands unrivalled in this country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

He Stopped the Mob.

A Southern Sheriff Who Kept His Official Oath,

BUT WITH DEPLORABLE RESULTS.

Ten Citizens Bite the Dust Before a Sharp Fire of Winchesters, Among Them, Some Who Were Trying to Stop the Riot—The City Under Martial Law, and the Sheriff Charged with Murder—The Crime and Probable Criminal Which Caused Bloody the Outbreak.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 10.—An attempt at midnight Saturday to lynch Richard Hawes, in jail on a charge of murdering his wife and daughters, resulted in a terrible tragedy. The alleged murderer is unharmed, but a score of citizens of Birmingham are killed and wounded.

About 12 o'clock the mob around the county jail began slowly pressing back the outer guard and advanced down Twenty-first street to the mouth of the alley leading to the jail entrance. This alley is about 100 feet long and twenty wide and is the only approach to the jail.

When the crowd reached the mouth of the alley, Sheriff Smith from the jail warned the men to stand back time and time again. He yelled to them to keep back as they would be fired on if they advanced further.

Finally he called out: "I will count three, and if a man remains in the alley we will fire."

He counted three, and the crowd fell back a little, but the authorities did not give the order to fire. This seemed to make the mob bolder, and again they pressed up the alley. Sheriff Smith yelled to them: "I will count five, and if you do not fall back we will fire."

He counted five, while the mob hooted, yelled, and continued to advance. Then the officers opened fire, which was returned by the mob.

At least 500 shots were fired. Then the mob fell back, leaving the ground covered with dead and wounded.

Several of the dead were hurriedly carried away by their friends before being identified.

A full list of the casualties in the conflict shows that three men were instantly killed, seven fatally wounded, and thirty more or less seriously injured. The list of the two former in detail is as follows:

Dead—M. B. Throckmorton, the postmaster; J. R. McCoy, A. B. Tarrant, A. D. Bryant, C. C. Tate, and an unknown negro.

Fatally wounded—Charles Bailey, A. J. Scheild, formerly of Kalamazoo, Mich.; Charles Jenkins, and —— Branden.

Wounded seriously—Lawrence Fitzhugh, Colbert Smith (colored), J. W. Montgomery, —— Berkeley, John H. Merritt, Matthew Kennedy, J. W. Owen, J. W. Gilmore, Frank Childer, Albert Smith, W. A. Bird. None of the officers was hurt.

The people were frenzied with excitement and threatened to blow up the jail with dynamite, but the military were got out in force and cleared the streets around the jail.

Inside the jail the bullets flew as the mob whistled around those confined there. Through it all Hawes appeared indifferent.

At 3 a. m. Hawes was growing nervous, and to a reporter said:

"Let them kill me if they will. I have nothing now to live for, but I swear I am innocent. I must, however, thank the officers for protecting me as they did."

"What did you think while the shooting was going on?" he was asked.

"That I was as willing to die that way as any other."

Threats have been made against the life of the sheriff, and only a strong military force will prevent a riot.

A FRENZIED COMMUNITY.

Birmingham Wild with a Spirit of Outlawry—The Sheriff Arrested.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 10.—A special to The American from Birmingham, Ala., says: Yesterday and last night the city was a military encampment. Civil authorities practically stepped down and out and Col. Tom Jones, of Montgomery, with thirteen military companies is absolutely in charge of affairs. The jail is guarded by state troops with picket lines extended several squares in every direction, and at each approach there frowns the countenance of a Gatling gun. Mounted scouts are sent out of the city, and at regular intervals acquaint Col. Jones with the condition of the public mind and prospects of armed rising by the people. The streets have been a living, maddened mass and very little oratorical pyrotechnics could readily organize a mob whose solemn duty would be declared to be to avenge the "murder" of the popular Throckmorton and those who fell by him.

All along the walls of the city are posted petitions of various kinds signed by thousands of people. One of these recites at length the assertion that Sheriff Smith had "murdered in cold blood" some of the best citizens of Birmingham, and asked Governor Seay to immediately relieve him of his duties as sheriff. Another petition, side by side, reads: "This is to hang him," and was signed by thousands of passers. Great excitement was caused by the funeral cortege, through a principal highway, of one of the victims of Saturday night's affray. The lengthy procession was headed by a brass band playing solemn dirges. The postoffice building is draped in mourning.

At 5 o'clock last evening a citizen went before a justice of the peace and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Sheriff Smith and his deputies on the charge of murder. This was served by the coroner, who found Smith in the jail, and the coroner himself took charge of the jail.

During the afternoon the rumor became widespread that 1,500 miners from Pratt mines, about five miles from Birmingham, would, after dark, march to the city, armed with guns, pistols, and dynamite cartridges, and with the increase to their ranks that was expected, assault the soldiers and with dynamite blow to atoms the jail. That such would be attempted was expected even by the military, though a successful finale was not anticipated.

Sheriff Smith says: "We begged and pleaded with the crowd to keep back and then they fired the first shots. Several shots were fired by the crowd before I gave the order to fire. We begged them to halt at the mouth of the alley and still they kept coming on. We begged them to go back time and again, warned them we would shoot, but they would not listen to us. They came half way up the alley, close to the jail door and were shouting, 'Blow up the jail with dynamite.' After all this, and after they opened fire, I gave the order to fire. They continued firing after we ceased. I feel that we could not have done anything else under the circumstances and I deeply regret the necessity."

The chief of police made a similar statement.

Col. Jones has issued the following order:

Charged by his excellency, the governor, with the command of the troops now assembled here, and the preservation of the public peace, I earnestly invoke the aid of all law-abiding citizens. Let every one of them make it his special business to keep down excitement. I particularly enjoin upon all law abiding citizens to refrain from assembling about the jail, and request them not to assemble in crowds any where, and to disperse when requested to do so. They are also requested to report to the judges and other magistrates any persons who indulge in threats of violence or endeavor to incite others to mob violence. If any there be who still meditate further violence I earnestly warn them it will be sternly repressed. Let us have no more bloodshed. The law in its own orderly and majestic way will surely punish the guilty. Attempts by individuals to inflict private vengeance always cause the shedding of innocent blood. The state troops now here are ample to preserve order. [Attention is called to the law on the subject.] These sections must be rigidly enforced. Anxious to save the shedding of blood, I solemnly call the attention of all persons to these provisions of the law, and warn all persons whomsoever that they will be rigidly enforced whenever it is necessary.

[Signed] THOMAS G. JONES,
Colonel Second Regiment, A. S. T.

The newly made mayor added to this a proclamation couched in a similar vein.

THE CHARGE AGAINST HAWES.

It Is in Brief, That He Has Murdered His Whole Family.

Last Tuesday the body of a young girl was found in the lake. The next day several persons identified the body as that of a daughter of a railroad engineer, Dick Hawes. Hawes lived in the suburbs of the city with a wife and several children. Hawes left town Monday. Officers went to the house, but found it closed, and the family gone. That evening a negro woman informed the coroner that last Saturday Hawes left this girl in her charge for a few days. Monday night about 8 o'clock he called and took the girl away, saying that he was going to place her in a convent in Montgomery. Those who knew the Hawes family believed that the mother, too, had been murdered and the body concealed. The couple had been divorced, and he had taken one child, a boy, from the mother and sent him to a sister in Atlanta.

Monday Hawes married in Col[illegible] Miss., and was passing through here[illegible] his second wife on his way to August[illegible] when he was arrested. He was a little tated at first, but when closely questioned at the jail and told that one of his children had been murdered he seemed apparently unconcerned, and said he had left Mary and another little girl some days ago with her mother, and that all of them had already gone to the mother's relatives somewhere in Maine.

Facts, however, kept coming out that did not agree with Hawes' statements, and the conviction settled down on the community that the mother had gone the same way as the daughter. It is also known that Hawes was not divorced from his first wife, and had lied to the girl he married last week. So search for the woman's body was begun and blood-stains were found in every room of the Hawes cottage. Following up the "signs," at noon Saturday the body of the missing woman was found at the bottom of a lake in the park, half a mile from the cottage where the family had lived and five miles from East Lake, where the body of little May Hawes was found last Tuesday. The head of the dead woman had been crushed in by a blow with an axe and the body was kept at the bottom of the lake by 200 pounds of iron fastened about the neck, feet and waist.

The couple's second child is missing, and search for her is going on. There is no doubt her body will be found in the lake where the mother's body was found, and the lake will be drained.

All Saturday evening the wildest excitement that Birmingham has ever known prevailed. Second and Third avenues and Nineteenth street were filled with a mass of people, and the crowd grew larger every moment. Business had been suspended on account of the great tragedy, and no other subject was thought of. Talk of lynching Hawes and two negroes who had been arrested for complicity, was free and open.

Mayor Thompson issued strict orders to Marshal Packard to thoroughly protect the jail and the city, and a large number of tried and true men were sworn in to special duty, and they surrounded the jail, armed with Winchester rifles.

An excited citizen who mounted a box in front of the Florence hotel and urged the mob to violence was arrested and marched off to prison.

Hawes says he was married to Miss Emma Pettis, daughter of Col. Pettis, of Atlanta, by whom he had three children. He alleges he secured a divorce from her last October, but continued to live with her and she cared for the children.

The new wife says Hawes represented himself to be a widower with but one child, a boy who had relatives in Atlanta. She announces she will take immediate steps to have her marriage with Hawes annulled.

THE BEVIER REIGN OF TERROR.

No Hope for Peace While the Strike Lasts—Militia Ordered Out.

BEVIER, Mo., Dec. 10.—There is very little hope entertained here that the disturbances arising out of the recent strike are at an end, and fresh outbreaks are looked for hourly while the strike lasts. The sheriff is unable to secure a sufficient force of men to prevent disorder if an outbreak takes place. There are two armed bodies of men, ready at a moment's warning to renew the trouble, and the accidental firing of a gun would be the sequel for a bloody struggle. The disarming of both sides can only be accomplished by the governor placing the town under martial law.

Saturday night the storehouses of Loomis & Snively, the leading miners of the place, were burned, and are thought to have been set on fire.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 10.—Gov. Morehouse, of this state, arrived at Bevier last evening and ordered out the militia to quell the disturbance among the strikers at that place. Two companies of the Third regiment left this city for Bevier this morning.

FATALITY AT A REFINERY.

Three Men Successively Overcome by Noxious Gas.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 8.—A special from Findlay, O., says William Lightfoot, an employe of the Peerless Refining company, while cleaning a still, was overcome by gas and fell face downward into a pool of oil. Ephriam Weirick, who went to his assistance, also fell a victim to the noxious vapor. Phil O'Connell, a third man experienced the same result. The three were finally gotten out. Lightfoot is dead, Weirick dying, and O'Connell will recover. The first two leave families in destitute circumstances.

The Dakota Statehood Convention.

JAMESTOWN, D. T., Dec. 7.—At the convention held here Wednesday in the interest of statehood for this territory resolutions were adopted favoring division on the seventh parallel and immediate admission of the northern portion under the name of North Dakota, even if a special session of the Fifty-first congress be necessary to that end; that the next territorial assembly provide for a constitutional convention for North Dakota, and that South Dakota, Montana, and Washington are asked to co-operate in the movement.

KISSES ON INTEREST.

A Father's Beautiful Counsel to his Daughter.

A father talking to his careless daughter, said:

"I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any action of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away.

"I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast, and when your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face. Besides you owe her a kiss or two.

"Away back when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough old world. And then the midnight kiss with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned over your restless pillow, have all been on interest these long, long years.

"Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of work during the last ten years the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours, far more, and if you were sick that face would appear more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to you to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face.

She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands, that have done so many necessary things for you will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late."

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

"The Sweet Power of Music."

The little city of Dalton, in North Georgia, has a tradition about John Howard Payne.

When the Cherokees were corralled for exportation from North Georgia and East Tennessee to what is now Indian Territory, Payne was one of the whites at the frontier settlement of Cross Plains, located where Dalton now stands. Many of the Indians, loath to leave the homes of their childhood and of their tribe for generations, tried very ingenious methods of dodging the officers. Payne several times shielded them.

Complaint was made against him, a warrant was issued, and he was arrested afterward by Sheriff Gen. Underwood, at the home of old John Ross, hereditary chief of the Cherokees, whose log cabin still stands in the now suburbs of Chattanooga.

Payne, evidently with the thoughts of the homeless Indians in his mind, began to sing the first stanza of his now world-famous song, then unpublished, "Home, Sweet Home."

The pioneer Sheriff stood still as the words fell upon his ear.

"What song is that?" he asked as the first verse ended.

"It's a little composition of my own," answered Payne.

"Sing me some more—sing all of it!" exclaimed the frontiersman.

And Payne did sing it, with such spirit and understanding that the Sheriff's feelings got the better of him, and he told Payne he could help the Indians as much as he pleased.

GIGANTIC ENGINEERING.

The Proposed Bridge between England and France.

The contemplated Channel bridge, as outlined by French and English engineers, is expected to cost some two hundred million dollars, the shortest distance being some twenty-two miles, that is, on the score of shallowness.

The depth of the Channel is declared to be much less than is commonly supposed, and there are two shallows—those between Cran-aux-Aufs and Folkestone, where the depth is only twenty feet, and these, it is expected, will insure a material difference in laying the foundations and huge piles which will be required for such a gigantic structure.

From the French coast to these shallows the depth is about 160 feet, and from the other shallow to Folkestone about 100 feet.

The plan is to have a bridge with two slight bends, the first deviating a little to reach one shallow, and the other falling back to reach Folkestone.

The piles required would be blocks of concrete and masonry 160 feet long by 100 broad, these to be placed at intervals of about 550 yards, these measurements to be possibly augmented in order to insure to the bridge a strength capable of bearing some 25,000 tons weight.

The causeway of the bridge will be about 160 feet above the sea level, or of sufficient height to enable vessels of any class to pass freely beneath it.

The Artist in the Country.

She does not carry sketching tools any more. She was full of artistic ideas, and carried all her materials with her as she roamed through the woods. She came to a little farm house.

It was in the country. Naturally, an artistic outfit must make an impression and provoke the admiration of those simple people who live in ignorance of everything metropolitan. She stopped at the ranch house and the lady of the ranch came out and greeted her.

"Good morning," she said.

"Good morning," said the native.

"Beautiful morning, is it not?"

"Y-a-a-s; and what may you peddle?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

FOR CHILDREN OF ALL AGES.

St. Nicholas for 1889.

PEOPLE who have the idea that St. Nicholas Magazine is only for little children should look over the prospectus of that magazine for 1889, and they will discover that it is for children of all ages, "from five to eighty-five," as some one recently said of it. Indeed, while St. Nicholas is designed for girls and boys, it might almost be called a "family magazine," for the grown-up members of a household will find much to interest them in every number.

The editor, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, calls the next volume an "all-round-the-world year," because it is to contain so many illustrated papers about the world in general—not dry geographical papers, but stories and sketches and tales of travel and adventure by land and sea, and all illustrated by the best artists. The features will include a serial story, "How We Made the Farthest North," by Gen. A. W. Greely, the well-known commander of the Greely Expedition; a serial about Canada, by Mrs. Catherwood, who is writing a serial story for The Century this year; "Indians of the Amazon," by Mrs. Frank R. Stockton. There are many papers about Europe, including a Christmas story of life in Norway, by H. H. Boyesen; articles on Holland and the Dutch, by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge; "The Queen's Navy," by Lieut. F. Harrison Smith, R. N., with illustrations of many of England's finest war ships; "The Winchester School," illustrated by Joseph Pennell; "English Railway Trains," by Wm. H. Rideing, etc., etc. The French papers include "Ferdinand de Lesseps and his two Ship Canals," and there are several interesting contributions on German, Italian and Russian subjects.

Under "Asia," comes "Boys and Girls in China," by Yan Phou Lee (a recent graduate of Yale); "Home Life in the East," by Mrs. Holman Hunt, and a number of papers about Japan. Under "Africa" there is a sketch of Henry M. Stanley, by Noah Brooks, and several stories about Egypt. Australia is not forgotten, nor the islands of the sea, and there are even to be stories of under the sea.

Of course the bulk of the contents will relate to American subjects, as usual. Mrs. Burnett, the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," contributes a story of New York called "Little Saint Elizabeth;" there will be papers describing how the government offices are conducted, papers about athletics, amateur photography, etc. The full prospectus will be sent to any one who wishes to see it by the publishers, The Century Co., of New York.

The Graphic recently said of St. Nicholas, "the family without it is only half blessed."

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

THE question has often been asked, "to what does The Century owe its great circulation?" The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that "it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department." In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue throughout the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln history and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." As is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters. A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons. George W. Cable will write "Strange, True Stories of Louisiana." There will be novelettes and short stories by leading writers, occasional articles on war subjects (supplemental to the famous "War Papers" by General Grant and others, which have been appearing in The Century), etc., etc.

The Century costs four dollars a year, and it is published by The Century Co., of New York, who will send a copy of the full prospectus to any one on request.

Fatal Explosion in a Mine.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 4.—A special to The News from Newcastle, Colo., says that one man was killed and eight seriously injured by an explosion in the Midland mine yesterday afternoon. Several of the wounded will die.

ESTATE OF HUGH HEANEY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday the 12th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Hugh Heaney, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John Heaney, a brother of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Alexander Richard or some other suitable person.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 7th day of January, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ICE CREAM.

Facts and Fancies Regarding This Delicious Refreshment.

Indians will eat ice cream if they have it until they can't walk. Dolly Madison asked a chief of a delegation, who was dining with her and the President at the White House, and who seemed to favor that dish, if he wouldn't like some more. His reply was characteristic, if not strictly polite:

"Me pretty blank full now. But me stand up and try."

A noted physician received a nice compliment from a little 4-year-old patient.

"You are a splendid doctor," she lisped, "The best doctor I ever heard of," continued the little invalid.

"And why do you speak so nicely of me, my little darling?" eagerly asked the flattered physician.

"Oh, because you ordered ice cream for me," was the ingenuous reply.

"Begorra, sir, you have no equal as a doctor in the broad land," said a grateful Irishman when the physician prescribed whiskey.

Ice cream affords many a text for squibs to the humorist, and hardly a day passes that one of them doesn't appear. It isn't known who first discovered that the oyster was edible or who ventured to drink the first cup of coffee or who invented ice cream. But they are worthies, and here's to them.

There's a half million invested in the ice cream business and it's a growing trade. Just think of it; one can send a postal card for a pint of ice cream to be left at his residence at a certain hour and it will be delivered. This is an accommodation and leads to frequent orders and large ones. It is estimated that 1,000,000 quarts are eaten in New York on a sultry Sunday.

It was Sydney Smith who thought of doffing his flesh and sitting in his bones when the thermometer was ninety degrees in the shade. But think of wading with a linen bathing suit a few minutes into a pyramid of 1,000,000 quarts of vanilla ice cream and being obliged to eat your way out!

ONE SMALL BOY.

His Performances Are Ahead of the Record.

The small boy is proverbially lively and capable of making trouble for himself and others, but the reports which come from Wayland, La., regarding one specimen of this class go a little ahead of the performances of any other boy, at least on this coast, who has been heard of to date.

This youth started out one morning recently, in search of crabs, and wading about near shore, stepped with his bare foot on a broken bottle, half buried in the sand, and had four toes nearly severed from his foot.

The wound was dressed, and the little fellow went to play at one end of the wharf, and by some means managed to fall into the water. He was rescued, and, clad in dry garments, he decided to sit quietly on the wharf and gently cast a line for fish.

Soon he felt a bite, and pulling in his prey found he had secured a catfish. Grasping the creature to remove it from the hook, he was soon rushing screaming up the wharf, having been pierced in the hand by the barbed fin of the cat.

Came home finally and handed to the resident, and by [illegible] with a dime, got him to stand still while the fin was pulled from his [illegible]. The boy put the rock in his mouth while he braced himself to endure the agony of the operation. His father pulled out the fin, and the boy [illegible] and yelling with pain swallowed the rock he held in his mouth.

At this point such story drows a veil over the scene. Evidently there is but one method of bringing up a boy like that. He should be put in a flour-sack and led through the household until he is old enough to keep out of mischief.—San Francisco Chronicle.

ELUSIVE GEMS.

The Strange Manner in Which Dropped Diamonds Disappear.

Every trade has peculiarities about it that are inexplicable. A noticeable instance of this is the strange manner in which diamonds and other precious stones disappear when accidentally dropped by a dealer while handling them.

"It really seems," said a jeweler to a reporter, "that these valuable stones have the power of motion. A diamond dropped at one end of a room has been found in the dust at the further end of the apartment.

"On another occasion I saw a stone that was dropped to the floor from a loose setting, and after hours of fruitless search, this same stone was found in the show window six feet from where it fell.

"A friend of mine and a customer of his spent two hours in looking for a diamond that flew from the tweezers in which it was held for inspection, and when they had given up the search in despair it was found nestling coyly in the thick, black beard of the customer.

"Other precious stones seem to have the same faculty for disappearing. A short time ago a dealer allowed a fine topaz to slip from his hand. The spot on the floor where it fell, and in fact every part of his office, was thoroughly searched; but the stone was never recovered."

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at cost price? No medicine in the world is giving such unprecedented satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

THE BELLE OF LIMA.

Her Beauty and Fascinations, and the Care Taken of Her by a Jealous Mother.

Lima from the earliest times has been noted for its beautiful women; not merely for symmetrical features, but elegance of physique and graceful movement.

In speaking of the women of Lima reference is made to the superior class of Spanish descendants, the genealogies of Pizarro and his followers, who, as Prescott states, shod their horses with silver shoes and gambled away in one night the accumulated wealth of centuries.

A typical Lima belle is of greater stature than the North American model of beauty, possessing a well-rounded, graceful form, small and elegantly moulded feet, and pearly teeth.

The eyes are dark, large, and so bewitching in their expression as to drive care from the skipper's mind as he whirls his ideal beauty through the long hallway, his soul keeping time with the spirited waltzes, until gathered into the folds of the same manta with his senorita. The essentiality of the life of a Liman belle is pleasure.

The young ladies (senoritas) of the family either accompany their parents in the evening ramble or are attended by their personal servants; usually two young ladies walk together, followed by their attendants. Should they meet a gentleman of their acquaintance, they cordially invite him to join them in their passo.

If he be a Peruvian he takes his place behind the ladies and chats over their shoulders as they pass along. Should he happen to be a grengo, as foreigners are termed, he would be politely asked to walk in the rear, and would suffer from solid indifference unless he should sufficiently compensate the attendants—which is no difficult matter—to remain in some alley until the return of the ladies.

If this arrangement is consented to by all, the young people seek secluded streets, where they are not liable to meet with parents and friends and where all formality is thrown aside.

If it should transpire that this gentleman calls upon these young ladies the following evening, the coolness of his reception would indicate that they had never before met; but he would be ushered into the parlor and hospitably received by the family.

Young ladies are not allowed to receive gentlemen callers in private. One of the parents, a sister or an attendant, assists in entertaining, and at times the whole family.

The mother, knowing the passionate disposition of her race, constantly endeavors to screen her daughter from secluded male company until her marriage. After marriage she is free to invite to her house all her lovers and to there entertain them, whether her husband is there or not.

This newly gained freedom extends further—to the extent that she is now at liberty to indulge in flirtations upon the streets or in the gardens, with her bewitching glances luring her admirers to her home.

However, many daughters are exasperated beyond patience from observing the flirtations of a married sister or other relative, and devote their evenings upon the balcony passing notes to their lovers.

Perhaps he, a stranger, first attracted her attention as she leaned over the balluster by passing several times beneath the balcony. If she desires his acquaintance he receives some signal which emboldens him to bow or pass a card to the lady.

The initiatory being over, evenings are passed in this manner until the acquaintance has ripened into friendship, when the gentleman is free to call or stroll through the plaza or garden. These balcony scenes being clandestine, they are not enacted until a late hour, when the mother is unconscious of her daughter's whereabouts, as she has been carefully watched until she is safely lodged in her bedroom, with its barred windows.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Some Ingenious Euphemisms.

You remember the young lady who went to have a look at the penitentiary in San Quentin, and got into conversation with a prisoner, and wished to ask how long he was in for in a delicate way. She asked:

"How long do you expect to be away from home?"

"There was a lady in the country whose husband had been given fourteen days for a spree and a fight. The day after he was sentenced a city friend called upon her.

"And where is your husband?"

"John? Oh, John went down to the Court House yesterday on some business and I don't think he'll be back for a couple of weeks."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Fate of Chicago.

"Bill" Mason, of Chicago, tells of a drunken fellow who dropped asleep in a graveyard into which he had wandered overnight.

He was suddenly roused from sleep by the sound of an earsplitting horn which he mistook for the archangel's trumpet on the resurrection morn. Rubbing his eyes, he exclaimed:

"What! never a one rising here but me! It speaks hard for Chicago."

Wanted a Hen.

A man who subscribed to the News for three months writes:

"I want to pay for my subscription, but I'm a little short of money; so I send you a half dozen eggs. If you'll put 'em under a settin' hen they'll hatch out enough chickens to pay for a year's subscription."

Now, this is a new way to pay debts; but if somebody will give us a hen we will try the experiment.—Smithville (Ga.) News.

Bursted in Testing.

The Big Gun So Much Was Expected of.

PITTSBURG CAST STEEL NO GOOD.

Our First Experiment in Casting Guns Solid Proves a Smashing Failure—The Breech Blown to Pieces with Forty-Eight Pounds of Powder, Demolishing the Bomb-Proof House and Scattering the Debris Around Promiscuously.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 6.—The big gun manufactured by the Pittsburg Steel company on Jan. 17 last was tested in this city yesterday afternoon and proved a miserable failure. The first shot was fired at 2:10 p. m. The gun was charged with only thirty-six pounds of powder. This shot was fired all right, and its effect was a geyser of mud and earth, and a commotion among the dredging vessels in the bay.

The second time the gun was charged with forty-eight pounds of powder. When it was touched off a showerbath of mud, boards, beams and huge pieces of steel were scattered in every direction. The whole bomb-proof structure in which the gun was confined was struck by the lumps of steel from the gun and demolished like a paper box. The gun, carriage and all were buried underneath a huge pile of big beams, logs, earth, etc. A piece of steel off the gun, nearly three feet long and two feet thick, was thrown fifty feet away. Other pieces of steel were lying all around.

The structure in which the gun had been placed, and which was demolished by the exploded gun, took fire, but the flames were soon extinguished. The breech of the gun up to several inches in front of the trunnions was bursted to pieces. The destruction of the gun carriage, and other preparations for the test cost the government between $5,000 and $6,000. The Pittsburg Steel company's loss is $3,300.

Lieut. A. M. Knight, of the navy, says the gun burst simply because the metal could not stand the test. He did not believe if the breech had been heavier it would have been able to resist the pressure.

President Johnson, of the Pittsburg company, said he was perfectly satisfied with the fairness of the test.

The gun weighed 10,510 pounds, was sixteen feet long, and was made of Bessemer cast steel.

ELEVEN MILLION VOTERS.

A Table Showing the Vote by States of Nov. 6.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—In the following table official returns of the vote for presidential electors are given for most of the states. It shows that since 1884 the Republican vote has increased by 384,585 in the thirty-seven states, the Democratic by 457,259, and the Prohibition vote by 93,383, while the Union Labor party gave 30,444 less for Streeter than the Greenback party did for Butler in 1884. The loss on the combined Labor vote wil be somewhat lower than 30,444 when all the returns of the United Labor part for Cowdrey are made. The total vote of the four leading parties was 10,956,742, against 9,985,967 in 1884, an increase of 970,775:

THE SOLONS AT WORK.

Proceedings in the Senate and House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The meeting of the second session of the Fiftieth congress was a brief one yesterday. Nothing was done in the senate after the president's message had been read except a few notifications by members of what they would do in the future, the most important of which was by Allison, who said he would ask the senate to proceed with the tariff bill at once.

In the house, after the message was read, it was ordered printed and referred to committee of the whole.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 5.—The senate was not in session an hour yesterday. A bill was introduced to establish a national health bureau, to fight infectious and contagious diseases, and various annual department reports were laid on the desk. An attempt to get up the Pacific railway bill was abandoned for the day, as was also one to proceed with the tariff bill, the latter because Democrats who had amendments to offer were not present. The senate then adjourned.

In the house the speaker called attention to the receipt of department reports, all of which were referred. A petition was received for the admission into the union of South Dakota and Montana, the petitioners being north Dakotans. A bill was introduced to permit persons who have dropped homestead entries to make other entries. Filibustering, led by Kilgore, stopped proceedings on a bill to appropriate money to erect a monument to Maj. Gen. Henry Knox, at Thomastown, Me. The bill was made a special order during the closing days of last session, and it was pending on an amendment locating the monument in this city when the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 6.—Hoar offered a resolution in the senate yesterday continuing the committee on our relations with Canada. The tariff bill was then taken up and Harris, to test the sense of the senate, moved to lay the bill on the table. The motion was defeated—19 to 26, a party vote. The bill was then read by sections for amendments, but only one was adopted, providing for the comfort of prisoners under the internal revenue laws when confinement endangers their lives. When the section relating to alcohol in the industrial arts was reached, Sherman said he did not think it could be executed and would in the future offer amendments. Thirty pages of the bill were disposed of. The Union Pacific funding bill was made the special order for Wednesday next. The senate held a brief and unimportant executive session and then adjourned.

Bills and resolutions were introduced in the house: To allot lands in severalty to the United Peoria and Miami Indians in Indian territory, asking information as to an alleged railway trust organized to evade the interstate commerce law, and if further legislation were needed; making the postal telegraph bill the special order for Dec. 14. Springer tried to get up his omnibus territorial bill, but Grosvenor objected. The bill to adjust accounts of government employes under the eight-hour law was debated without action. Payson reported a bill to quiet title to the Des Moines river lands and asked its consideration as a privileged question. Cox, acting as chairman, had denied the privileged character of the bill at last session, but Carlisle now declared it privileged, and the bill was passed. Dec. 6 was set apart for a vote on the direct tax bill, and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 7.—A new question came up in the senate yesterday. The secretary of state of Kansas sent to the senate a certified copy of the returns on elections in that state. Ingalls, in calling attention to the fact, asked the senate what he should do with the copy. Sherman moved that it be referred to the elections committee, remarking that the proceeding was in his opinion at least extra constitutional. The papers were so refeered. The select committee on meat products was continued, as was that on our relations with Canada. The tariff bill was then taken up and eight pages disposed of, no important amendments being made. Pending debate on amendments to the iron schedule the bill was laid aside. Butler proposed a constitutional amendment enlarging the presidential term to six years. The senate then adjourned until Monday.

The house directed the clerk to drop Belmont's (of New York) name from the roll, he having resigned his seat. The remainder of the day was devoted to discussion of the direct tax bill. The District appropriation bill was reported and referred, and the house adjourned until Monday.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 8.—The statement in these dispatches yesterday that the house adjourned Thursday to Monday was an error. It was decided to adjourn yesterday to Monday. At the session yesterday the invalid pension appropriation bill was reported, and also the Smalls-Elliott contest from South Carolina. The majority report gives the seat to Elliott, the sitting member, while that of the minority declares Smalls entitled to it. The bill to incorporate the Nicaragua Canal company was then taken up. An amendment was adopted providing that the United States shall not be committed to any liability on account of the company and that this provision shall be printed upon every bond. Holman offered the amendment. Another amendment by Bland was adopted providing that the United States reserves the right to alter, amend or repeal the act and to regulate the tolls, etc. Still another was adopted regulating the issue of bonds and stocks, etc., and one binding the company not to release Nicaragua from any of its obligations without the consent of the United States was pending when recess was taken to 7:30, at which hour the session was resumed, ten pension bills passed and at 10 p. m. an adjournment was taken to Monday.

THE ANNUAL MESSAGE.

Synopsis of the President's Communication to Congress.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—President Cleveland's final message was sent to congress Monday. It begins, after a few reflections on the greatness of the country and the duty of citizens, with a reassertion of his position on the tariff. He asserts that a revision thereof is necessary and that the taxes collected at the customs houses are paid by the farmers and other consumers, who are thereby being deprived of their earnings unnecessarily. He contrasts the present with 100 years ago, and says that then monopolies, combinations and aggregations of capital were regulated and restrained, while now fortunes are realized by those who manipulate labor which out run the imagination in their magnitude. Wealth and luxury mingle in our cities with poverty, wretchedness and unremunerative labor. Fortunes are not gained by industry and foresight, but by the discrimination of the government in behalf of the rich, largely due to excessive taxation. Trusts, monopolies combinations abound and trample the citizen beneath their iron heels. Corporations which should be the peoples' servants are their masters. This excessive taxation is a breach of faith and a flagrant injustice, and goes to swell the profits of those who are already rich. He warns congress that while communism of the poor is bad, communism of the rich is as hateful and that it would result in an attack on the citadel of rule. Protection by customs duties is a mockery and the whole theory false and wicked.

The president then reads congress a lesson on its misdeeds. He tells it that it has neglected good laws which would be of benefit to the whole country to pass laws for the building up of local or individual interests, and recites a number of cases to prove his charge. He denounces "log rolling," and calls upon congress to pay strict attention to public duties.

The message then refers to foreign relations, especially to the Sackville incident, justifying the action of the administration in the matter. Our relations with all foreign countries are gone over, and the excessive immigration of pernicious foreigners cited as a subject for the attention of congress. Upon finances he indorses the treasury's recommendation to stop coining silver dollars, and says the bond purchases, although apparently saving money, are in fact losing operations, because the money with which the purchases are made should be in the hands of the people.

He speaks feelingly of the death of Gen. Sheridan, calls for education of the Indians, declares a pension law could be passed that would satisfy all reasonable citizens if congress would pass one, urges action in establishing boundary lines between Alaska and British Columbia and Mexico and the United States, and generally indorses all the recommendations of his cabinet officers in their reports.

Bowles Testifies Against Bauereisen.

GENEVA, Ills., Dec. 7.—In the trial of John Bauereisen, chief of the alleged Burlington dynamite conspirators, yesterday, John Alexander Bowles was put on the stand as the first and most important witness. His testimony against Bauereisen was very strong. He testified that the defendant employed him to buy dynamite and place it on the Burlington tracks, and also to buy vitrol and ammonia to put in the water tanks and dose engines.

CLIMBING.

Once these hills that I have gained
Seemed like towering mountains tall;
Now in the evening, sunset stained,
My weary soul doth find them small.

Before my sight no Rights rise,
Mont Blancs stand towering up sublime;
But in the sky life's daylight dies,
And, is it worth our while to climb?

Lie down, O soul, and be content;
Behind the hills do the all low,
Of level, dull accomplishment;
Beyond the eternal stars still glow.

—Bennett Bellman.

ON THE PATH BELOW.

I reached Burton's in the mountains beyond Bristol, late in the evening, having, as usual, blundered about the trail. The cabin stood just off the road, and all around it was silent and dark. It has always been a wonder that his dogs did not attack me. He had three, and they were as cross and crabbed as old bears. They came running down the trail to meet me, growling and barking, but as soon as they came up they made friends. They were playing around me when I stood in front of the cabin and called:

"Hello! you! Hello! Hello!"

In about a minute a voice answered:

"Who is yer, an' what's wanted?"

"Stranger in search of lodgings."

He seemed to doubt it, for he made no immediate reply. After a long minute I heard a woman arguing:

"I tell you he must be all right. If he wasn't them dogs would hev devoured him!"

"Wall, come in!" called the man, and I stumbled along to the cabin to find him in the half open door with his rifle in his hands. My explanations soon satisfied him that I was all right, and he struck a light, piled some blankets in a corner and said:

"Stranger, that's the best lop I kin fix ye off hand. Jist tumble down and doan' worry about nothin'."

I was soon fast asleep, having nothing to keep me awake. Right in the heart of the grim old mountain—among people whose faces I had only glanced at—among men who settle their disputes with knife or bullet—entirely at their mercy and in their power if they wanted to rob or kill—and yet there was no cause to be afraid. When you are the guest of a mountaineer you are safe.

Next morning I found the family to consist of husband, wife and three children. The oldest of the three children was a boy of 12, who had killed his bear and was a dead shot. As soon as I had looked around me I knew that a distillery could be found near by. After breakfast Burton pumped me for a few minutes, sized me up in his mind as "O. K." and said:

"Come up with me and see the boys. And I want to tell you that we've bin expecting visitors fur the last two days, an' we may hev a scare befo' night."

"What sort of visitors?"

"United States chaps arter our still. They've had a spy in yere trying to locate it. We saw him twice yesterday."

There were three other men at the still, which was hidden away in a dark and rugged ravine, approached by a footpath which could be ambushed at every rod. All the corn was "toted" on the men's back over this path, and the kegs of whisky were slung to a pole and carried between two men. The still was perfect, but small, and in the five or six months it had been in operation the men had not made the wages of mechanics. I asked one of them how long since he had had a five dollar bill, and he squinted his eyes, counted his fingers, scratched his head, and finally replied;

"Wall, stranger, you may remember the battle of Stone River?"

"Yes."

"A right smart ago, wasn't it?"

"Yes; twenty-five years ago."

"Wall, jist arter that fight I had a five-dollar bill, and that's the fust and last time."

What money they made by illicit distilling went for boots and shoes, clothing of the plainest kind, tinware, tobacco and tea. One of them had had three pounds of brown sugar in his house within a year. The others had not had an ounce; one had not tasted tea, coffee, sugar, wheat bread or fresh meat (outside of wild meat) for over two years.

The still was about a mile from the house.

If any stranger came by the trail one of the dogs was sent up the ravine with a piece of cloth tied to his neck. Half way between the two, as I discovered later on, was another path intersecting. This came out of another ravine, and was used by the men only occasionally. The boy was stationed at this intersection to watch both paths and give an alarm if danger threatened. It was about 11 o'clock in the morning when he came running in and said:

"Spy coming, pop!"

Then an instantaneous and terrible change took place in the bearing of the men. We had been lying about at ease, every man seemingly having a heart full of kindness, but this announcement started a blazing fire in every eye, set every jaw, and I could see desperation in each face. It needed no handwriting on the wall to tell me that the spy would be wiped off the face of the earth without compunction if discovery threatened. Burton beckoned to me, made a signal to the others which they understood, and we climbed up the rugged face of a rock, ran for a quarter of a mile over broken ground which was well wooded, and then suddenly halted at a spot overlooking the second path and high above it. Burton made me a sign as he crouched down beside a large rock, and cautiously approaching I looked down into the ravine and saw a solitary man—the spy. He was coming up the path. If he passed the spot where we were stationed his scent alone would locate the still.

"Click! Click!"

"Good heavens! but you are not going to shoot him!" I whispered to Burton as he cocked his rifle.

He half turned to look at me. His face was as hard set as iron.

"For the sake of earning a few dollars he would see us starve!" he replied. "He knows his danger. Let him pass this rock and I will shoot him!"

I dared say no more. Burton was desperate and determined.

We looked down at an angle of forty-five degrees on the spy. You could have told that he was a spy by his actions. He had the gait of an Indian bent on a surprise. He looked about him like one who expected the whistle of a bullet at any moment. He came slowly on.

Could I signal him?

No! He was not looking up, but around him.

Coming—coming—coming—advancing at a steady pace towards death. Would Burton shoot? He already had the man covered.

Thump! thump! thump!

It was my heart pounding away like a pile driver. It would be murder. I would be accessory. If I dared to shout—to—

Thank God! Was it the fall of a fragment of rock up on the mountain side, or the hoarse call of the great buzzard poised above us which made the spy halt in his tracks? Ten feet more and a finger will press the trigger. He peers this way and that—he looks up and around—he starts to advance, but halts again. Is some one praying for him—has he a guardian angel who whispers a warning?

It is two minutes—two minutes which tick away so slowly that they seem to be hours in length. I lean against the great rock, almost gasping for breath, while Burton has his eye at the sights and his finger ready to pull. It is a tableau on the threshold of death. It is a pantomime at the edge of a grave.

"Go back! Go back!" I entreat in mind to the spy.

He removes his hat, wipes his brow and is evidently anxious.

"If you value your life go back!" I would fain say.

He looks around him like one who feels danger in the very air.

"You will be shot if you advance! Hear and heed the warning!"

The warning reached him by that mysterious channel which the human mind has not fathomed. I saw him start in fear, and then, seeming entirely against his will, he turned short about and almost ran as he hurried up the path and out of sight.

"H'm! He'un has got off this time, shure," said Burton, as he rose up and let the hammer of his rifle down.

"You would have killed him?" I asked.

"Dead as this rock!"

"It would have been murder."

"Then let he'un keep away from yere!"

A "Women's Hunt" in Bengal.

At a meeting of the Royal Asiatic society of Bengal a description was given of a peculiar custom among the aboriginal tribes of Ranchi, a group of hamlets in Chota Nagpore. It is known as the Era Sendra, or women's hunt. On the present occasion the object was to expel the cholera demon, and it is usual when any great calamity overtakes the land for the women to dress themselves up in men's clothes, arm themselves and go out to hunt, not in the jungles, but in the nearest villages east of them. They chase pigs and fowls, and everything they kill is theirs. They also levy blackmail from the heads of the villages for the purchase of liquor. The villagers cannot prevent the slaughter of their animals, but the head men generally compromise matters by giving the huntresses a pig and paying a small sum. Toward evening the hunting party retires to a neighboring stream, where they cook and eat the meat and drink the liquor. They eat nothing after this meal, but bathe and return home. Men are not allowed to accompany them on such occasions, and they conduct themselves for the time being in a very masterful and masculine manner. They are decked out in coats and all the finery they can borrow from their husbands and sweethearts, and they flourish their spears, axes and sticks, beat their iron drums, shout, sing hunting songs and dance just as the men do. The ceremony begins in the west, and each village that has been visited goes out on a similar excursion to its neighbors, but always to the east. By this means it is supposed that the evil spirit is safely conducted out of the district without offending its dignity. One village near Ranchi is an exception. It is called Mahadaiva, or devoted to Mahadev, and there the Amazons are not allowed to enter, as it is supposed to be under the special protection of its patron saint. If cholera appears there it is because the Mahadev is offended, and he must be propitiated before it can disappear.—London Times.

The Ancestry of the Pen.

A manufacturer of gold pens, in speaking of the ancestry of this writing instrument, which is said to be mightier than the sword, said: The earliest mode of writing was on bricks, tiles, oyster shells, stones, ivory, bark and leaves of trees, and from the latter the term "leaves of a book" is probably derived. Copper and brass plates were very early in use, and a bill of feoffment on copper was some years since discovered in India bearing date 100 years B. C. Leather was also used, as well as wooden tablets. Then the papyrus came into vogue, and about the Eighth century the papyrus was superseded by parchment. Paper, however, is of greater antiquity, especially among the Chinese, but the first paper mill in England was built in 1586 by a German at Dartford, in Kent. Nevertheless, it was nearly a century and a half—namely, in 1718—before Thomas Watkins, a stationer, brought papermaking to anything like perfection. The first approach to the pen was a stylus—a kind of iron bodkin—but the Romans forbade its use on account of its frequent and even fatal use in quarrels, and then it was made of bone. Subsequently reeds pointed and split, like pens of the present day, were used, and in time they were replaced by pens of steel and gold.—New York Telegram.

The Lace Leaf Plant.

The lace leaf plant is chiefly found in the rivers of Madagascar, but it is difficult to find, as it grows best under water. The root is something like a potato, and is roasted and eaten by the natives. The leaves are of different colors, from the light green and yellow of the young growth to the darker shades of the old. The largest leaves are a foot long, and are delicate mesh work, the center and edges forming a skeleton on which the threads are supported. Looking down into the water where the plants are growing the leaves are said to look like a spread of magnificent lace in brown, green, olive and gold. They thrive well in greenhouses, only requiring a wet soil and damp, warm air, but the trouble of securing them makes them a rarity.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Foreigner's Property Rights.

An alien who may come to this country intending to become a citizen as soon as he can be naturalized, upon making deposition to that effect before any officer authorized to take proof of deeds, shall be entitled, after taking out his first papers, to acquire real estate. Certificate of such deposition is filed in a book kept for such use in the office of the secretary of state. The person so acquiring real estate may sell, assign, mortgage or dispose of it in any manner for the ensuing six years as if he were a native citizen, but he cannot lease it. In case of his death within the six years real estate thus regularly acquired falls to his heirs, if he die intestate, as if he had been naturalized.—New York Times.

IN THE WINDOW SEAT.

One evening in an autumn old
We in the cushioned window seat
Sat side by side in converse sweet,
As that old tale our young lips told,
We watched the shadows sway and greet
Upon the walls. The burning logs
Lay crackling on the great brass dogs.
Far back within the window seat,
Half hidden by the curtain's fold,
You sat and swung your dainty feet,
Our brown eyes tenderly did meet
As low we talked, the story told,
That evening in an autumn old.

Things did not chance as they were told
Within the cushioned window seat
That autumn time. Our story sweet
Is like some vague romance of old.
Here in the after years we meet,
When shadows oft from burning logs
Have lain athwart the great brass dogs,
And clung about the window seat,
Half hidden by the curtain's fold.
The paths we trod have led our feet
Apart till now; and years full fleet
Have drifted by. Since we are old
We smile at that old tale we told.

But hist! Within the window seat,
Half hidden by the curtain's fold,
Your daughter swings her dainty feet;
And, madam, hear my boy repeat,
With eager lips, a story told,
One evening in an autumn old.

—Charles Washington Coleman, Jr., in Lippincott's Magazine.

A LESSON TO LOVERS.

"I think from all I have read and heard," said young Dr. Newberry, "the great bane of the happiness of lovers, whether engaged or married, is a lack of perfect frankness and confidence between them. Should anything arise to excite doubt in the mind of either party, an explanation should be at once sought and given, and thus frequently much trouble and unhappiness may be avoided."

"I perfectly agree with you," responded Josie Chase, looking up brightly. "And so there will never be any danger of our misunderstanding each other, will there?"

"I hope not, darling," he replied.

And then there was some little ecstatic demonstration, such as youthful lovers are privileged to indulge in when alone.

They had been but three days engaged, and had known each other not quite three months—only since the young doctor had come to Woodleigh to commence practice.

Josie was the belle of the town, and it had not been without a struggle that the young doctor had won her in the face of richer and, as some people considered, more desirable suitors.

She was very pretty and clever, and full of warm hearted and generous impulses, and also, if the doctor's landlady was to be credited, somewhat fond of having her own way.

"Seeing she's an only child," said Mrs. Larrimer, who had five grown daughters of her own, "she's well nigh spoiled to death. Her ma lets her have her own way, and though her pa sometimes worries about her odd doings, she generally manages to bring him around in the end."

"She's such a flirt!" said Miss Blossom Larrimer, who, though the eldest of the cluster of five sisters, still languished ungathered upon the parent stem. "Why, I couldn't tell the men she has led on to propose and then discarded. It's dreadfully heartless and cruel!" she added, with a sympathetic sigh.

"Oh, you had better leave the doctor to find out all that for himself!" giggled Miss Gay, the youngest of the five. "Only, doctor, you mustn't blame us for letting you be caught in a man trap. We've warned you. He, he!"

"The last one," said Mrs. Larrimer, solemnly, "was that wild young fellow, Jack Ripley, whom they turned out of Rattlepan college for whitewashing the president's horse and other lawless doings. He used to visit Miss Josephine while he was here at the college, about two years ago, and just before you came to Woodleigh he was here again and the two were thicker than ever. Some folks thought it would be a match, but her pa interfered and sent him off. I must say she changes mighty easy from one to another. I'd be sorry to have one of my girls act like that."

These accounts at first set the doctor to thinking a little, but he was not to be frightened from his wooing, and in his happiness as an accepted lover he forgot all the warnings and croakings of this Larrimer family.

He knew that his Josie was a little coquettish—a little vain it might be—as what pretty woman is not? But that she was either heartless or fickle he would not believe.

And it was not until further confidential revelations from the indefatigable Mrs. Larrimer that an uneasy feeling of doubt and perplexity began to take possession of his mind.

"Ahem!" said that lady, as she handed him a second cup of tea, when one evening he had come in rather late from a professional call. "So Mr. Jack Ripley is back again in Woodleigh. What do you think of him, Dr. Newberry?"

"I have not had the pleasure of meeting him."

"No? Dear me, that seems strange when—when you are both so much at the Chases. He was there yesterday and again this morning and this evening. As they live nearly opposite us, some of us couldn't help seeing him going in and out. But, of course, you've heard Miss Josie mention him?"

No, the doctor had not heard any one mention Mr. Jack Ripley. And he thought it rather strange that if that gentleman had really come again a-wooing Miss Josephine Chase she should have permitted him to pay her these visits—she who was his affianced wife.

As usual, when he was not professionally engaged, he went after tea to see Josie. It was a warm moonlight summer night; the parlor was unoccupied and close, and the doctor, while waiting for his betrothed, took his seat at a side window—a window which opened upon the pretty garden, and through which came a soft, refreshing breeze, laden with the perfume of roses.

In fact, just beneath this window was what Josie called her rose arbor—a trellis covered with a running rose bush, where only last night he had sat with her in the moonlight and talked over their plans for future happiness.

He had noticed at the time that she appeared a little absent and disinclined to talk. Could it have been on account of this visit of Mr. Jack Ripley? And now, as the thought occurred, he became aware of low voices in the arbor. Before he could rise and move away these words, in Josie's voice, slightly raised, came distinctly to his ear:

"I tell you, Jack, no one suspects us. But you come too often to the house. You must keep away, and this must be your last visit before"——

Her voice sank and the rest was inaudible. But a reply came in a man's tones—low and tender and pleading.

"You are sure that you will not fail me at the last—that I may trust implicitly to your promise?"

Then more murmurings; only broken sentences came to the ear of the unconsciously spellbound listener.

"What would the doctor say if he knew of this?"

"Why, I think he would not exactly approve," came in Josie's laughing voice; "but so long as I am unmarried I have a right to assert my own inclination. As to papa, he will be angry with us, of course, but only for a time. You will see him with his benevolent face glowing with a smile of satisfaction while he spreads out his dear pudgy hands and says: 'Bless you, my children.'"

And then they both laughed.

Just then a servant's voice was heard:

"Miss Josie! You are wanted in the parlor, miss."

There was a sudden rustling of the roses as the girl sprang up.

"Remember, Jack, to-morrow evening at 8 precisely. Can you see the dress I have on—brown over a striped underskirt? Well, it will be this dress and a thick brown veil. And you must be standing exactly by that poplar tree I showed you. Good-by! You had better leave by the garden gate instead of going into the house."

Then the doctor regained sufficient presence of mind to move away and seat himself as far as possible from the open window.

Josie came in flushed, excited, and, despite her evident effort to appear as usual, shy and constrained.

The doctor did not remain long. He felt too shocked and wounded to know what course to pursue in this sudden and unexpected state of things.

He would go home and think it over. And the result of his thinking was that he concluded to say nothing to Josephine just now, but to watch her movements the next evening and find out something more definite by which to shape his course.

It was a little past 7 o'clock the next evening when, watching from his office window, he saw Josephine trip lightly down the steps of her father's house, attired in the brown and striped dress, and a little hat, around which was tied a brown veil.

He saw her face before she pulled the folds of the veil close, and even caught her glance as she looked shyly over towards his office, as if fearful of being seen by him. Then she walked on very fast, while he followed at a safe distance.

She went first to a house in which he knew a sister of her father resided—Miss Almeria Chase—a well to do maiden lady whose prink and severe aspect he had never liked.

Here she remained about half an hour, then reappeared, walking hurriedly as before and taking her way, not homeward, but towards the suburbs of the town.

Entering a sort of lane or narrow road, with a thick hedge on one side, she came in sight of a poplar tree at a turn of the lane. Here a man was standing—a tall, handsome young fellow—who, on seeing her, came hastily forward and received her, apparently half fainting, in his arms.

At the same moment he made a signal, and a carriage, until now hidden by the turn of the lane, came up.

The two hurriedly entered it, and they drove away at a rapid pace. They were clearly going to catch the north bound train at the nearest station.

The doctor, although he now understood the plan, made no motion or attempt to oppose it.

"If she prefers him to me let her go," he said, and in forlorn wretchedness and bitterness of soul returned to his office.

The Chase house opposite was shut up and the windows closed, as though its life and light had forever departed.

Did the parents know as yet what had happened? Should he break it to them—more gently, perhaps, than others would do, and in their woe find some soothing for his own?

He walked slowly up the front steps to the porch, and there lingered. He could not find it in his heart to enter the house where her presence was no longer, and it was with an effort that he gave the bell knob a pull which seemed like the wrenchings of his own heart strings.

The door was instantly opened, and, turning, he beheld Josie standing sullenly before him.

"I have been expecting you for more than an hour," she said. "But," catching a sight of his pale and startled face, "what is the matter? Are you ill?"

"No; but I—I don't understand. I did not expect to see you. I thought you had gone away."

"Gone away?"

"Yes—with Jack Ripley," he said sternly.

And Josie, to his surprise, broke into a laugh.

Then, changing, she suddenly became very grave and dignified.

"How could you have had such a thought of me, Charlie?"

"Josie, was it you whom I saw leave the house about 7 o'clock this evening, wearing a brown dress and veil?"

"Yes, certainly!"

"And you met a gentleman in the poplar lane"——

"No, no!" she interrupted, again laughing. "That was my cousin, May Harding—Aunt Almeria's neice. We are of the same size and exchanged dresses in order to deceive aunt's watchful eyes. But come in and let me tell you all about it. I could not before, being bound to secrecy."

And then she told him how Jack and May had for years loved each other and been kept apart by Miss Chase, who had taken charge of May when a child, and been to her a sort of domestic tyrant.

Whenever Jack was in town, Miss Chase kept a double watch upon the poor girl, and and it was only by the scheme which had been so successful that May was enabled to elude her argus eye and get safely away with her lover.

"Papa had always been in favor of the match, but for peace's sake did not like to interfere with his sister Almeria.

"He will scold a little when he finds out my part in it," she said, "but will be delighted all the same that May is happy at last. No one could ever say a word against Jack except that he was a little wild and mischievous at college; but he has sobered now, and just settled down to the practice of law. And as to whether Dr. Newberry will blame"——

She paused, and looked up half archly, half inquiringly into his face.

"No, darling—not now,' he answered; "although you have caused me the most miserable hours of my life."

"Charlie," she said softly, as she allowed him to draw her gently towards him, "if you had practiced your own theory and sought an explanation of what appeared to you so suspicious, you would have been spared those miserable hours."

"Yes, darling, it was my fault. But this may serve us both for a lesson to begin with."—Saturday Night.

Mr. Blaine in London.

A Philadelphia business man tells this incident of Mr. Blaine's visit to London. One day he happened into the establishment of a well known bootmaker and asked to see some shoes. Having selected a pair to his liking, Mr. Blaine inquired the cost, at the same time casually remarking that he had been referred to the house by a friend in Lancashire, from which district he had himself just run up to London for a short time. "But you are not an Englishman, sir," said the attendant who was waiting on him. "And why not?" said Mr. Blaine. "Do I not look like an Englishman? And did I not say that I hailed from Lancashire?" "You may have just came from Lancashire, and I do not say that your looks are not English," answered the salesman, "but an Englishman would not have asked the 'cost' of these shoes, sir—he would have asked the 'price.'"

Martie Woodbridge—her name was Martha, but no one called her so—lived on the outskirts of a small village. Her father was a farmer, but not a prosperous one. Nature with her frosts and droughts was always getting the upper hand of him, and the crops which he raised were sure to be those which brought the lowest price in the market. The canker worm stripped his apple trees, and a late frost blighted the corn and oats. He had the misfortune to buy a cow which introduced the cattle disease into his farm yard, and Creamer, Spottie and Whiteface—the three cows that always filled their pails the fullest and made the most golden butter—sickened and died.

This was the question which Martie puzzled over from day to day, coming at last to the conclusion that she must try her luck in the big world which she had seen so little of outside of her own small village. She would go to London, and, if possible, find there a situation as governess, or, which she could at least provide for her own support.

Her mother let fall a few quiet tears over the plan, and, smiling patiently through them, said:

"Ask your father."

Mr. Woodbridge said "No" at first; but having lain awake all night over his difficulties, he called Martie to him, kissed her solemnly, gave a weary sigh, and with it his consent.

So it came to pass on a cool, crisp October morning, when the woods were at their brightest autumn flush, and the frost had stiffened the grass into little silvery blades and spears, and made the few pale flowers that lingered by the roadside hang their heads, that Martie put on her bravest smile, made hopeful, comforting little speeches, kissed them all good-by at home—the dear old home, so full of joys and troubles—and started for the city, to put into that great, hurrying, driving, jostling market the wares she had to offer.

Martie was eager and full of hope; but, alas! how much eagerness and hopefulness go down to death every day in the frantic rush and scramble for the good things going. Martie in the great city looking for work to do seemed like a quiet little wren trying to pick up a worm or a crumb where hawks and vultures were snatching and clawing for plunder.

Martie was met the moment she stepped from the train by an old friend of the family, who had kindly promised to receive her at her house and do what she could to assist her. The next day, early in the morning, a modest, unpretending little advertisement was sent to one of the daily newspapers. What a stupendous affair it seemed to Martie, and how her unsophisticated little heart beat at the thought of it! Nothing could come of it that day, however; and while she goes out with Mrs. Allen to do a little shopping, and stare at a few of the city lions, let us take a look at the quarters she has fallen into.

Mrs. Allen kept a small, private lodging house, very select and very genteel. Its inmates were learned Professor Bigwig and family, from whose presence a certain literary aroma was supposed to pervade the atmosphere; the brilliant Col. Boreas, hero—according to his own account—of numberless battles; a rising young lawyer, with his pretty, blushing girl wife, all fresh and lovely in her new bridal toilet; a rich widow and her still richer daughter, who, it was said, was soon to become the helpmate of the clerical member of the household, the Rev. Paul Appolos; and last, though not least, the representative of the fine arts, Mr. Raymond, an artist whose pictures had won golden praises from critics and connoisseurs, and golden dollars from purchasers.

Mr. Raymond was Martie's left hand neighbor at the table. With the first glance at his dark face, iron gray hair and mustache, and deep set gray eyes, she felt rather inclined to be afraid of him. When he smiled she liked him better and thought the gray eyes looked kind, and she felt very shy and lonesome among all those strange faces. She was glad to have him talk a little to her, and take care that she was provided with all she wanted.

On the second morning after her arrival in the city Martie's advertisement appeared. Mrs. Allen sent a paper up to her room before she was out of bed, so that almost as soon as her eyes were open she had begun to hope, and to be afraid and to wonder if, out of so many people whom she supposed would come to see her, any one of them would think well enough of her to want her services.

Martie was very painstaking with her toilet that morning. She wanted to look her best. She spent twice the usual time over her wavy, golden brown hair; and when she had put on her pretty gray dress—the gray dress was for morning and the black silk for afternoon—and fastened the dainty, spotless collar and cuffs, she dallied fully five minutes over her little stock of ribbons, trying this one and that, and went down at last to breakfast, looking to Mr. Raymond's artist's eyes, which took her in at a glance, like a wild rose just out of a thicket, with the dewy morning brightness brimming in her brown eyes, the pink of rose petals in her cheeks, and soft, warm, shimmering sunbeams woven into the ripple of her brown hair. How his artist fingers longed for canvas and colors to give his beloved St. Agnes that beautiful hair!

But the wild rose might as well have been blooming in her native thicket. In vain Martie peeped from her front windows, and held her breath when the door bell rang. No one came to see the gray dress that morning.

The black dress fared better. It was called upon, and Martie went down to the parlor with her heart in her mouth, to meet the grand lady whose carriage and dashing horses she had watched as they drew up in splendid style before the house. But, alas! Martie was not experienced, and Martie was too young, and, though madam did not say so, Martie was too pretty, and to set youth and beauty before him in the shape of a young governess would be tempting Providence. Madam was very sorry, hoped this and that, and swept gracefully out to her carriage, while Martie mounted with rather a slow step to her little fourth story room, to watch and wait, and wonder if everybody would find her too young. She was not to blame for it, anyhow, she said to herself, trying to coax a laugh.

No one else came that day, but the next morning there was an early call for "the lady who advertised." Martie was glad she had on the gray dress; perhaps she looked older in it. But gray or black was all the same; she was again weighed in the balance and found wanting—not in years this time, but in German—and as one weary hour after another went by, and no other applicants appeared, Martie grew heavy hearted. Her advertisement was to appear for three days. Two had already passed, resulting in disappointment. Mrs. Allen tried to encourage her, but when night came, and the 6 o'clock dinner, Martha felt sad and homesick.

"I hope no one has made arrangements to carry you off just yet," Mr. Raymond said, as he took a seat beside her at their end of the long table.

"No," said Martie. "No one wants me. I'm too young and I don' know German." And a big round tear rolled over into her teacup.

"There's no cause for discouragement in that, I assure you," said Mr. Raymond. "I know people who would not find fault with you on either score."

Then he went on talking to her in such a pleasant way that she soon became interested, forgot all her troubles and the tear in her teacup, and was as merry as though she had been older and had known German.

Mr. Raymond stayed down stairs until 10 o'clock, read aloud an old time fireside story, and kept the ball of conversation rolling in such pleasant channels that the evening was gone before Martie knew it, and in spite of all her disappointment it had somehow been the pleasantest one she had spent there.

The next morning a lady came to see Martie in behalf of her mother-in-law, and Martie engaged to go on the following day to see the place and people.

There was no poetry about Mrs. Myrick. She was pure, unadulterated; wanted her girls to have a good, strong education—no gimcracks, no furrin language to jabber in. She was willin to pay good wages—would give her governess twenty pound a year and her board; but she mustn't expect much waiting on. They didn't keep any servants—didn't need any; a pity 'twould be if two hearty girls like hers couldn't do their own work.

Poor Martie! She would not say no at once; because this was, thus far, her only chance, so she promised to give an answer soon, and went back to her room, praying heaven to send her something better.

She thought her prayer was answered when a gentleman called that evening, talked with her about his three little girls, and seemed well satisfied with the modest account she gave of herself. He was very particular about music, however, and would be glad to hear Miss Woodbridge play. Their interview had taken place in the kindly shelter of the quiet little reception room; but the piano was in the big parlor, and in there the professor and the Rev. Paul Appolos were discussing earth and heaven. The colonel was stalking about, showing off his martial figure, and the young bride, by the side of her new lord, was holding court in the midst of a lively circle of caliers.

Shy, bashful Martie! how could she play before all those people? Poor, timid little wren, that had just crept from under the mother's wing and flown out of her nest! Could she show what sweet music she knew how to make with a crowd of listeners?

There was none of the airs and graces of the music pounding young woman about Martie as she dropped down upon the piano stool and took a moment's grace before entering upon the dreadful ordeal. 'Twas no use waiting, but oh, if the gentleman would only sit down! Why will he stand before her and watch her poor, frightened fingers as they trip and stumble, give a wild jump for a distant note and miss it, make a dive for one octave and light on another, and at last lose their way altogether and go on chasing each other up and down the key board. Martie knows the piece she is trying to play as well as she knows her own name, but it all flies out of her head and slips away from her fingers, and she ends at last with a finale of her own improvising, feeling her hair stand straight on head as she does it.

The gentleman was "much obliged," left almost immediately, and Martie, in a state of grief and mortification, was rushing through the hall, exclaiming, with a sob, as she covered her face with her hands: "What shall I do?" when she was suddenly stopped at the foot of the stairs by Mr. Raymond.

"My dear child," said he, "don't take it so to heart. I've heard you play that piece before, and thought how well you did it; but, of course, you couldn't play with all those people staring and listening. The man was a brute to ask you to do it."

"O no, it is I who am such a simpleton," said Martie, "but you are very good to me;" and she hurried on up stairs, longing to get where nobody could see her, but feeling comforted a little even then by the tender sympathy which had done its best to console her.

Once in her own room, the flood gates were opened, and Martie cried over what she called her disgraceful failure, until she had succeeded in getting up a raging headache. Then she went to bed with the determination of writing in the morning to Mrs. Myrick, informing that lady that she was ready to accept her offer and enter upon the "education" of her children. But before she had time to carry her resolution into effect Mrs. Myrick herself appeared, having made up her mind that Martie would not do for them. She hadn't been brought up in their ways, and was likely to be too particular.

Thus vanished all hopes of success from advertising. Mrs. Allen next advised that Martie should try one of the educational agencies in the city, and an application was accordingly made. Then followed more days of anxious waiting and of hope deferred, resulting at last in a visit and a generous offer from a lady who won Martie's heart at the outset with her pleasant face and winning ways, and her gentle, motherly talk about the little boy and two little girls at home for whom she wanted a teacher and companion. But, alas, that home lay hundreds of miles away.

It seemed to Martie like going to the ends of the earth. She had twenty-four hours in which to decide; spent half the time in wandering between yes and no—between the courage to go and the homesickness that crept over her at the very thought of it. Then, scolding herself for a genuine coward, she made up her mind that go she must and go she would.

"What!" exclaimed Mr. Raymond, in a tone of surprise, "have you really made up your mind to go so far from home and all your friends?"

"Yes, I must go," said Martie, with a little quiver in her voice. "Please don't say anything to discourage me."

"I wouldn't for the world," returned Mr. Raymond, "only that I know of a situation nearer home which you can have if you will accept it. Come into the reception room, and I will tell you about it."

Martie was all eagerness now. How delightful if, after all, she should not be obliged to make an exile of herself.

"It is a companion, not a teacher, that is wanted," Mr. Raymond continued. "Would you be willing to take a situation as companion?"

Martie's face fell a little, but she answered:

"I should be very glad to take such a situation, if I could fill it. Do you think I could?"

"I'm sure you could."

"Do you know the person who wants a companion?"

"Yes."

"Who is it?"

"Myself."

"Yourself! How—what"— The exact question which Martie intended to ask just here must be left to the imagination, since she did not seem to be quite clear about it herself.

Mr. Raymond continued: "Yes, it is I, Martie. I want you for my companion, my wife." The gray eyes twinkled as he asked, "Will you take the situation?"

An hour later Mrs. Allen entered the room, exclaiming, "Bless my soul!" as she stumbled upon an unmistakable pair of lovers.

"My dear Mrs. Allen," said Mr. Raymond, taking his blushing "companion" by the hand and leading her to the astonished old lady, "I know that you will be glad to hear that Martie will not be able to make an engagement with that lady; she has already made one with me."—Boston True Flag.

A LOAD OF HAY.

A load of hay in the crowded street,
A whiff of the scent of clover,
A change of thought—vague—incomplete—
A living a young life over

A day in August, and clouds of white,
A shifting of light and shadow,
The hum of bees and the martin's flight,
The meadow larks and the meadow

Strong arms of men and the yellow green
Of the swathes, the steady swinging
Of forms of laborers, strong and lean,
The scythes with their steely ringing.

The roar of trade and the newsboys' call,
And the dream of a moment's over:
'Twas a brief wave came through the soul, and all
From a whiff of the scent of clover!

THE MANSFIELD GHOST.

"Do you believe in ghosts?" said I to my friend Fenton, as we sat on the porch one evening, enjoying a quiet smoke in the cool night air.

"Yes. I have seen one."

"You have! When! Where?"

"Don't ask too many questions at a time and I'll tell you."

"Well, go on. I'm all impatient to hear it."

"Well, one summer, about ten years ago, having no business that needed my particular attention, I thought I would run down to ——shire, and see my old college friend Mansfield and his wife.

"When I got down to his place I found that neither himself nor his wife was at home, but as the housekeeper expected them to return in a few days I concluded to stay till they came.

The first day after my arrival I spent in rambling through the grounds about the ancient place; the next day was a rainy one, and I had to stay in the house. My room was on the third floor overlooking the court yard. After dinner I went up to it, and, stirring up the fire, I took my book and sat down to read. I read a short time, and then, letting the book drop on my knee, listened to the steady drip, drip of the rain on the flags of the court yard. Soon I fell into a reverie, and then into a state of semi-consciousness.

I was aroused from my dreaming by seeing through my half closed eyes the door noiselessly open and a young woman enter. She was an extremely pretty girl, with light hair falling in long curls over her shoulders. Her dress was an old fashion—just as I suppose my great-grandmother dressed when she was young. Her tiny feet were incased in high heeled, red morocco slippers. She advanced to the table and laid off her scarf and drew up a chair to the fire without as much as a "how d'ye do?" or even taking the slightest notice of me whatever. She then drew from her pocket a miniature portrait of a very handsome young man. From my position I could see it as it lay in her hand. His countenance was open and manly, and his dark hair was clustered in short curls around his forehead. He was dressed in a fashion as antiquated as that of the lady; delicate ruffles were around his throat and at his wrist; in his hand he carried a riding whip.

She gazed at the picture long and tenderly, with a loving smile on her lips. One of the curls fell back and disclosed to my view a ghastly wound on the temple. Till then I had been too amazed to think; but now the conviction rushed upon me that my visitor was not of this world. I was frightened, and sat like one in a dream.

She replaced the picture in her pocket and, going to a corner, drew out a harp. I had never seen it before, though I had been in the room a dozen times. Drawing it to her side, she ran her fingers over the strings and began to sing in a low voice. Her song was in some foreign language. She had a sweet voice, and as it floated through the room, mingled with the lingering sounds of the harp, they had an unearthly sound that filled me with dread.

Suddenly she stopped in her song, and, looking in the direction of the door, sat in a listening attitude for some time; then she resumed her song. But she seemed restless. She looked first at the door and then at the window, as if expecting some one. At last she rose and, putting the harp in the corner, ran to the window and murmured to herself:

"What can keep Roger? He should have been here before now."

She stood but a moment, when she grew pale as death, her eyes dilated, she clasped her hands above her head, and, with a wild scream of agony, threw up the window and flung herself out. This roused me. I sprang up and ran to the window. It was closed! This staggered me. I threw it up and looked down into the courtyard, fully expecting to see her lying senseless on the stones. But no. There was no one there except a servant hurrying out of the rain by the very spot where she would have fallen. She could not have got into the house, as there was only one door opening into the yard. I ran down to the door. A servant was sweeping the passage.

"Have you seen any one come in?"

"No, sir."

"How long have you been here?"

"About ten minutes, and I am sure no one has come in."

I went back to my room and sat down to study over my adventure. Suddenly I thought of the harp. I rose and went to the very place I had seen her put it. What was my surprise to find no harp there! I searched every nook and corner of the room, but could not find it. Here was a new evidence of the ghostly character of my visitor. I concluded to keep my adventure secret till the return of my friend.

He came the next day; in the afternoon I asked him to come to my room, as I wished to see him.

We went up, and, taking seats, he said:

"Well, what is it?"

"I have seen a ghost."

Instead of laughing at me, as I expected, he looked very serious and said:

"When?"

"Yesterday, in the oak sitting room."

I then told him what I had seen, and he listened with a troubled air.

When I had finished he studied a few minutes and then said:

"Would you know her again if you were to see her picture?"

"Yes."

"Come with me, then."

He took me to another room, and there, hanging side by side, were the portraits of the young woman and the young man, whose miniature I had seen in your hand.

"There she is, and there is the young man!" I cried.

"These are the portraits of Roger and Annie Mansfield. It is a strange thing, but you are not the only one who has seen the ghost; I have never seen it, but my father and mother both saw it. There is an old story connected with it; that, with your permission, I will relate to you.

"A hundred years ago this house was occupied by an ancestor of mine named Roger Mansfield. He had been married about one year to the daughter of a neighboring gentleman, whom he loved dearly. He was passionately fond of field sports, while she was of a retiring disposition, loving home and home amusements, and as her will was law he had given up hunting for her sake.

"One day a large company of the gentry rode out to hunt, and Roger, for once, gained the consent of his wife, and joined them, promising to be back at a certain time. The day wore on and the hour at which he was to have come back passed, but he did not appear.

"She tried to while away the time by playing on the harp as she sang a little song in the Italian language, but still she was uneasy. Hearing a noise she put her harp aside and, going to the window saw, carried on a litter, the dead body of her husband. She gave one shriek and precipitated herself from the window. Her head struck on the stones and she was killed.

"Her husband had been killed by being thrown from his horse in taking a leap.

"I have one thing to ask you, Frank. Never tell my wife what you have seen, or she would not stay in the house another night."

I promised. We went below, and I stayed about three weeks at the Grange, but I gave that room a wide berth.

Now, I know that some skeptical person would pooh-pooh on hearing this, and say I had eaten a hearty dinner and fallen asleep and dreamed what I have been telling you; but this I know, that I was not asleep—no more than I am at this moment, and that I did really see the Mansfield ghost.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Czar's Mentor.

It is no secret that the emperor of all the Russias pays far less heed to his official advisers than to the private friends he made in his youth, who have no ministerial dignities. M. de Giers, his faithful minister of foreign affairs, has little real control over the destinies of Russia. But M. Pobodonezoff, the czar's old tutor, is said to be more powerful, and has shaped many of the social measures which within the past few years have been introduced into the empire.

The Paris Figaro gives an interesting account of a less known counselor to whom Alexander III, it seems, often goes in search of health and comfort. He is a Polish priest, named Zmudowski, and lives in the little parish of Podborz, a few miles from Spala. Zmudowski is, of course, a Catholic, but despite his heterodoxy no man is more loved and trusted by the orthodox czar. Alexander made his acquaintance at Skierniewicz fifteen years ago, during a hunting excursion to Poland. While on a visit to Field Marshal Prince Bariatynski, his father's life long comrade, the then czarewitch was one day thrown into the company of a priest whose culture did not prevent his being an ardent sportsman. This was Zmudowski.

The prince soon grew much attached to the priest, who at that time was about 45 years old. Fearing the influence of a Polish Catholic on his son's mind the late czar at last stopped their intimacy. On his father's death, however, Alexander III returned to Podborz and renewed his friendly intercourse with Zmudowski. Since then whenever the cares of state and the Nihilists have allowed him a holiday he has been in the habit of stealing off to Poland to rest and strengthen himself in the society of the priest. He made ineffectual efforts to induce him to come to St. Petersburg, and, having failed, had a chateau built near Podborz, which has become his favorite country house.

The czar's long talks with Zmudowski have caused the issue of several decrees materially improving the hard lot of Polish Catholics. The recent foundation of a peasants' bank in Poland and other liberal measures might probably be traced to the counsels of the Podborz cure.

What a Close Shave Means.

"Do you know what a close shave means? I never did until I looked at a face the other day through a microscope which had been treated to this luxurious process. Why, the entire skin resembled a piece of raw beef. To make the face perfectly smooth requires not only the removal of the hair, but also a portion of the cuticle, and a close shave means the removal of a layer of skin all around. The blood vessels thus exposed are not visible to the eye, but under the microscope each little quivering mouth holding a minute blood drop protests against such cruel treatment. The nerve tips are also uncovered, and the pores are left unprotected, which makes the skin tender and unhealthy. This sudden exposure of the inner layer of the skin renders a person liable to have colds, hoarseness and sore throat and it is only that the face and neck are pachydermatous"——

"Hold on, barber! Not another word!" exclaimed the customer. A look of sadness had come over his face and he seemed to be mentally calculating the amount of epidermis that had been sacrificed in many years of close shaves. Suddenly jumping from his chair he said with deep feeling:

"I'll never shave again."

In a moment more he was gone. The æsthetic barber was astonished at the unexpected result of his effort to rid a fellow being of a foolish notion, and he had a chill when the boss barber told him that the loss of trade would be deducted from his salary.—New York Tribune.

An Ingenious Poison Stopper.

An ingenious stopper has lately been patented for use in bottles containing poisons. The stopper is made of india rubber, and is surmounted by a perforated ball of india rubber brightly colored, so as to render it distinctive in the light, and containing a bell which rattles when the bottle is moved, thus drawing attention to the character of the contents, even though it be impossible to see the label. Such a warning stopper would have rendered impossible many of the accidents which have from time to time taken place, notably one a few months ago, when a distinguished surgeon lost his life owing to a mistake as to a bottle containing poisonous medicine. — Cassell's Family Magazine.

A New Use for Corn Cobs.

Building blocks made of corn cobs form the object of an Italian patent which has been issued. The cobs are pressed by machinery into forms similar to bricks, and held together by wire. They are made water tight by soaking with tar. These molds are very hard and strong. Their weight is less than one-third of that of a hollow brick, and they can never get damp.—Cincinnati Commercial.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

In the case of Park vs. The Detroit Free Press, the supreme court declared the libel law of 1885 unconstitutional.

In the somewhat celebrated case of Mrs. Fiske vs. the Perrin estate, the supreme court decides the plaintiff to be entitled to $426,625, and a solicitor's fee of $20,000. Profitable lawsuit.

But ninety-two of the 752 boarders at the Jackson prison now wear striped suits, the balance being permitted to don the gray on account of good behavior.

A lot of its summer cottages at Huronia beach have recently been burgled of their furniture. Perhaps somebody's going to try the summer resort business on their own account.

Two cases of small-pox at Howell make the denizens of that town feel a little nervous over the situation.

A Jackson citizen accuses his wife (who eft his bed and board without just cause, etc.) of stealing his stock and bedclothes. The woman wou'd leave her husband thus destitute these frosty nights, without an alarm clock to awaken him from a chilly slumber is—well, she can't love him much anyhow.

A Three Rivers barn that was fired by an incendiary was ent rely consumed, including hay and grain, four draft horses, worth $250 each, thirteen head of fat cattle, seven cows, and a lot of hogs. A man who could commit a deed like that isn't—well, he isn't exactly civilized.

A squad of twenty-five Osceola county citizens have pitched their tents in far-away Oregon with a view to the betterment of personal fortunes. May they live long and prosper.

Charles Bechstein, of Mancellona, caressed a powerful dynamo, just to get acquainted with the thing, but says he doesn't care to be struck by lightning a second time. Few people would.

Alma college opened up for business one year ago with thirty-five students. Now she has 125, representing four states and Canada, with more a-coming.

Williamson is said to be the only town in this country that has two large school houses that stand close enough to be next-door eighbors. They are separated by a distance of less than four rods.

Marquette's water supply allows each inhabitant, big or little, sixty gallons per day. They ought to be able to keep clean.

The meeting of the ministerial association of the Lansing M. E. district was changed from Vermontville to Lansing on account of the prevalence of diphtheria at the former place. There are only eighteen talkers on the programme.

It is not often that a horse attempts the feat of climbing a pole, but a runaway nag that was going like a streak struck an inclined one at Lake Linden and slid up the thing for a distance of thirty feet. The animal was so badly hurt that it had to be killed.

The Lansing Condensed Milk company is about to establish a branch factory at Sterling, Ills. Couldn't get lacteal fluid enough at home to fill its orders.

James Donovan, the man who brought $300,000 worth of libel suits against Big Rapids citizens, has had the fun of paying costs without getting any damage money. The libel crop hasn't returned a rich harvest this year.

Judge Wing, a Monroe citizen, is writing a history of that county, and knows how to do a good job of it, too.

The Muskegon Car works have orders ahead for 600 freight-cars, with more in prospect.

The hog crop of the state is panning out in good shape. A good corn crop tells the story.

A Pine River woman, named Barrett, has fled to Canada with an itinerant preacher. The bereft husband takes the matter philosophically and has already applied for a divorce.

Shipments of ore by water from Lake Superior ports have about closed for the season, but large quantities will go by rail during the winter months. Lake shipments from the Marquette range aggregate nearly 5,000,000 tons for the season just closed.

That stale chestnut, the Charivari, isn't always a compound of unmixed and unalloyed pleasure. Charles Nelson attended one at South Riverton and was killed.

The edict has gone forth at Vermontville that the pesky English sparrows "must go." A citizen of that town brought down twenty-two of 'em at a single shot.

Grand Rapids parties talk of investing $100,000 in a new Masonic temple that shall be worthy of the push and progress of the "second city."

The latest advices from the Calumet and Hecla mine fire indicates that the subterranean blaze isn't as serious as at first reported, and that it will soon be under control.

Arrangements are being perfected for a big meeting of the Short Horn Breeders' association of the state at Lansing on Dec. 19 and 20. Reduced railway rates have been secured on all Michigan roads.

A Mancelona shootist recently bagged a black fox, a "bird" that's rarely found in this state.

A Benton Harbor dealer in wetgoods filled a customer so full of budge that his team ran away, colliding with another vehicle and injuring its driver. And now the injured party goeth for the dealer's bondsmen, for indemnity damages.

Costly Fire at Muskegon, Mich.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 5.—Fire broke out in the lumber pile on Hackley & Hume's dock shortly after 1 p. m. Tuesday. Every effort was made to confine the fire to the lumber in which it started, but the high wind carried huge fire-brands far out over the city, and it seemed for a time as if the business portion of the town was doomed. Many minor blazes broke out in different parts of the town and kept the firemen busy, but no great danger was caused except in the lumber district. Hackley & Hume have lost 9,000,000 feet of lumber, their tramways, bridges and docks. The total can not fall far short of $175,000. There is an insurance of about $75,000 on this.

Crushed Into a Street Car.

DETROIT, Dec. 6.—Yesterday as a street car with fourteen passengers aboard, was crossing the track of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern on Croghan street, it was run down by a locomotive, and the following casualties resulted: Badly, and possibly fatally injured—John Scenious, Mrs. Mary Houk, Miss Mary Marshall, Miss Vina Guilloz. Less seriously hurt—Joseph Cornelius, Frank Eggert and A. A. Ramsey.

Big Fire at Muskegon, Mich.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 5.—Hackley & Hume's lumber yard was discovered to be on fire yesterday afternoon, and the flames spread so rapidly that the fire department, aided by two powerful tugs, were unable to check it. Mr. Hackley says 7,500,000 feet of lumber were burned, valued at $105,000; insured for $73,550. The damage to docks and tramways is $5,000.

A SENSIBLE PHILANTHROPIST.

He Gives $1,600,000 to Found an Industrial School for Boys.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—Mr. Isaiah V. Williamson, the aged philanthropist Friday made public the deed and plan of the Williamson Free School of Mechanical Trades, the benevolent institution he has founded for the practical education of boys. The fiscal trustee selected by Mr. Williamson is the Pennsylvania company for insurance on lives and granting annuities, and to this company Mr. Williamson has turned over for the purpose of carrying out the trust, securities amounting to $1,596,000. He directs that out of the moneys received from the principal of the building fund the trustee shall purchase a body of land not exceeding 300 acres, situated in some part of the city of Philadelphia, or in either of the counties of Bucks, Delaware, Montgomery, in the state of Pennsylvania, and erect thereon suitable buildings, board, teach and instruct as many pupils as, in the opinion of the trustees, the revenue of the endowment fund and other sources of income provide for, and furnish the school with everything necessary to enable a boy to learn the trade for which he is best qualified. The ages between which boys may be admitted is given as between 12 and 18 years, and they must be indentured as an apprentices to the trustees for a term of not less than three years.

I. V. WILLIAMSON.

A COOL BANK ROBBER.

While the Proprietor Is at Dinner He Gets Away with $2,000.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 8.—A well planned and neatly executed bank robbery occurred in this city at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, whereby I. Lauferty's bank vaults were relieved of $2,000. The bank, which is a private concern, is situated in the Aveline house on Calhoun street, in the most frequented part of the city. The owner, Mr. Lauferty, closed the bank about noon and went home to dinner. While he was absent, some one boldly entered the bank, presumably by means of a duplicate key, bursted the lock of the safe with a steel brace, which he inserted through a hole in the safe door, and helped himself to $2,000 in currency. The robber then coolly left the bank, locked the office door and walked off. The officers who examined the job, say it is the work of a professional.

Another Battle with Oyster Pirates.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A dispatch to The Tribune from Baltimore says that another battle has been fought by the police and oyster pirates, and as usual, the police were routed. The Choptank river oyster police sloop Eliza Hayward, Capt. Bridges commander, was defeated in a battle with dredgers off Cook's point, in the Choptank river, and beat a retreat to Oxford where she now lies with forty-one rifle ball holes through the mainsail and jib and her rigging damaged. Capt. Briggs says the pirates fought desperately, and with their fourteen boats unsuccessfully tried to surround and capture the Hayward.

A Victory for the Republican.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 8.—The county court in the matter of the recount in the Kanawha district, after hearing arguments on behalf of the Democrats and Republicans, decided at noon Saturday to take the original count in Charleston city, Alum county and St. Albans precincts, and to reject the recount in these precincts, to throw out Lewiston and Calberg wholly, and to accept the recount in the balance of the precints in the county. By this McGinnis, Rep., has a majority in the Third congressional district of 29. The matter will be taken to the circuit court by Democrats.

Western Base Ball League Meeting.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 8.—The directors of the Western Base Ball league met here Saturday noon and awarded the pennant to Des Moines. President Sam Morton's report showed $1,000 in the treasury. At the stockholder's meeting in the afternoon it was to be decided whether there will be six or eight clubs in the league next year. If there are eight, Denver, St. Joe, Lincoln, and Oshkosh are candidates for the two vacancies with the chances in favor of Denver and St. Joe. The salary question is also to be passed on.

It Looks Suspicious, Anyhow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Herald alleges that recent repairs to the yacht Dauntless, which was defeated by the Coronet in the great transatlantic yacht race from New York to Queenstown in March, 1887, show evidences of foul play. An augur hole one inch in diameter was discovered on each side of the stem. Whether these holes were the result of carelessness or the intentional malice of some enemy will probably remain a mystery.

Thinks He Is Damaged $50,000.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Dec. 8.—A sensational suit was filed in the circuit court here Friday morning in which Robert Wilson, a retired capitalist of this city, claims damages in the sum of $50,000 by the action of Charles R. Hannon, cashier of the Citizens' bank, who, it is claimed alienated the affections of Wilson's youthful and handsome wife. All of the interested parties are highly connected and moved in the best society.

A Bridge Over the St. Lawrence.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 8.—The government has granted the Canada Atlantic Railroad company power to bridge the St. Lawrence river at Coteau. This will complete a through line to Boston and New York from Ottawa. The total length of the bridge, including abutments, is 495 feet. The approach on the north shore shows an ascending grade to the bridge of thirty feet per mile. The work will cost over $1,000,000.

HE DANCED AT HER WEDDING.

I danced at her wedding last night,
And none could have guessed my emotion
As I saw her a bride—her on whom
I had lavished a lifetime's devotion.
I danced at her wedding. Why not?
Having lived through the scene at the altar,
When the knot was tied fast for all time,
Do you think that my courage would falter?

I danced with as lightsome a step,
With a face as unmoved as the next one;
He must be a fatuous fool
Who in crises like this could expect one,
Though a tumult were raging within,
To betray to onlookers his passion?
I don't wear my heart on my sleeve—
That sort of thing isn't my fashion.

I danced—so did she. Though I'll swear,
For a fact, that I hardly know whether
I stood on my heels or my head
When we went wildly whirling together,
When her breath was as sweet on my cheek
As the blossoms of orange she carried!
We danced till folks said 'twas bad taste,
Since I was the fellow she married!

—Boston Globe.

MR. STATISTIC.

It was some time after midnight when, weary with overwork and all a-flutter with nervousness caused by too close application to the task of smoking my twenty-five cigars a day, I climbed the rickety stairs of my tenement and opened the creaking door of my apartment on the top floor. In the dark I felt around on the table for a match. None was there.

"Well, I can go to bed without a light," I thought, and proceeded to remove my clothing.

I was nearly ready for bed when I thought I heard a noise as of some one breathing heavily. I stood very still and listened as best I could against the thumpings of my frightened heart. Yes, I heard breathing, and the breather was in my room.

I am never too courageous in the dark, not even when my nerves are calmest. There is always a feeling in my soul that some unearthly creature is close behind me. I often feel his warm breath on the back of my neck, and when I do not I have the same feeling that he is there—impalpable, unassailable as the thin air, but there just the same. Now that my nerves were unstrung and my mind fatigued with working over an intricate and elusive problem in mathematical cryptography I was even less courageous than usual. The breathing went on. I feared I should lose my reason. I seemed transfixed where I stood. Nothing but my heart moved, and that pounded so loudly that I feared it would wake the breather; for I made no doubt that he was asleep, since his breathing was almost a light snore.

I must find a match. I remembered that I had felt through all my pockets in vain for one with which to light my last cigar, and had finally taken fire from the cigar of a man I had met on the street. I drew hard at the stump, which I still held between my teeth—for I always smoke myself to sleep—but it was out; out and cold.

Softly as I could move in my stocking feet I sneaked over to the table and made another search for matches. In my mind I laid the table top off in three inch squares, and then placed my hand on every square, one after another, until I was sure no match was there. This occupied my mind so fully that some of my fear was allayed. Fears do not stay in the busy mind. I became even bold enough to think of putting on some of my clothing and going down stairs for a match.

I turned from the table, but as I did so I struck the loose leg of it in such a way as to throw it out of place. A crash of glass announced to me that as the table had toppled over the lamp had been overthrown.

"What's that? Who's there?" The voice, as of some one waking in fright, came from the other part of the room. [illegible] of the room, but my first impulse [illegible] ally [illegible] The first [illegible] the thing [illegible] forever. [illegible] myself [illegible] tells me [illegible] have [illegible]

"Ah," said the voice, more [illegible] must [illegible]

This [illegible]

"Who are you?" I asked, [illegible] of my own voice seemed to [illegible] into my heart. "What are you [illegible] here? I asked before my first question could be answered.

"I am Mr. Statistic, and I have been waiting here for you since sunset."

"I don't recognize your voice," I said, "and I cannot recognize you by your face, since I cannot see it."

"Well," said he, "it doesn't matter. We can talk as well in the dark."

"What do you wish to talk about?" I asked.

"I want to prove to you that I am not crazy. The world says I am insane, but it is the world, not I, that has lost its reason. I am sane enough. That is why somebody is trying to kill me. They [illegible] in my food, they lay snares [illegible] at me, and spend [illegible] because they are afraid of my sanity. But I fool them yet, and one of these days, when I feel just like it, I am going to kill them all. [illegible] I've got a big knife right here in my belt and a pistol in my pocket, and poison all over me—enough to kill everybody."

My fear was now of a tangible sort. Ghosts and goblins flew away and a real human being with implements of death [illegible] I began to think of cunning things to do. Every time I spoke I paid [illegible] my location, so that if he [illegible] struck at me with his knife I should not be there.

"You see I see me, so I must tell you what I look like," he continued. "Just now I am a little gray haired man, about five feet four inches tall, thin of features and very pallid. My eyes are steel gray and my brows are shaggy and long. That is the way I look now. I can change myself, though. I can make myself seven feet tall and stronger than Hercules or Samson. I can throw down buildings and carry mountains away."

"I am glad of that," I said, for surely I must humor him. "I am glad of that, and I wish you would come around to-morrow and see me. I've got some mountains I want moved, and I'd be glad to give you the contract." Then I slid over to another part of the room.

"I can move them and I can move worlds, too. I've got a string tied to every star and to the sun and moon. I can do anything I want to."

"Well, you're just the kind of a man I've been wanting to take into partnership with me," I said. "Couldn't you come up to-morrow when it is light? We will make out the articles of agreement."

"I can see now. I can see in the dark. And that isn't all I can do. I can make it light. I can bring the sun right into this room, and stand it up there in the air. Now, you see. There! Don't you see how light it is now?"

I had to see it. I should probably have had a knife run right through me if I had not.

"And yet," said I, "there are fools who call you crazy?"

"Yes, sir; there are. That's what I came up here to talk about. I want to show you how sane I am. Now, listen a minute. How long do you say it takes a woman to friz her front hair?"

"About ten minutes."

"At what age does she begin to friz her hair?

"Well, her mother usually begins to do it up over her finger or in papers when she is about a year old," I replied.

"Exactly. Well, now, a woman frizzes her hair every day, doesn't she?"

"I think she does."

"Of course she does. And the average life of a woman is—"

"About 35 years, I believe."

"Precisely. Now, then, at ten minutes a day how much time does one woman spend in thirty-five years frizzing her hair?"

I made a hasty calculation and said: "About ninety days."

"Yes, sir; that's it. Ninety days, three months. Now, how many women are there in this world?"

"About 700,000,000," I guessed.

"How much is three times 700,000,000?"

"It is 2,100,000,000," I replied.

"And 2,100,000,000 months! How many years is that?"

"It is 175,000,000 years."

"There you are," said he, triumphantly; "there you are! The women of our generation spend 175,000,000 years frizzing their hair. Now, how old is this earth?"

"Some geologists say 2,000,000 years."

"How many generations in that time?"

This was a rather difficult mental problem for even me, but I worked it out.

"About 257,143 generations," I said.

"Now multiply that by the number of years one generation uses—175,000,000."

I did so, and made 45,000,025,000,000 years.

"There, sir," said he, as he rose to go, "that's what I wanted to show you. I wanted you to know that up to date the women of this world have spent 45,000,025,000,000 years frizzing their hair. Good night, sir; good night."

Turning at the door he said:

"My name is Statistic, sir. I named myself. Just call for me when you want to know anything. Good night, sir."

And Mr. Statistic clambered down the stairs, while I closed my door and pulled the bed up against it.—Ben Wylde in Chicago Times.

The Kaffir's Wooing.

A Kaffir, having fixed his affections upon some female, acquaints his parents with his intentions. They apply to the girl's parents, and if the latter do not consent to the union a fight is inevitable. If the parents agree the next proceeding is to appoint two expert female negotiators, who obtain access by strategem to the house, with the object of broaching the subject to the young lady. They carefully avoid any sudden or abrupt mention of the awful subject of their mission, but launch out in praises of the man who seeks her hand. They speak of his possessions, his courage and accomplishments. The girl, pretending to be affronted even at these remote hints, grows refractory and runs away, tearing the ringlets of her hair as she retires.

The female embassadors, having got the consent of the parents, drag her from her concealment and carry her by force to the house of her destined husband and there leave her. She is compelled to live here several days, silent and dejected, refusing food, till at last, if kind entreaties do not prevail, she is made to submit by blows to the union. The Kaffir who has the reputation of having committed a number of murders of Mohammedans enjoys exceptional privileges; he is respected by all the neighborhood, and experiences little or no difficulties in procuring a wife. The Kaffir woman is doomed to a life of toil and drudgery, and the husband can discard her when ever he feels so disposed.—Calcutta News.

It Was Different.

Two men, who were traveling on a railway train, drifted in conversation from politics to literature.

"I suppose," said one of the men, "that you like Ella Wheeler Wilcox's poetry."

"Well, I can hardly say. I used to think that I admired her 'Poems of Passion,' but I have not read any of her writings since she married."

"Why, [illegible] is usually better than your [illegible] Why did her marriage cause you to stop reading her poetry?"

"Oh, well, it may be a trifling peculiarity on my part. The fact is I married her. My name is Wilcox, you know."

"Well, I am glad to meet you, Mr. Wilcox. [illegible] I understand that which you [illegible] a trifling peculiarity. Now, I am married to Amelia Rives, but I didn't read her my novel. I married her, you understand."—Arkansaw Traveler.

There Is a Difference.

There is a tremendous difference between [illegible] and [illegible] it hold you [illegible] and [illegible] world. [illegible] effective [illegible] hundred. [illegible] popular [illegible] is simply indifference to a dead [illegible] A living faith [illegible] into action and makes one gentler, broader and nobler, [illegible] intensity and probity will [illegible] arouse indifference.—Jewish Messenger.

He Hadn't Disturbed.

The little boy had come in with his clothes torn, his hair full of dust, and his face bearing unmistakably marks of a severe conflict.

"O, Willie! Willie!" exclaimed his mother, deeply shocked and grieved, "you have disobeyed me again. How often I have told you not to play with that wicked Stapleford boy!"

"Mamma," said Willie, washing the blood from his nose, "do I look as if I had been playing with anybody?"—Chicago Tribune.

Only One Way.

A newsboy who honored the gallery by his presence at a performance of Coquelin and Hading at the Opera house, and had rather a wearisome time of it, was accosted on coming out of the theatre by a companion, who asked him whether he "liked the show." "No," he replied, "you can't understand them unless you come in a carriage."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Weekly has a well established place as the leading illustrated newspaper in America. The fairness of its editorial comments on current politics has earned for it the respect and confidence of all impartial readers, and the variety and excellence of its literary contents, which include serial and short stories by the best and most popular writers, fit it for the perusal of people of the widest range of tastes and pursuits. Supplements are frequently provided, and no expense is spared to bring the highest order of artistic ability to bear upon the illustration of the changeful phases of home and foreign history. A new work of fiction from the pen of William Dean Howells, and one by Capt. Charles King, will be among the leading features of the Weekly for 1889.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The first quarterly meeting services of the present conference year will be held next Saturday and Sunday. The Presiding Elder is expected to assist.

The feed mill is doing a fine business for the beginning, and when every thing in the way of elevators are completed, it will be a very convenient mill.

Wm. Beevers went to Toledo last week for the belting etc., for the feed mill.

H. J. Williams and W. F. Clack went to Detroit Monday on business.

Misses Adah Potter and Pearl Clapper are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Potter at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Wilson, and two grand-daughters, spent the Sabbath with W. R. Wilson and family.

Hattie Platt after a visit with her parents and friends at Deerfield, returned to Mrs. Halls, Saturday.

Burt Nobles has rented the Mary Arner house on West street, and took possession last week.

Don't forget the social at Mrs. M. A. Barrett's this week Friday.

Dave Allison having secured a position on a farm near Stoney Creek, moved his family and household effects there on Monday.

Eldredge Lowe and family of Whitewater, Wis., after visiting his parents and old neighbors, returned to their home Friday.

We are informed that a "Conversaylone Class" is considered by some who are interested in the advancement of the Library as being a profitable and instructive pastime at the parlors of the library during the long winter evenings.

The editor of the HERALD is an old schemer, and although no protectionist, is endeavoring to pull the wool over the eyes of our citizens with his Christmas Folio of the business places of our village, but it does not work. As several weddings have occurred of late, it has apparently aroused his hopes, and knowing that the ladies are managing the helm of the matrimonial ship, he imagines a star is directing his wandering eastward.

On Wednesday evening at the home of F. E. Pocklington, occurred the wedding of Mr. Ed. Freer of Mason, Mich., and Miss Carrie Thornton of Perrysburg, Ohio. Miss Thornton is a sister of Mrs. F. E. Pocklington, and as our acquaintance is but recent we can say but little of her, but with Mr. Freer it has been from boyhood, and can speak of his worth in every sense of the word, and join with his many friends and schoolmates in extending our sincere congratulations, and feel confident that after these years of celibacy, he has found a partner who will administer to his wants in such a manner that prosperity and happiness shall be their reward.

There was a very large attendance at the box social given by the members of the library association on Wednesday evening of last week, and a very pleasant and profitable time enjoyed by all, and upwards of 50 boxes were sold increasing the treasury $32.60. The association feel very grateful to Mr. VanAntwerp for the box of choice fruits and confectionery he donated—the box brought $4.00; also, to Mr. Frank Davidson the auctioneer, who on taking the stage made some very appropriate remarks upon the duty of all to encourage and perpetuate the good influence of a free public library, especially since we have had one so complete in all its appointments come to us as a free gift. He humorously alluded to his very rotund and comfortable appearance as the result of having been well supplied through life by his good lady, with just such generous and wholesome diet as he was now about to offer for the selection of the eager multitude, and while beguiling the audience in his own peculiar manner and speech, he actually succeeded in convulsing with laughter every pocket book in the crowd.

A bull in a china shop, is out of place, but a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in the china closet is in place. For croup, bronchitis, sore chest and colds is a prompt and efficacious remedy.

No remedy for blood disorders can equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Though concentrated and powerful, this medicine is perfectly safe, and may be taken by children as well as by adults. Physicians recommend it in preference to any other. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

Used one bottle of Mother's Friend before my first confinement. It is a wonderful remedy. Looked and felt so well afterwards friends remarked it. Would not be without Mother's Friend for any consideration.

Chas. Storms has been unwell for two weeks, he had all his teeth extracted at Ann Arbor, and the shock was a severe one and his recovery has been slow.

Lewis Jacobs, who has been working for C. Storms the last season, left to-day for his home at Shelby, Mich.

The Fair, Supper and entertainment given Wednesday afternoon and evening, was a success every way and in each department, and must have netted a nice sum. May give more extended notice next week.

Tuesday morning Alanson Updike's son drove up in front of VanDeMark's store and went in without hitching his horse. It being rather a lively animal it suddenly wheeled around and started for home at a terrific pace. It kept the road and by the time it reached A. P. Hallidays, it had cooled down amazingly and Mr. H. stopped him and drove back to town. Fortunately no damage was done.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN PATENT OFFICES.

Perhaps some of our readers have visited the extensive offices of the Scientific American, at 361 Broadway, New York, but many have not and to such the following account may be of interest. A correspondent who had this pleasure informs us that he was greatly surprised at the magnitude of the establishment. It suggested to his mind an enormous insurance company or banking house. At the main office, which is principally devoted to the patent business—forming as it does so important a part of the establishment—may be seen the members of the firm and their able corps of examiners. Ready access to the principals is afforded to everyone; and here may be seen inventors from all parts of the country showing their models and drawing and explaining their inventions. The models left by inventors form an interesting collection, and are kept in a room by themselves. The large corps of draughtsmen are for the most part skilled mechanics, electricians, or engineers, some of them having been connected with the U. S. Patent Office. Most of the correspondence is carried on by type writers, and this necessitates a separate department, where a number of experienced type writers and stenographers are constantly employed. The dark room, where the photographs of the patent drawings are copied, and where the photographs for the architectural department are developed, is also on this floor. On the floor above may be found the editorial rooms, compositors' and subscription room, and the engravers' department.

The Architectural Department occupies the top floor, and here may be seen the manager of this department, and also a number of draughtsmen at work preparing the plans and designs for the Architect and Builder edition of the Scientific American, which is published monthly, and has attained a widespread circulation. The printing of the paper is carried on in another building. At the entrance of the main office which occupies a floor space of 60x165 feet, may be seen one of Prof. Draper's remarkable recording barometers, with which instrument a complete record is kept of the atmospheric changes. This barometer was built specially for the Scientific American, and it is a remarkably fine and sensitive as well as a very expensive instrument.

Some idea may be had of the extent of the business done at the office of the Scientific American when we state that over one hundred persons are employed by Munn & Co. on their several publications and in their extensive patent departments.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh.

J. J. Orr, the druggist, has on hand and will keep the celebrated Indian Pill, manufacured by Dr. R. MacFarland, Genoa, O. This is the Pill that cures sick headache and headache of all kinds; also constipation and costiveness, and for one failure we will give $100. We can tell you more: this pill cures rheumatism, sciatic and chronic inflammatory; all stomach diseases yield to this wonderful discovery. Paralysis is prevented and dropsy cured by this pill. The high standard of excellency in this medicine is the result of years of hard study and experience in these diseases by the eminent Dr. MacFarland. Price $1, a box, 50 pills in a box. Stanley a Hostage.

In the Hands of the Terror of the Soudan.

DIGMA CAPTURES THE EXPLORER,

Together with Emin Bey, and Notifies England That if She Does Not Call Off Her Soldiers He Will Kill Them Both—The British Government Placed in an Exceedingly Difficult Position—General News from the Old World.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—England has another Gordon case on her hands. A letter has been received at Suakim from Osman Digma, the Soudanese leader, in which he states that he had captured Emin Bey and "another white man" (presumably Stanley) and that unless England abandons Suakim the impression is conveyed that he will put them both to death. The letter from Digma contained also copies of a dispatch from a dervish leader at Lado to Kalifa Pasha, giving the date of Emin Pasha's surrender as Oct. 10, and a letter to Emin Pasha from a native, which the latter handed to Henry M. Stanly when he was at Cairo—so it is stated.

EMIN BEY.

The matter was brought up in parliament yesterday, but Smith said he could not at that time say that the letter was authentic. However, refugees from Handoub arriving at Suakim confirm Osman Digma's statements. His letter was in reply to a report made to Maj. Kemble last August for any information about Emin Bey. The letter asserts that the mahdi has conquered all the equatorial provinces.

Dispatches from Suakim state that Gen. Grenfell has recognized the letter inclosed in Osman Digma's as the original of the one which he drafted for the khedive which the latter handed to Stanley at Cairo. Thus Stanley's capture is virtually placed beyond a doubt. The anti-slavery of the Congo Free State has received no information regarding the capture as yet.

The impressions in Egypt are that England doubtless will do everything that is possible to be done to liberate the prisoners. Mr. Gladstone has officially regretted Gen. Gordon for Lord Salisbury to attempt Emin Bey and Henry M. Stanley.

It is believed that England will be forced to treat with the successful commander for the evacuation of Suakim, for the government will not dare to sacrifice the prisoners whom Osman Digma threatens to kill unless the town is abandoned. Public opinion in England already revolts against the Soudan expedition, and this latest phase of the affair intensifies the feeling. There can be scarcely any doubt that the white traveler mentioned as surrendering with Emin Bey is Stanley, as everything thus far tends to confirm this opinion.

The balance of opinion among African experts has, for some time past, accepted the theory that Stanley had been working towards Emin, and if not actually with him was near him. Intense interest is felt here in the fate of the intrepid explorer, and no one for a moment believes that the government will allow his life to be sacrificed in order to hold Suakim. Further developments in the matter are awaited with much anxiety.

Bismarck Not a Colonizer.

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—The Freizinnige Zeitung says: Prince Bismarck, in a recent conversation, declared that owing to the nation's pressure Germany's colonial policy had gone further than he desired. It was too late, however, to think of drawing back. Such a course would be equivalent to defeat on the Rhine. The east African enterprise would certainly entail a great sacrifice of life and money with no particular advantage.

M. Clemenceau Wounded in a Duel.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—M. Maurel, member of the chamber of deputies for the department of Var, fought a duel yesterday with M. Clemenceau. Swords were used and the latter was wounded in the shoulder.

THE SONG OF SONGS.

I'm a man that's fond o' music,
An' when folks are not around,
I kin make our old accordjun
Sound pleasantly takin' sound;
An' that fiddler hangin' yander,
With its gentle-plink, plank, plink,
'Pears to git plumb at the bottom
Of the deepest thoughts I think.

Does the heaps o' good on Sundays
"For" the pray'r at church is said,
Jes' to stand an' hyear "Old Hundred"
Soarin' far up overhead!
An' I most kin spy the angels
Leanin' 'cross the gate up thar,
When ole Abram Blackburn's darter
Leads us in "Sweet Your o' Bray'r."

Yes, you sh'u'd want to see me
When I new my broades' smile,
You must fetch me in the kitchen,
With the little 'n on the till.
For I reckon that ain't no warbler
Kin git on nigh birds' wings
Thar's not holt a fiddle, candle
To the song the kittle sings.

Is hev ever of my soul gits mellier
In the kittle's first sweet note,
The happy weddin' music
Fairly lifts the iron th'oat
Sometimes, as I reckon, my eyes up,
Quite fahly to jes see
Ole man Abram Blackburn's darter
Stan' i do the steam at me.

—Eva Wilder McIntosh in The Century.

A NUMBER ONE.

On a weather beaten board, supported by a hickory iron rod, hung the sign, "Shaved Here," which Breckinridge thought so exceedingly funny that it succeeded to attract custom and counsel. It had been there ten years, since Caleb Mender came into the little town in the Rockies and bought out the repairing business of Caleb Binn.

Caleb this June afternoon sat in the door of his shop repairing a small extremely shabby shoe. He was a dubious man, with twinkling eyes and spectacles and a shock of gray hair standing straight up from his forehead.

Down the trail from Red Mountain, as the afternoon shadows grew long, and night came creeping under the evergreens, galloped a lean bronco at a headlong gait. His rider, a big bearded miner, glanced around under his bushy eyebrows and now and then gave a grunt of satisfaction.

"The old place don't see you no more, Bill," he muttered, as the bronco pranced upon her incline, "nor you've struck it rich, as a reckon's check fur way up in Opal mountains kin testify."

He gall'p'd into Breckinridge, let his broncho at the hitch, and went along to the shop door.

"Range off a ... I'll be ... d," he said.

"Hello! I thought you was dead. Ain't ... years. Same old ... Well, I allus done good work."

"Yes, that's jest about what this ... I've struck it rich. My ... to swell in the knees. ... Mender, I'm ... No lace ... Lace ... Mender, with ... the ... I ... I ... I

SELF DEPENDENCE.

Weary of myself and sick of asking
What I am and what I ought to be,
At this vessel's prow I stand, which bears me
Forward, forward, o'er the starlit sea.

And a look of passionate desire
O'er the sea and to the stars I send:
"Ye who from my childhood up have calmed me, Calm me, ah, compose me to the end!"

"Ah, once more," I cried, "ye stars, ye waters,
On my heart your mighty charm renew;
Still, still let me, as I gaze upon you,
Feel my soul becoming vast like you!"

From the intense, clear, star sown vault of heaven,
Over the lit sea's unquiet way,
In the rustling night air came the answer:
"Wouldst thou be as these are? Live as they.

"Unaffrighted by the silence round them,
Undistracted by the sights they see,
These demand not that the things without them
Yield them love, amusement, sympathy.

"And with joy the stars perform their shining,
And the sea its long moon-silvered roll;
For self poised they live, nor pine with pining
At the fever of some differing soul.

"Bounded by themselves, and unregardful
In what state God's other works may be,
In their own tasks all their powers pouring,
These attain the mighty life you see."

O air-born voice! long since, severely clear,
A cry like thine in mine own heart I hear:
"Resolve to be thyself; and know that he Who finds himself loses his misery!"

—Matthew Arnold.

"FRUSTRATED."

"Did I not tell you truth, Grant? Surely you have never seen a lovelier face than that of your mother's guest. Of what are you reminded as you look on her dark, rich, bewildering beauty?"

"Of a tropical sun; of a host of dusky browed servants clustering to do her bidding; of Cleopatra and her spoils; of the splendor of the east; of all things brilliant, from the wing of a tropical bird to the glowing coils of copperheads. Yes, Hilda, my mother's guest is marvelously beautiful."

Grant Lara stood with his father's ward, Hilda Braame, near one of the wide, old fashioned windows of the room, and looked across the width of light between them to where the newly arrived guest sat, and Hilda, with a soft gleam in her gentle eyes, looked up at him.

"Marvelously beautiful," he said again, watching a smile flash over the rich brunette face of Inez Dalgreen, which was truly as vivid and glowing as an eastern sun.

It was such a face as one rarely sees, save in a country where the sun brings all things to early and transient splendor; it was a face which had won the hearts from many breasts, but lost none of its bloom or its beauty because it scattered pain and heart ache.

The dark eyes, with their rich fringes, smiled or grew languid, but never became dim; the red lips, dewy, and potent as lips of a sovereign, were too beautiful to have ever known a curve of pain. If the low brow had a slight lack in it, who but a physiognomist would know? for it was polished as a Parian marble, and above it were massed the richest tresses of hair, so black as to almost look blue in the lamplight.

From a simple dress of amber arose a throat as perfect as ever was copied by sculptor, and idly toying with a fan were hands as fair and delicate as any upon earth.

Looking at her from where she stood, Grant could find no flaw in her, from the coils of blue black hair to the toe of the dainty amber slipper, that peeped from the hem of her dress.

The dark, diamond like eyes lifted, and for an instant met his own across the width of the vast room. The red lips smiled him a summons, which drew him like a spell.

As he moved from his place beside her, a sudden cold feeling went over Hilda, and she shrank to the shadow of the curtain near, and watched him join those about Miss Dalgreen's chair.

"A smile from her eyes, and he forgets my very existence," she said, bitterly, to herself; for pain makes the gentlest of us bitter sometimes.

She was a young, shy, tender girl, with no especial beauty save that which nature had given to her soft, gray eyes. But she had a heart of gold under the white sheen of her bodice, and it had never ached before in all her eighteen years.

Now, as she watched the tall form of her guardian's son bend over the stranger, a pain which startled her throbbed with every throb of her pulses, and she glided out to the quiet of the moonlight, that she might be alone with and learn to understand it.

She would not be missed by those within she knew, for even Mrs. Lara, her almost mother, had no eyes for aught save that of the girl who had come on a visit to one who had known her mother years before.

As it was on the first evening of Miss Dalgreen's coming, so it was on many that followed. Hilda, shy, silent, with a vague, jealous pain in her breast, was allowed to steal away when she listed, never missed, never recalled or sought for, while Grant and Inez played the parts of lovers, too engrossed by their affection to realize that any save themselves were in the world.

Yet Hilda now and then caught the dark eyes of Inez watching her, with a gleam of contemptuous amusement in them; and she was very glad that Miss Dalgreen seemed to wish no friendship to exist between them.

Summer was nearly over when, one evening, a man with a pale, delicate face and compressed lips, asked for Miss Dalgreen.

Being told that she had taken a certain path, and was walking down near the river alone, he turned on his heel and went through the shadows by the way they said she would return.

Half an hour later, as Grant was stepping lightly over the grasses, hastening back to the presence of one whose beauty had bound him like a spell, he suddenly heard her low, silvery laugh, and it came from the shadow of heavy branches, which drooped low above the path that led up from the river.

Something like a smothered malediction followed on the musical peal; and then he caught the full richness of Inez Dalgreen's voice, still with a ripple of mirth in it.

"You are quite tragical over it, my dear Rex; but I don't see why you should be, when you know how poor you are, and how absurd it would be to think of my ever marrying you. Now, Mr. Grant Lara is an only child—did you notice how broad the acres are that will be his in a few years? Be reasonable, Rex, and let us part friends."

"Friends!" Grant heard a hoarse voice cry—"friends, when you have taken my life into your hands and broken it as you would a rotten twig? But tell me this—have you any love in your heart for this man whom you tell me you will marry?"

The silver of her laughter rang out once more:

"Love for Grant Lara! If" she said, merrily. "Why, Rex, I never thought of loving him; but there is a plain, pale, stupid little thing here who is breaking her heart about him, and he never looks at her. Rex, if a woman isn't beautiful, she may have all the attractions of the angels, and men may pass her by; but if"——

Grant Lara never knew what words of wisdom followed those on the red lips that had softened to such tender smiles for him for seven weeks.

He hurried back by the way he had come, reached the river bank, unmoored a skiff he found there, and rowed fast and far on the silver sheen of the waters.

It was late when he fastened the little boat once more, and his pulses were beating more evenly; the cool river air had sent back the blood that had rushed about his brain; reason had come to him, and dwelling on Inez Dalgreen's words, he realized all they signified.

The "pale, plain, stupid little thing" was Hilda, of course. His heart was very sore, but a sort of warmth stole into it for the gentle, innocent girl whose heart had ached, perhaps, as his was aching, and who had borne it and made no sign.

She was "breaking her heart for him," Inez had said, with a laughing sneer in her voice.

Did she love him so well, then, the sweet natured, shy eyed child, whose toddling steps he, as a lad, had led from room to room, and up and down, and in and out, in the long ago?

And he? Had he no love in his breast for her? Was it all given to that glittering, heartless, soulless creature, who said she would accept his hand and share his possessions, even before he had gone to her with the gifts? Well, after all, his infatuation had been patent to every one. Why not to her, most of all?

He walked slowly toward the house, his eyes roving restlessly about as he went. She was still in the grounds with the man to whom she dare to disclose her worthlessness.

A slight figure in white caught his glance. He swung around on his heel and met Hilda in the full light of the rising moon.

Somehow she seemed very fair to him just then. Was it not because he knew her true and sweet and womanly?

"Hilda," he said, putting out his arms impetuously and clasping her before she was aware of his intention—"Hilda, child, sweetheart, do you care for me more than you would care for a brother? Do you love me well enough to trust your future to me from this hour?"

He saw the gray eyes below him dilate and darken, felt the slight figure tremble in his arms; and a sudden glow of gladness went over him, even in his pain, for it would take those soft hands of Hilda Braame many long months to heal the wound left in his life by Inez; and yet to be loved—loved truly, and for himself, for what he was, not what he had! Ah, it was very sweet to him!

"I thought," she faltered—"I did not dream you cared—I thought"——

"Nay! do not tell me what you think or have thought," he said quickly. "Tell me what you know. You love me, Hilda?"

"Yes—I see I was a child, Grant."

Hilda and your later Mrs. Lara and Inez, who had been wandering where they listened, looked up as Grant and Hilda entered the room.

Grant led Hilda to his mother's chair.

"Mother," he said distinctly, "Hilda is to be your daughter in very truth. You have loved her for years. As my wife love her always."

He looked at the brilliant face of the guest and saw a great red wave sweep over it—that was all.

She was utterly frustrated, and Grant soon knew how fortunate he had been.—Saturday Night.

About Spiders.

French scientists are puzzling over a spider which has been discovered in the hollow interior of a stone. It is estimated that the stone must be at least 400 years old, but the spider is quite lively and youthful in its antics. It is blind and has no mouth.

A daughter of Mrs. Peck, of Titusville, Ga., drew a pretty little outline design, which so pleased Mrs. Peck that she forthwith framed it and hung it in her parlor. She was astonished to find that an industrious spider had woven across the frame a web which was an exact reproduction of the design beneath. The workmanship is perfect in every detail.

Mr. Louis Nevin, of Louisville, undertook to bring from Hot Springs an immense tarantula which he had captured there. While on the road between Hot Springs and Little Rock the spider escaped from the bottle in which it had been imprisoned and started in a promenade down the aisle of the car. For half an hour confusion reigned and the ugly insect had all the passengers at his mercy. Finally he was safely corralled and bottled up, but Mr. Nevin was forced to take himself and his pet off at the next station.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Toad in a Horse's Throat.

A Berkshire farmer has just lost a valuable cart colt from a most extraordinary cause. The colt had for a long time suffered very much from difficulty of breathing. An operation having been performed on its throat to no purpose, it was finally decided to have it shot. On the carcass being cut up and the neck severed at the shoulders, to the great astonishment of those present, a fair sized toad crawled out of the opening in the windpipe, and the extraordinary cause of the poor animal's sufferings became at once apparent. The toad was almost red when extricated, but gradually assumed its natural color.—London Tid Bits.

Remarkable Recovery of a Ring.

As a gentleman was alighting from a carriage on the Underground railway at Gloucester Road his valuable ring dropped. It could not be found, so he left, returning in an hour's time to see if had been discovered. While he stood in the station the same train entered, having been right round the "inner circle," and strange to say, his eye lighted upon the ring, which lay exposed on the footboard, where it had lain unobserved during the whole journey.—London Tid Bits.

A Pigeon's Strange Death.

A peculiar incident occurred at the residence of Dr. G. C. Rahauser, 2513 Carson street. The doctor was sitting in his library reading, when he was startled by seeing a pigeon fly in at the window, which had been raised a moment before for the purpose of cooling the room. The pigeon lit on the back of a chair, and dropped to the floor dead.—Pittsburg Commercial-Dispatch.

Why Woolen Fabrics Shrink.

The fibers of wool and certain kinds of hairs are toothed or jagged at the edges, the teeth, or imbrications, pointing upward—that is, from the root to the point. When subjected, therefore, to compression or friction, these fibers, being free to move only in one direction by reason of these asperities of surface, have a great tendency to unite and lock together. This explains the peculiar capability possessed by wool of felting, and also the shrinking of fabrics of wool. In the latter case, the excessive rubbing to which they are subjected causes a matting or binding together of the ultimate fibres, which causes shrinkage; and this is intensified by changing the goods from hot to cold water, which is usually practiced, as the contraction of the fibres which this causes is itself a felting process. For washing woolen articles, it is recommended to place them in warm water, never in cold; and if changed from one water to another, they should go from hot to hotter. They should be cleansed with as little and as gentle friction as possible. The fibers of cotton and linen are straight and smooth, and possess none of the surface roughness that characterize the structure of wool, hence they do not shrink in washing.

Learned Professors Say.

The most serious diseases of the heart, says Prof. DaCosta, may occur without any symptoms. Prof. Trousseau, of Paris, states that death from heart disease is usually caused by congestion of the lungs, liver, stomach or kidneys, from imperfect circulation of the blood. Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is the latest and most reliable remedy for this little understood but grave disease. It has cured thousands of cases. Don't fail to try it. Ask for testimonials. DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14th, 1888.

The anxious hearts that await the results of the potent Indianapolis council of Messrs Harrison, Morton, and Quay this week, are not so few as might be imagined. Both Houses contain cabinet timber and a great deal of defective lumber that regards itself as cabinet timber. Mr. Sherman has a longing look in his cold blue eye as he scans the political sky. Yesterday he stated that there was no truth in the story that he would refuse to go into the State Department if there were any hope of Governor Foraker coming to the Senate. This concession is said to be due to Gen. Harrison's expressed desire for harmony in the party. What he would do in the event that Mr. Alger were chosen for a Cabinet position, Senator Sherman did not say. He probably draws the line somewhere.

The newspaper debate over the domestic relations of the President and Mrs. Cleveland, between Mr. Depew, Mrs. Whitney and Senate Ingalls, is one of the most unfortunate discussions that has occured for a long time. The accusation that Mr. Cleveland is inconsiderate toward his young wife, has been gossiped about in Washington ever since the marriage. Who started it, and why it was it started, no one knows. Mr. Ingalls certainly denies that he did, and he is not a man to say a thing and [illegible]y from it. Rumors of domes[illegible]ulties have been told of every [illegible]ential family that ever occupied the White House.

The late Mr. Shakespeare was correct. As chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny.

Senator Ingalls denies that he has been vindictive in his treatment of the President and believes in view of the criticisms suffered in late years by Lincoln, Grant, Garfield and Arthur, Mr. Cleveland has been kindly treated by political adversaries. In disposing of the question, Senator Ingalls delivers himself of a most charming allusion to Mrs. Cleveland, one of those touches that he knows so well how to make. He says: "Among many temptations to levity and many opportunities for frivolity, she has borne herself with unexampled grace, dignity, and composure. Adulation has not disturbed the charming and unaffected simplicity of her character."

The candidates for the speakership, all favor an extra session at the earliest possible day. The race for the place began so early that several are already becoming winded, and will barely be in sight when the race is finished. All dread the idea of a fight lasting until next December, and pray General Harrison to call an extra session, and end their misery. Mr. Reed voices a general sentiment in his party in saying that necessity and not desire will demand an extra session.

The answers made to Mr. Ford's Immigration Committee by over seventy United States consuls in Europe, show that the steamship companies' greed and the avarice and ignorance of the immigrants, is bringing to this country the scum of Europe. The consuls are agreed that the enormous sums paid brokers for filling ships with immigrants is an inducement to the agents to tell any lie to induce the people to emigrate. Law has no place in the transaction. One consul in speaking of the vicious character of certain Bohemian emigration says that they believe that America has no policemen, and entire liberty is to be found there.

The Joint Congressional Committee finds its investigation of the Washington aqueduct fraud is progressing but slowly, owing to the amount of sounding required by the expert engineers. The bad work seems endless. New cavities are being discovered daily. Exactly who is to blame does not yet appear. If the investigation is on a par with the majority of War Department examinations of scandals, it will simply be discovered that no one is to blame. A report of the Joint Committee, Mr. Edmunds announced to the Senate on Wednesday, cannot be expected before the latter part of January.

The National Sabbath convention, in session here this week, is fixing plans for a much broader organization than that hitherto contemplated. A Catholic member of the Executive Committee has been chosen. Many minor sects are represented, including the Society of Friends and the Free-Will Baptists. The Senate Committee of Labor accorded the Executive Committee a hearing on Thursday, when lengthly arguments were made in favor of "Sunday rest" movement. In the church where the session of the convention are held, is the monster petition of 14,000,000 people, asking a stricter observance of the Sabbath.

Nearly all colds are slight, at first, but their tendency is to so lower the system that the sufferer becomes a ready victim to any prevalent disease. The use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in the beginning of a cold, without guard against this danger.

THE DETROIT FREE PRESS.

Two years ago at the encampment of the Michigan State Troops, at Brighton was first heard the high-pitched inquiry: "What's the matter with this one?" and then the stentorian concerted reply, "He's all right!" The interrogatory and the answer, expressive and taking, spread all over the land, being made especially prominent by Michigan men in Chicago last summer, and as a rallying cry was vociferously repeated all through the late campaign.

As the Free Press comes under the discriminating eye of readers we seem to hear this question.

"What's the matter with the Free Press?" And its vast army of readers out-shout a Peace Jubilee chorus responding:

"O, The Free Press is all right!"

And in verity the Free Press is all right.

What would you have, good reader? The telegraphic news from the four quarters of the globe, the doings of kings and kaisers, parliaments and people?

Do you wish the run of the exchange, the fluctuations of Wall street, the prices of the products of soil, and the fabrics of man's skill?

Do you wait for the proceedings of courts, the shall we say doings of congress, the news of the government, the amazing variety of intelligence gathered from all parts of the continent and related at length?

Are you interested in Michigan news, the movements of notable people, a picture of life in the great cities as seen by a corps of intelligent reporters and vividly reproduced in all the varying phrases of nature?

Will editorial discussion of the topics of interest, keenly analyzed and comprehensible, interest you?

Will it please you to read of matters pertaining to the "Household" or "The Farm and Garden?"

Are you entertained by discourse on music and the drama, in discussion of plays, in the gossip of the stage? Are you interested in general art matters?

Do you take pleasure in reading of what is going on in the world of athletics?

Or will your fancy be stirred, your sentiment secured, your emotions touched, your humor tickled, your faculties improved by the wonderfully interesting stories, sketches, poems, anecdotes and manifold expositions of human nature, which are to be found in its columns, original all of them, contributed by scores of writers of intellect and cultivation, a brighter and larger array than many a magazine can boast of, and not duplicated in any other paper, but to be read in the Free Press alone?

Do you like to know what is going on in the social world, and what are the latest society "fads?"

If these things cannot satisfy, please, interest and instruct you, then it is hardly within the power of those who labor solely to produce a pure, refined and high class, modern newspaper, to do so.

But if you will take the trouble to compare the paper with any other which may come before you, no matter from what place, near or remote, bearing in mind that the Daily is furnished every day in the year for seven dollars, and the weekly (10 to 12 pages) each week in a year for only one dollar, your unbiased judgement in response to "What's the matter with the Free Press? cannot be other than this: The Free Press is one of the best and cheapest family newspapers in the world, therefore,

"The Free Press is all right."

A VALUABLE PUBLICATION.

A copy of the ninth edition of the American News paper Annual for 1888, published by N. W. Ayer & Son of Philadelphia, has been received. It is a most creditable publication, being complete as a newspaper directory, valuable for reference, typographically elegant and correct in every detail of information pertaining to the world of journalism. It is a large volume of 1072 pages, and the publishers have incorporated several notable improvements over their former complete Annuals, particularly with reference to the States and Territories. A complete register of the newspapers of Canada and British Columbia is also included. It contains a complete list of all press and editorial associations in Canada and the United States, and describes each State, Territory and county, giving the location, area, character of surface and soil, chief products and manufactures, together with the population. For reference, it will fully meet the demand of a progressive American public for an exhaustive, accurately compiled newspaper directory and gazetteer of information relative to the topography of the country and its various commercial resources.

The best on earth can truly be said of Grigg's Glycerine Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruptions. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents. Sold by Dr. Geo. Furguson's.

Dairy Column.

Edited by the Bureau of Dairy Information
CHICAGO, ILL.

For the encouragement of improved methods of Dairying. Information upon all matters relating to the manufacture of butter and cheese and handling of milk will be given in answer to questions mailed to the Bureau at above address.

WHY HE SHOULD KNOW.

It is not enough that a Diaryman know what the combined result of his diary may be, but in these days of close competition, and high priced feed he should know what each individual cow of the herd is doing in paying her way, and leaving a profit to her owner. It has become an accepted truth in the minds of progressive diarymen, that the weight of a cow's milk is but little index of its value for butter and cheese. These two elements are made from the solids that may be in the milk, not of the fluids in which they float. The 20 pounds of milk of one cow may contain far more butter and cheese than the 50 of another cow, and as a dairy animal, the first is the cheaper and better, for, the 30 pounds of water in the milk of cow No. 2 costs money to produce, and is of no value whatever. Your herd of 30 cows may average well, but if the "skim milk" cows were weeded out, and better ones put in their places, the same feed, care, shelter, taxes, interest on capital, &c., would "cover" 30 cows whose butter exhibit was 275 pounds each of butter as well as the dairy who could not for the life of them only show 125 pounds per year.

This is what testing each individual cow means. It means adding 100 pounds of butter at least to the average yield, and not increase the cost of production one cent, or the labor, save in churning, and no dairyman objects to churning if his wife or hired girl is able and willing.

If the milk goes to the city, this butter quality is not so absolute in its requirements. The want is a large flow of well balanced milk, but it has not been the "luck" because it was not born in them, for a noted number of vaunted milk yielders at the public tests this year, to give a milk so low in quality that it fell far below the legal standard required by the respective states. As several cities now require standard milk of 12 per cent and above of solids, and the fiat has gone forth that milk and cream in the near future will be purchased by "oil test," the wise dairyman will see about this, and get cows by breeding, and selection if at 20 pounds of their milk will make one pound of butter. This sold for what it is worth, puts the dairyman on a high level that leads to success, but if he follows the ignis fatuus (will of the wisp) that, one pound of milk is as good as another, he will be a slave to his dairy, rather than his dairy being a source of profitable revenue.

A cow should be more than a converter of food into fertility, just or hardly paying her way in milk. A good cow will pay for her food, and leave a profit of $30, if a farmer will become a dairyman, and milk dairy cows, not dairy steers.

A Plea for Ensilage.

I met my neighbor to-day with sore fingers, tied up with rags and salve, who said his fingers were "terrible sore." He never knew so much mud and bother in husking in his life, and had 500 bushels yet to husk; and all them corn shocks "I've got to re-bind and set up, and the fodder corn won't stand up; all spoiling, and I shall loose half of it. When it is all done I have got to draw all that fodder in and run it all through the cutter, draw the corn to mill, and I've got a big job before me to feed these cows. What are you doing with your corn?" "I put it, corn and all, into the silo a month ago, and I don't have to husk, bind shocks, grind, go to mill, cut fodder &c., next winter. I've got through all this big fall and winter job that I don't get a cent for, and loose a third of the fodder by waste and exposure, and pay the miller and toll gate keeper another third. That labor is all dead loss. When an acre of big corn, with its 100 bushels of ears, can be put into this 'box' for $8 per acre, what is the use of keeping along in the old expensive rut, and keeping one's hands stuck with Green Mountain salve all the fall? That's 'why' we dont salve our hands this fall. We went to the Centennial and had a good easy time generally, and will be toasting our shins this winter while you are drawing half spoiled corn fodder in the mud and snow, and live in the barn the rest of the time, trying to fix it so as to make the balance go as far as it will.

CONSUMPTION CURED WITH GRAPES.

This fell destroyer has brought a blight to many a promising life, and sadness to many a home circle. There is one remedial agent that will assist nature in throwing off this terrible disease, viz: Speer's Port Wine. It has been used by hundreds with wonderful success; has checked the progress of disease and brought thousands back to health. Its property is to make new blood. For sale by druggists.

Salvation Oil routs and banishes all bodily pain instantly, and costs only twenty-five cents a bottle.

BLAKE'S TABLES.

Weather Predictions based upon Astronomical Mathematics, for 1889 is ready for Delivery. It makes a book of 60 pages, with 10 pages of tables, in which the number of inches of rain fall in each State and part of Canada are given for each month of the year 1889. Also the maximum, minimum and mean temperature for each month are given. The tables also show what the average precipitation has been in each State for each month for the past fifty years, also what the average temperature has been each month for fifty years. It has required over a year's labor, part of the time with several assistants, to complete this book. It also shows what the weather will be in England and all parts of Europe, as well as British India, for 1889. Based upon these weather predictions, a table of probable prices for wheat, corn, oats and cotton, for each month in the year, is given. Mr. Blake's reputation for the past fourteen years as a scientific meteorologist is too well known to need comment. He has predicted every drouth and wet season, and every warm, cold or ordinary winter which has occured in that time. This year the farmers of Kansas have raised many million bushels of corn more than they would have done but for his predictions and advice, as hundreds of them testify. Following his advice as to the coming season, they now have the largest acreage of winter wheat ever sown in Kansas, and it is in splendid condition. These TABLES show that next year will produce the greatest extremes of weather which have been known in America for more than sixty years. The floods will be great, and the drouths still greater. Success or failure in nearly every business next year will depend upon knowing in advance what the weather is to be. Price, 75 cents. Address, C. C. BLAKE, Topeka, Kan.

COUGH! and COUGH! and COUGH!!

What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. J. J. ORR, Druggist.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

At the meeting of the Farmers' Union held at M. Smeltzer's, Dec. 14 there was a crowded house and a good program. In addition to the program as published last week, Mrs. Poucher gave an Instrumental piece, and Joseph and Maggie Linton a recitation, Ina Blood a whistling solo and Mr. Smeltzer an instrumental piece, which were enjoyed by all. The question, Resolved That woman suffrage would be beneficial to the United States, was decided in favor of the negative. The next meeting was appointed at Mrs. Jane McLain's, Friday evening, Dec. 28. Program for that evening:

Inst. Music—Mrs. Bert Poucher.
Dec.—John Cadmus Jr.
Rec.—Clifford Hendershot.
Sel. Reading—Mrs. Eaton.
Song—Eunice Davidson.
Dec.—Bert Blood.
Chip Basket—Joe Eaton.
Question—Resolved that special farming is more profitable than general farming. Aff.—Wm. Comfort and Wm. Raymond. Neg.—B. F. DePuy and Frank Davidson, followed by others.

OBITUARY.

Miss Rhoda Stevens died at her home in this village, Monday, Dec. 17, 1888, at the age of 78 years. She had during her life been comparatively free from sickness and enjoyed good health up to Friday evening, Dec. 14, when she was stricken with the fatal disease, apoplexy and was found lying on the floor unconscious. Medical aid was summoned but she was beyond the reach of human skill and never recovered consciousness, passing peacefully over the river at 2 o'clock Monday morning. She was a woman of retiring disposition, but during her residence here made many friends who mourn her death. The funeral was held yesterday morning at the Universalist church. The deceased was born at Killingwork, Middelsex Co., Connecticut in 1810, and removed to Springfield Otsego Co., N. Y., with her parents when five years old, where she lived until about six years ago when she came to Mich. and lived with her brother Asahel, who alone survives her of a family of three girls and two boys. She has always been a firm believer in the doctrine of the final restitution of all souls, and remained so until her death.

OBITUARY.

Died Sunday morning Dec 16, at his home in Macon, Nicholas Smith at the age of 71 years, 5 months and 6 days. The deceased was born at Bavaria, Germany. He emigrated to this country in 1847 and lived in N. Y. City until 1855, when he came to Macon, and lived there to the time of his death. He leaves a widow, four daughters and one son, all married. The funeral was held at Lake Ridge church, Tuesday and was largely attended. The deceased was a brother of Henry Smith, of this village, Geo. Smith, of Toledo, John W. Smith, of Youngstown, O., and Adam Smith, of Sterling, Ill., all of whom attended the funeral.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Merry Christmas to all.

Burt Garlinghouse is on the sick list.

Miss Maggie Finch, of Dundee, is visiting at Jas. Potter's.

Jehiel Davidson is attending the Circuit Court this week as a juror.

The approach of Christmas invariably brings cold weather and this year is no exception to the rule.

S. H. Sharp was visiting his father, Rev. Peter Sharp of Ridgeway, last week. On Friday Mrs. L. Barnes of Tecumseh was down there on a short visit.

The pickpocket who was bound over to the circuit from here last month on complaint of Abner Wilson pleaded guilty to the charge. He did not deem it prudent to stand a trial.

Ernest Gamble is at home this week. His route is between Cleveland and Chicago. He is on duty seven days and off seven days, and is now enjoying his first week's respite.

"Ministering Spirits"—Subject of sermon for Sunday morning Dec. 23d, at the Universalist church, at 10:30. In the evening at 7 o'clock, a discourse on "Jesus' Parentage" All are invited.

E. C. Smith of Chicago, was in town last Friday on a flying trip. He is now agent for the Inter-State Despatch on the Nickel Plate line. That is becoming one of the best freight lines between the East and West.

The Ladies Aid society of Cambridge held a supper and bazar at Marion Cases, on the evening of Dec. 13th, which proved to be rousing occasion. The house was crowded to overflowing and the receipts amounted to over $77.00.

Wm. Smith has the agency for this county of the duplex fuel saving radiator. It is attached to the stove pipe and by its use the consumption of fuel is reduced at least one-third. He will leave them on trial with parties who wish to purchase.

Frank Potter has obtained a position in the Normal College at Fremont, Nebraska, and started for his destination last Monday. The place is one of considerable responsibility, but we believe he will prove himself fully equal to the work and wish him the best of success.

E. L. Wells is making his arrangements for a grand New Year's Dance and Oyster supper at the Sand Lake hotel. It will be given on Tuesday evening Jan. 1st. Music by Bonney & Teachout's Orchestra. Bill $1.50. Here is the place to start in the New Year, with an evening of enjoyment. Let all the young men take heed.

A. W. Spaflor!—better known as "Pa" arrived in this city, from Conway Springs, Kansas, last Tuesday, and took all his friends by surprise. He has spent the past three years in Kansas and Colorado, and left Pueblo last Friday night. He don't relish our cold snap.

The Presbyterian S. S. will have a Xmas tree at the church next Monday evening at 7 o'clock. Old Santa Claus has promised to be there and distribute the presents, but the parents are expected to have a hand in the matter, same as last year. Come and see the children enjoy themselves.

In no fabric can a person be deceived more than in a horse blanket, as poor blankets which will last only a few weeks are made, which look and feel as well as a strong blanket which will last several seasons. The 5-A horse blanket manufacturers who are advertising in our columns make a specialty of strong horse blankets, and put their 5-A trade mark on each blanket; so buyers when purchasing can tell a strong blanket by looking for the 5 A trade mark.

Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M. elected their officers last Friday evening as follows:

W. M.—J. H. Smith.
S. W.—P. S. McKinnon.
J. W.—J. F. Wilson.
Treas.—T. D. Mark.
Sec.—Alf. James.
S. D.—B. J. Garlinghouse.
J. D.—Thos. R. Kyle.
Stewards.—O. Q. Jones, J. H. Aten.
Tyler—J. I. Werner.

The Masonic Lodge will hold a public installation to-morrow (Friday) evening. Masons and their friends are invited. A good social time is anticipated.

A. H. Briggs of Adrian died last Friday. He was for a long time Probate Register, was an active Granger, and a most worthy man and citizen. He was a prominent candidate for the office of Probate Judge last fall in the Republican Convention, but in order to prevent a rupture both he and his principal opponent were set aside and the nomination given to Maj. Robbins It is said that disappointment over the failure to be nominated hastened his death, but whether that is so or not, it is evident the matter was keenly felt by him. He has for many years been a prominent official in the county grange and a man very generally respected.

Winter has arrived at last.

S. P. Hosmer went to Toledo Monday.

Will Ingersoll has taken a clerkship in the postoffice.

Miss Culver, of Dresden, N. Y., is visiting at Thos. White's.

There was a Minstrel show at the Opera House Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Burt Waring is clerking at the novelty store during the holiday rush.

Mrs. Elma Emmett and Mrs. Jacob Cheever visited friends in Adrian last week.

Joe Wooden is in Battle Creek and we understand he intends to move his family there.

Oscar Heck returned from Port Austin yesterday where he has been filling a pulpit.

If you dance you will attend the Christmas party Tuesday evening. If you don't dance, then buy a gallery ticket and see the sport.

Rev. J. M Getchell was called to Wolf Creek last Friday to attend the funeral of a child of Mr. Driscoe's, the only grandchild of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Barnes.

The Holiday issue of the Hudson Gazette was a stunner. It was a double sheet and a model of typographical execution. "Our Jim" always gets to the front in the newspaper line.

Mr. Jas. Locke, who has traveled extensively in Europe, will play with Wolfe's orchestra at the christmas party. He will give an exhibition of playing on two cornets at once. The committee have gone to extra trouble and expense to secure Mr. Locke and he will prove an interesting feature of the evening.

We have a few copies of a new work entitled "Plain Home Talk, or Medical Common Sense," for sale at the HERALD counting room. It is the best work of the character we have seen. Price only $2.00 for a $3.00 book, as we wish to close them out at once.

Hudson Post: We have read about the railway hog, the campaign hog, and the dining room hog, but all these dwindle into insignificance when compared with the hog killed by John F. Letherer, of Pittsford township, last week. The porker dressed 490 pounds.

The fourth annual Christmas party of Tecumseh will be given by a select committee on Tuesday evening next, Dec. 25th. It is the intention of the committee in charge to make this party eclipse all their former efforts. Wolf's orchestra of Toledo will furnish the music. Our young people are looking forward to the event with bright anticipations.

"Every new subscriber to this paper, and every subscriber who pays in advance, will receive the "Farm Journal" for one year. "The Farm Journal" (Wilmer Atkinson's) is old and reliable, standing at the head of farm papers, with a circulation far above 150,000. Everybody ought to take it."

The opening of the Indian Territory for settlement is at present attracting much attention throughout the country. Oklahoma, as the new Territory is to be called, is one of the finest sections of the west. To those desiring full information respecting this country, we would call attention to the advertisement of A. Bass & Co.,

The World's Arbitration League is the name of a new organization recently started at Washington, which purposes to consolidate all Peace Societies and other kindred organizations. They invite representatives from all such to meet in Washington Sept. 1, 1889. Among the officers elected, we notice the name of our old friend, Col. D. S. Curtis, who is chosen third vice president.

Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine for January, continues his series of papers on the West in one entitled "Comments on Kentucky." This is not a conventional descriptive article, but the work of a thorough literary artist. It is interspersed with such charming bits of humor as the paragraph upon the virtues of bluegrass.

The fall term of School at Adrian Valley Seminary closes Friday evening, Dec. 21. An interesting literary program has been prepared for the occasion. The subject for the evening is Michigan; My Michigan. The history, geography and resources of the Peninsula state will be brought out. Several recitations will be given. Good music will enliven the exercises. The prospects for the winter term which begins Jan. 2d., are good.

Below is the program for the Christmas Concert next Tuesday evening:

1. Overture—Faust—Von Spohe—Wolff's Orchestra.
2. Concert Polka—On two Cornets at same time—Mr. James Locke.
4. "Sylvia" Scherzo—Piccolo Solo—Robt. Jeschka.
4. The Jolly Minstrel—Medley—Brooks—Orchestra.

Concert begins at 8 o'clock.

Admission to the gallery 15cts. Reserved seats 25cts. Reserved seats will be placed on sale at Adamson's on Saturday morning, Dec. 22d. Everybody come and hear the concert.

John S. Temple went to toledo Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs Frank Davidson went to Adrian Monday.

The big Christmas party will come off next Tuesday evening.

Subscribe for your newspapers and magazines at the HERALD office.

Frank Hall went to Detroit Friday, returning Monday morning.

The HERALD will be furnished cheaper than ever for 1889 clubbed with other papers.

The report of the Northern Lenawee Farmers' Club arrives too late for insertion this week.

A Christmas dance will be given at Armory Hall on Monday evening, Dec. 24th. Music by Hubbard and Machau's orchestra. Bill 50 cents.

Abner Wilson wishes to inform those who wish that he has placed his Kraut on sale at Birdsall & Glen's and Updyke's market for the accommodation of any who wish to buy in quantities less than half barrel.

Marks and Russell have dissolved partnership in the drug business. Mr. W. F. Marks succeeds, having bought his partner's interest. The business will run along just the same. We regret to lose Mr. Russell from the ranks of our business men and trust that he may find another place soon.

In lieu of a special club list this year we have made arrangements with a responsible subscription agency by which we can take subscriptions for any paper or magazine published at lowest club rates in connection with the HERALD. Hand in your subscriptions early and get the best terms obtainable.

Admiral Porter's Naval History of the War is the best work on the war from the naval standpoint. We have half a dozen copies for sale cheap, in both sheep and turkey morocco binding. The book is a large double column page, profusely illustrated, and would make an elegant holiday gift. They will be sold at a liberal discount to close them out. Call and examine them.

Supervisor Shull and his estimable lady entertained their friends last Tuesday evening. We dislike to criticise so enjoyable a social affair and yet we suggest that Mr. Shull was "too modest by half." The guests were not aware until they arrived that it was the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage, and hence were deprived of the privilege of carrying tokens of esteem for the host and hostess. Mr. and Mrs. Shull were attired in their wedding apparel, which served to show how rapidly fashions are changing. The guests dispersed at a late hour, highly pleased with the evening's reception.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

What's the matter with Tom and George? They're all right. Why? They have the largest and finest assortment of holiday goods in Tecumseh, in the old corner store in the Lilley House block. Our stock of jewelry, watches and clocks and novelties of all kinds are especially adapted to the holiday trade. Our store will remain open each evening until eleven o'clock till Jan 1st. Prices are down to the lowest notch as our stock must be closed out before the New Year Old Santa Claus makes his headquarters at our establishment and here he comes to replenish his knap sack from time to time. Call and see our bargains before buying.

ADAMSON BROS.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

The Holiday vacation is drawing near.

Fred McNair will spend his vacation in Washington.

Several of the boys are looking for girls to take to the Christmas dance. We understand that one of our worthy seniors has invited three or four but failed to persuade any of them to accompany him.

Some of the girls are learning to skate.

We are pleased to welcome to the senior class Miss Frances Kehoe. She has attended but one year, but has made up several studies outside of school, but as she is talented and determined we feel confident that she will go through with the class.

Four of the B room boys left school the other day to go skating, but they were somewhat surprised to learn that they would have to go to the school board in order to get back.

We are expecting a number of new scholars next term.

Final examination occurs this week in Physical Geography, English Analysis, Civil Government, Modern History and U. S. History.

Rhetoric, Arithmetic, Civil Government of Michigan and English History will be taken up at the beginning of next term.

We wish all a "Merry Christmas" and a "Happy New Year" and hope you will come back next term prepared to settle down to hard study.

Miss Etta Coddington will spend her Christmas vacation in Kalamazoo.

THE JONATHAN HALL LIBRARY.

Last Friday afternoon we were called to Ridgeway on business, and in the evening we whiled away a piece of an hour to good advantage in the Library building. We found, upon inquiry of the secretary that the institution is in a very flourishing condition. The munificence of Mr. Rufus T. Bush in erecting this beautiful building and furnishing it has already borne fruit abundantly. The Jonathan Hall Memorial Library is now so finely established that nothing can injure or destroy it, and future generations in Ridgeway will rise up and bless the public benefactor who planned it, and without whose money and labor it would not have been.

We gathered a few statistics from the secretary's annual report which will be of interest to our readers. The report covers the library year ending Dec. 3, 1888. During that period the following sums have been received:—

Membership Certificates,	$463.00
Annual Dues,	$101.00
Entertainments,	$47.96
Fines	$12.31
Total Receipts	$524.27

The total expenses for the year foot up $310.08.

It is estimated that $200 will cover the expenses for the ensuing year, as during the first year there were many items of expense that will not occur again in a number of years.

We gather the following statistics from the Libarian's report which covers the same period of time.

Whole number of books in the library when catalogue was published 966.
Number of books now on hand, 1042.
Number of books drawn during the year 3073.
Largest number drawn by one member, 99.
Number of members of the association at date of last annual meeting, 125.
Total number of certificates issued to date, 144.
Number of life members, 7.
Number of members moved away during the year, 4
Number lost by death, 1.
Number of new members added since Sept. 1, 1888, 6.

The following papers and magazines are kept on file in the reading room.

Dailies—8.
Weeklies—17.
Monthlies—11.
Total—36.

At the annual meeting $150 was pledged to be paid in during the year as a sinking fund.

The association gives a public entertainment occasionally by which additons are raised for the treasury from time to time. The most successful affair of this kind thus far held was the box social given on Wednesday evening, Dec. 12th. $32 was realized out of the entertainment, in hard cash, besides a big slice of good solid enjoyment. Mr. Frank Davidson officiated as auctioneer to perfection, and the liberal sum which he abstracted from the pockets of the audience with a lot of boxes wrapped in brown paper demonstrated the fact conclusively that he is a worthy son of our honored "Uncle Sim."

As we closed our visit the other evening this reflection forced itself upon us—Isn't there enough brains and enterprise and literary taste among us to inaugurate and complete a similar establishment in Tecumseh? We have a fair library already at hand. Shall we enlarge it and give it a habitation? What do our liberal minded citizens say on this subject?

To Whom it May Concern.

The undersigned have leased for a term of years, the Sash and Door factory lately occupied by the Tecumseh Mfg. & Co., and will conduct a lumber and coal business, and as demanded manufacture best grades of mill and factory work. Carefully prepared estimates will be furnished those contemplating building. Soliciting a fair share of the public favors, we are,

Respectfully,

EVERY DAY

There is something remarkable, truly, in the exhibit, just think of it: every day without cessation a stream of current testimony to the surpassing merits of a good thing, which has proved itself to be a benefaction to mankind pours in. The testimony is strong, fresh, convincing, and is now being published to show the unabated popularity of the great remedy for pain, St. Jacobs Oil. The latter is prompt, sure, permanent in effect and always worth its price.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, referred to in another column, is the very best publication in this country for those interested in science, engineering, mechanics, inventions, etc. A copy of the Scientific American may be seen at the office of this paper, where subscriptions will be received.

AT TWILIGHT

The day dies slowly out, the crimson flush
That lay athwart the sky a while agone
Fades into gray, and softly twilight's hush
Steals nearer and another night is born.

My heart is heavy with hot tears unshed,
Which gather in my eyes yet will not fall;
My life, my hopes, would God my heart was dead
And over all clings, like a funeral pall,

A black, dense shadow, deep and dark and chill
Inconstant! Oh, my God, the bitter pain
That now comes after all the joy I felt, until
I knew that all my trust had been in vain

I watch the purple shadows drawing near,
Mingling their dusky light with dying day;
I watch a pale young moon hang silvery clear,
An arching crescent in the heaven's gray.

I look ahead o'er years of weary waiting,
O'er years of saddest grief and weary pain;
My loving heart now changed from love to hating
Will never echo to your love again

You came and took my heart into your keeping,
You swept its golden strings with cruel might;
That heart which had till then been calmly sleeping
Broke into song so tremulous yet light

That all the clouds which lay across the sky
Of my sad life flew tremblingly away,
And on my heart a new flush seemed to lie
Like roseate dawning of another day

Now at love's going all my life is dreary,
The cloud comes back that shadowed all my gray past;
I watch the midnight moon, eyes sad and weary,
Praying that death will end my path at last

FRIDA'S GIFT.

Every woman desires, above all things to be loved, and Frida was no exception to the rule, but when it came to being put upon a pedestal and worshipped from a distance the pleasure did not outlast the novelty.

It was cold up there all alone, and she wanted to be warmed. Respectful homage might do for queens, but she was only a loving hearted little German girl, who had just passed her sixteenth birthday, and been invested with the embroidered bronze slippers, which signified that childhood had passed, and she might take her place in the world as a young lady, and be "good even," instead of the familiar "child" of years past, and who had had no thought beyond papa, mamma and the children, till the young candidate Rheinhart came to be her nor to her mother, by over her from forgetting what she had to do.

Much time was passed in the schoolroom, and Frau Rheinhart soon discovered that the docile, golden haired pupil would be the sweetest ride a mother for some one fortunate enough to win her.

That it should be herself never entered his mind. Aye, as well he might, he asked one of the royal family to keep his house and mend his socks—which shows of how much learning, deep reading and knowledge to a man to understand in a woman.

It had not taken very long for Rheinhart to become Frida's ideal of all that was great and good. His learning she venerated, his abstraction referred to hours the most profound thinking, while his carelessness and neglected dress only excited a longing to take upon herself the humble task of ministering to the creature comforts of this young divine, who, to an unprejudiced onlooker, was at most an awkward, shy, absent minded dreamer, only at home in the fog land dreamed of others by a dreamer all nothing beyond in what he dreamed.

Time has no sweep, however, did not bring Frida to the mercy of Rheinhart's near sighted blue eyes. She saw that long hair in the present way he had assumed a border around a cerebral she must still remove, and when could it look more like a man now, at the least of the blessed Christ child?

She could not as yet tell how, but it should be done, he loved her already, well even if he only saw in the meantime she reveled in innocent dreams of the future.

He would soon have a parish, of course, and she would work hard oh, yes, and be all kind to the children's classes. Oh! she could only look a little older, as in early life and lady free would be become acceptable surrounded by—Heaven preserve us! Frau Doctor this, and Frau Professor that. Oh, no. She will knit and mend his socks, brew cherry cordial for his cough, keep his books dusted, and never, never lose the lose leaves of his sermons; anything but take her place as Frau Pastorin and receive all the raw inspiring ladies.

Startled by this idea into looking up, she met his eyes fixed on hers, felt sure he had read her thoughts, and hid her blushing face behind a huge pile of unmended socks.

Poor Franz never dreamed the blush was for him; he saw himself through his own blue glasses and sighed, patiently going on with little Max, who could not, under repeated explanations, be made to understand that the square of a number was not the same as twice.

Was the child duller than usual, or was it that he could hardly see the slate through the mist of a vision—a vision of a little room smaller than this, oh yes, but warm, with curtains and firelight; it has shelves on three sides with books, and books are on a stand at his right hand.

In the middle of the room there is a table with a green cloth, and a napkin folded diamond fashion under the lamp. There is a work basket too, and it belongs to a dear little wife who sits at one on the fender, a little golden haired wife, whose name is Frida. But he must have spoken the name aloud, for she looked up.

"Did you speak to me, Herr Professor?"

"Pardon, Fraulein, I but thought aloud; we want to leave the book and slates to-night, the little ones and I, for stories of the Christ Child."

"If you will listen I will tell them better."

So, while the good mother in the next room dressed the children's tree, the candidate told quaint old legends of how the oxen in the stable warmed the Holy Babe with their breath; of how the wise men who worshiped him were, after his death, baptized in the faith. And of how the Christ Child fills the shoes of good children, and knows when only a rod is deserved, till the little eyes opened wide with the same wonder they felt every year, and they ran to hunt for their Sunday shoes, sure of forgiveness for the little naughtinesses that had already brought their punishment from the dear house mother.

Frida and Franz, left alone, sat very still; he saw again the little curtained room, with Frida in the armchair, and worshiped by wish his eyes. Oh, heaven, if he sits there ten minutes longer he must tell her; then she will open her big blue eyes at him, and run to her mother; then to-morrow the father will most undoubtedly tell him the little boys are to have another tutor.

"Shall you put your shoes outside your door to-night, Herr Rheinhart?"

The candidate thought not: he had done it last at home, and though all were heavenly kind to him here, he had only one heart's desire, and most certainly no Christ Child would put that in his shoes.

Still if Fraulein Frida desired it, she must know any wish of hers was his law.

Here the parents entered, good nights were hurriedly said, and soon all was quiet.

The children made a merry rush for the breakfast table Christmas morning, displaying their shoes filled to overflowing. When some of the rapture had subsided they asked the candidate what he had found.

Nothing, not even his shoes.

Possibly they had been taken away for a joke.

The children cried out in distress.

At this moment the door opened to admit Frida, walking slowly, her eyes on the floor.

For an instant she hesitated, gave one look at her mother, who returned it encouragingly, then walked straight up to the candidate with her hands out.

She stumbled a little, he sprang to catch her, and then for the first time he saw that her pretty little feet were vainly trying to keep inside of his clumsy shoes.

He stood an instant irresolute, while Frida's lips quivered, and her courage almost failed her. Then she was in his arms, and the good mother, with tears in her eyes, drew the little ones out of the room and closed the door.—Translated for Current Literature from The Berliner Tagblatt by Miss J. M. Burgoyne

Coal Tar and Petroleum.

For the past twenty years, writes a correspondent in American Florist, I have used gas tar not only on greenhouse gutters but on benches and other parts exposed to dampness as well. He says: For gutters I have found nothing better for making them tight. My method of application is to heat it over a very gentle fire and apply with a paint brush while warm. The heating facilitates the work, as it spreads and penetrates the wood more rapidly, besides forming a hard and glossy coat when cold. Care should be observed not to fill the vessel too full, as it is liable to foam and rise over the side and communicate with the fire. I give my gutters a coat once a year, generally in August, as a warm, still day is to be preferred.

While on this subject it occurs to me that possibly some of your many readers might be glad to know that crude petroleum is also a great preserver of wood. I have found it invaluable for greenhouse stages, etc., as a prime coat for all wood work which is exposed to the weather. It prevents warping and checking and at the same time repels water. I consider it just so much lead and oil saved. If followed with a coat of paint it remains on the surface and forms a solid body. Boards treated in this way will suffer no harm for several years without other paint.

The Japs Don't Save.

You will find but few rich Japanese. The rule here is that the people are not accumulative, in our sense of the word. They have never learned the philosophy of investment, and they spend as they make. They have in the past had no investment of money, except in land, and the rising generation has been largely for relending their loans to causes of wars, which are very frequent. Dr. Hepburn, who has been in Japan for more than thirty years, is my authority for the statement that a Japanese house is thought on the average to last only five years before it is destroyed by fires. The frame work and the interiors are like tinder, and while villas are established up the most modern Japanese conflagrations. The people are the most careless people in regard to fires I have ever seen, and there are no fire departments to speak of out of the four or five large cities. This danger has thus been an incentive to saving, but above this there is little. Seven-eighths of the people, at a rough estimate, live from hand to mouth, though the postal savings banks which have been introduced lately are to teach them differently. Interest is high and the people make money. There is not a large pecuniary class, and the most of land is held at home.—Frank G. Carpenter.

Smuggling Lace in a Coffin.

A Brussels lace merchant had received from a Belgian, residing in Paris, an order for a large quantity of Malines lace. The goods were carefully packed in a lead coffin, which was dispatched to the Paris address as containing a corpse, says a Paris exchange. The Paris merchant had to wait so long for the arrival of the "body" that he at length complained to the manager of the Northern railway, who informed him that the coffin had been detained at the frontier owing to the non-compliance with certain prescribed formalities relating to the transmission of corpses. Our merchant at once took train to Quievrain, dressed in solemn black and with a mourning band round his hat, and wearing an expression of profound sadness. But in spite of his emphatic protest against such an act of desecration the officials insisted on opening the coffin, when the truth came to light and the ingenious smuggler was taken into custody.—New York Telegram.

Paying Dearly.

In a small village of New England, a few years ago, some of the young girls acquired a habit of eating starch, coal, cloves and the like, to improve their complexions. The habits increased by indulgence, and the girls consumed large quantities of these substances—all good in their place, but very harmful when taken alone, and in excess.

In less than a year four out of the six girls were under the doctor's care. The coffee eater became the victim of insomnia, and was so nervous and timid that little things made her cry and tremble as with terror. The clove eater had become a victim to hysteria, and was in a deplorable state. Those who had the starch habit learned to the full extent the meaning of dyspepsia. — Youth's Companion.

A Telling Argument.

It is now noted that the abolition of the car stove will make a clear gain of the space in each car which the heater occupies, and that each train of seven or eight cars will thereby be enabled to carry twenty-five or thirty more passengers. This is the long sought for argument to be employed with effect in inducing the use of steam heat instead of stoves by the railroads. It appeals to the corporate pocketbook. The ordinary argument, based upon sympathy for the roasted passenger, appeals only to the soul, and corporations are proverbially soulless.—Washington Star.

My Poor Back!

That "poor back" is held responsible for more than its share of the sufferings of mankind. If your dog bites a man who kicks it, do you blame the dog? On the same principle the kidneys utter their protest against nervousness, impure blood, and resulting constipation. These force them to do extraordinary work in ridding the system of the poisons which are the result of effete matter retained in the blood. Then the sufferer says the back aches; the kidneys are diseased. "Not yet;" but they will be unless the nerves are strengthened, the blood purified, and the constipation removed. These are the causes of kidney troubles, and Paine's Celery Compound removes them quickly. With its tonic, purifying, and laxative effect, it also strengthens the weak kidneys, making it almost infallible in curing all diseases of the nerves and kidneys. If your hopes of cure have not been realized, try Paine's Celery Compound; it gives perfect health to all who complain of "their poor backs." Price $1.00.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.
$22 TO $900
The cabinet organ was introduced in the present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861, other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments but the Mason & Hamlin organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the Great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, the highest honors were awarded their instruments, including the Paris Exposition, 1878. In competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogue free.
PIANOS,
GRAND & UPRIGHT.
Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to place the pianos they manufacture in competition with all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "Mason & Hamlin Piano Stringer," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.
A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant. Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

CHANCERY NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN: The Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in Chancery.
William K Stamp Complainant,
vs.
Parmela Stamp,
Defendant.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in Chancery.

At chambers in the city of Adrian in said county on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1888.

It satisfactorily appearing to this court by affidavit on file in said cause, that the defendant Parmela Stamp, is not a resident of this state, but resides in the township of York, in the county of Sandusky in the state of Ohio, one of the United States of America,

Therefore on motion of Lamb & Pratt, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Parmela Stamp, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed with the register of said court and a copy thereof to be served on said complainant's solicitors within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill and notice of this order, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by the said non-resident defendant.

And it further ordered that within twenty days after the date hereof, the said complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county of Lenawee, and that such publication be continued therein at least once in each week for six successive weeks, or that he cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant at least twenty days before the time prescribed for her appearance.

Dated November 17, 1888.
VICTOR H. LANE,
Circuit Judge.

Solicitors for Complainant. nov22

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made on February 16, 1887, by W. Young and Jane Young to William K. Choate whereby the power of sale therein contained has become operative. Said mortgage was on February 8, 1887, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in and for Lenawee County and state of Michigan in Liber 77 on page 417. There is now claimed as due on said mortgage the sum of One Hundred Eleven and 80-100 Dollars, ($111.80) and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained and of the statute in such case provided the land mortgaged by said mortgagee to wit:

That certain piece or parcel of land situate in the city of Adrian, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows to wit: Being lot number fifteen (15) as described and recorded on Merrick addition to the city of Adrian and bounded on the west side of Ellis street, will, on the 5th day of January, A. D., 1889, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian in said county and state, to satisfy the said amount due with interest thereon then accrued and all legal costs and charges of this foreclosure as provided by law.

Dated October 3, 1888.
WILLIAM K. CHOATE,
oct11 Mortgagee.

ESTATE OF L. E. MONTGOMERY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 10th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Lyman E. Montgomery, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Olive I. Montgomery widow of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 7th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered. That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday the 12th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Hugh Heaney, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John Heaney, a brother of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Alexander Richard or some other suitable person.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 7th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered. That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Diseases has long been, and still is, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Fauces; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and, even in advanced stages of that disease, relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Glenn, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this to every one afflicted."—Robert Horton, Foreman Headlight, Morrillton, Ark.

Cough Medicine

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me." Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it, also, invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1257 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

RUTH'S CHOICE.

LESSON XII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 23.

Text of the Lesson, Ruth ii, 16-23—Commit Verses 16-18. Golden Text, Ruth ii, 18—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Condensed from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.]

The book of Ruth, with its record of her devotion to the God of Israel and the great blessing He showed upon her, is a delightful resting place after the book of Judges with its record of the many backslidings of Israel and consequent oppressions by their enemies. The first verse tells us that it was in the days of the judges that the events of this book transpired, and some think as early as the time of Gideon. The story of the book is briefly as follows: Elimelech and Naomi of Bethlehem-Judah left their own home because of a famine in the land, and, taking their two sons with them, went to reside in the country of Moab. There Elimelech died; the two sons married women of Moab, and after some years each of the sons died, so that Naomi was left alone with her two daughters-in-law, Orpah and Ruth, bereft of both husband and sons. After spending about ten years in the land of Moab (i, 4) she starts with her daughters to return to her own land; Orpah is persuaded to remain among her own people in Moab, but Ruth clings to Naomi and her God and her people, as recorded in our lesson today. Her faithfulness is rewarded by God giving her as a husband a mighty man of wealth, of the family of Elimelech, whose name was Boaz (ii, 1), and unto them is born a child whom they call Obed; he is the father of Jesse, the father of David (iv, 13-17).

16. "And Ruth said, entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee." Elimelech signifies "my God is king;" and Bethlehem-Judah signifies "the house of bread and praise;" and it seems very strange to see these people of the true God going out to the Moabites (for the Moabites were the enemies of Israel, Deut. xxiii, 3, 4), even though there was a famine in the land. The God who fed Israel forty years in the wilderness could find some way to provide for His people even in time of famine. Elimelech and Naomi did not go into the land of Moab, to glorify God, nor to bear His honor among that people, nor to tell of His wondrous works. We do not read of anything they did to honor God among the Moabites those ten years; and now that Naomi is returning to the land and people of the only living and true God, instead of encouraging Orpah and Ruth to forsake the land of idols and go with her, we find her urging them both to remain in Moab, and in the case of Orpah she is successful. But Ruth, for some cause, is determined to forsake Moab and idolatry and cleave to the God and people of Israel. Perhaps the life of Naomi was better than her testimony, and Ruth had seen in her that which commended the God of Israel; or it may be that the prophecies of Balaam had come to her ears with power, or the tidings of the death of and mourning for Moses in the land of Moab; but whatever it was, we praise God for the whole hearted turning from idols to serve the living and true God of this Gentile woman. The chronicles of Israel the Gittite, to David the king, as the first type, Absalom, was somewhat similar; and also the words of Elisha to Elijah (II Sam. xv, 21; II Kings ii, 2-6). May such be our words to the Lord Jesus, and may we "with purpose of heart cleave unto the Lord" (Acts xi, 23).

17. "The Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me." Taking the words of these two verses together, Ruth's choice is made, on the part of Ruth full identification with Naomi at any cost; and we are reminded of the testimony of Paul at Cæsarea, on his last journey to Jerusalem: "I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts xxi, 13). "I count not my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus" (Act xx, 24).

18. "She was steadfastly minded to go with her." Or, as in the margin, she strengthened herself to go; it is the same word that is translated courageous, or of good courage, in Deut. xxxi, 6, 7, 23; Josh. i, 6, 7, 9, 18, etc., and in Ps. xxvii, 14; xxxi, 24, we are promised that if we wait on the Lord He will strengthen our hearts. In Luke xix, 51, we are told that when the time was come for Jesus to be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem; and if we would be steadfast and unmovable, abounding in the work of the Lord, it must be by steadfastly fixing our eyes and our hearts upon Him as we see Him in His lowly life at Nazareth, His rejected, slandered and despised public life, His death in our stead on Calvary, His resurrection, ascension and continued intercession for us, and His glorious appearing for which we wait. Thus as we labor in His harvest field He will drop many a handful on purpose for us (ii, 16), and we shall know him as our kinsman and Redeemer, a mighty man of wealth.

19. "They came to Bethlehem." About six miles south of Jerusalem; there Rachel died and was buried when Benjamin, youngest of Jacob's sons, was born, of whom Moses said, "The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by Him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between His shoulders" (Deut. xxxiii, 12); and of the tribe of Benjamin came Saul of Tarsus (Rom. xi, 1) the great apostle to the Gentiles. At Bethlehem was born David, the man after God's own heart; and there also was born David's greater son, Jesus, who is yet to sit on David's throne.

20. "The Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me." As the women said, "Is this Naomi?" she replied, call me not Naomi (which signifies "pleasant,") but call me Mara (which signifies "bitter"), giving this as her own reason for the new name. Now in this she does not talk like a humble child of God, but manifests a rebellious spirit against the Lord and His dealings with her. Some one has said truly that she blames the Almighty when all He did was graciously to bring her home again, making Moab prove a Mara, lest she should die and be buried there.

21. "I went out full, and the Lord hath brought me home again empty." Now she speaks truly. Of her own accord she went out, and the Lord had to bring her home; the sheep wandered, the shepherd sought and found. However full we may be, if we wander away from God He will permit the devil soon to empty us, that we may be led to think of the Father's house and the abundance there; thus it was with the prodigal of Luke xv, and thus it ever will be with the child of God who wanders from the Father's house of bread. How long it took to empty the prodigal we are not told; it took ten years to empty Naomi; if any reader has wandered from the Father's love and plenty and is now undergoing the emptying process, why not return at once and receive the welcome that awaits you, lest the Lord in His wisdom still further testify against you. "He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men, but, though He cause grief, yet will He have compassion, according to the multitude of His mercies" (Lam. iii, 32, 33). When He does chasten it is for our profit, that we may be partakers of His holiness, and then are we able to say "it is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn Thy statutes" (Heb. xii, 10; Ps. cxix, 71).

22. "So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter-in-law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and they came to Bethlehem." That was ten thousand times better than out of Bethlehem to Moab; and, although Naomi comes back without husband or sons, the Lord overrules her wanderings to bring into great honor a Gentile woman, who became a bride of the kinsman redeemer, the mighty man of wealth.

THE SOLONS AT WORK.

Proceedings in the Senate and House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 12.—The senate adopted a resolution yesterday inquiring what were Geo. Hancock's expenses for entertaining the French officers at the Yorktown celebration and whether he had been reimbursed; also Frye's resolution for an inquiry into the affairs of Samoa. The tariff bill was then resumed and discussed at length, the net result of the day's work being the defeat of Harris' amendment reducing the duty on steel beams to 0.6 of a cent per pound; also of an amendment to reduce the duty on trace-chains to 2 cents a pound; and the adoption of an amendment offered by Vest to fix the duty on steel beams at 1 cent instead of 1.1 cents per pound. This latter was agreed to by the finance committee and adopted without division. A motion to admit cotton ties free was pending when the senate went into executive session, and soon after adjourned.

The house spent the day in committee of the whole on the direct tax bill, the debate was still pending when the house at 5:10 adjourned, no action of any kind having been taken.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 13.—The senate yesterday continued the consideration of the tariff bill, discussing civil service reform and other outside issues in connection therewith. The pending amendment was to admit cotton ties free, and after a long debate it was rejected by a strict party vote of yeas, 18; nays, 28. Riddleberger gave notice that he would move every morning to take up the British extradition treaty in open session. The senate adjourned at 5 p. m. with an amendment to the tariff bill pending to make the duty on cotton ties 35 per cent. ad valorem.

The house received the river and harbor bill from the committee, and non-concurred in the senate amendment to the agricultural department bill. Two reports were made on the California contested election, the majority favoring Sullivan, and the minority Felton. The direct tax bill occupied the remainder of the session. One amendment was adopted, providing for the ascertainment of the proper claimants to a share of the fund in South Carolina, and all others rejected, including that to refund the cotton tax. The bill was then passed—yeas, 178; nays, 96—and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 14.—Resolutions were adopted by the senate yesterday asking the executive departments for information regarding Alaska, and for a copy of the minutes of the proceedings of the Sioux Indian commission. The tariff bill was resumed, and the amendment to reduce the duty on cotton ties to 35 per cent. ad valorem was rejected—18 to 33. During the debate Riddleberger became turbulent because he was not permitted to interrupt proceedings with his resolution to consider the British extradition treaty in open session, and he was not quieted until the chairman threatened him with arrest. Later he offered a resolution written on a black page of the Congressional Record, and aimed at Ingalls, to the effect that at the first session after the holidays the senate will proceed to reorganization and elect new officers. A number of amendments to the tariff bill reducing the duties were rejected. A resolution was agreed to directing copies of the new electoral laws to be sent to the governors of the states. A bill for the admission of Idaho was introduced by Mitchell. The inter-state commerce committee was given leave to continue its investigations until December, 1889. After a brief executive session the senate adjourned until Monday.

In the house Glover was announced as chairman of the private land claims committee. A bill was introduced to retire John C. Fremont as a major general. The Oklahoma bill was then taken up and Payson offered an amendment making the land subject to the claims of soldiers the same as other lands are. This was opposed by Springer, Warner of Missouri, Weaver and Peters of Kansas, and pending action the house at 5 p. m. adjourned. During the session Butterworth offered a long preamble and resolutions authorizing the president to negotiate with Great Britain for the annexation to the United States of all or part of the British possessions on this continent.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 15.—A concurrent resolution for adjournment for the holidays from Dec. 21 to Jan. 7 was introduced in the house yesterday and appropriately referred. The remainder the day's session was occupied with an unprofitable debate on the Nicaragua canal bill. At 4:30 a recess was taken to 7:30, and at the night session the house tried to settle on a method of procedure for the consideration of private pensions. Nothing was done, however, and at 8:30 adjournment was taken until Monday.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 18.—A bill was reported favorably to the senate yesterday to establish a mint at Denver. Riddleberger addressed the senate on his resolution for a reorganization of the senate. He said its object was to have a change in presiding officers, and criticised Chairman Ingalls, who, he said, had been more frequently out of order than himself [Riddleberger]. He then wanted to withdraw the resolution, and to this Dawes objected, while Harris of Tennessee eulogized Ingalls as an impartial and efficient presiding officer, and moved to table the resolution. The chair heaped coals of fire on Riddleberger's head by deciding that he could withdraw his resolution, as it did not need unanimous consent to permit him to do so. The tariff debate was then resumed, but nothing new was said on the much debated subject. An amendment reducing the duty on car wheels was rejected. The house adjournment resolution was received and referred. The conference report retiring Gen. A. J. Smith as major was agreed to. Cullom introduced a bill to abolish special taxes on distilled spirits at places where the goods are delivered by the carrier to the vendee. A short executive session was then held and the senate adjourned.

The house adopted the joint resolution yesterday for a recess of congress from Dec. 21 to Jan. 7; made the senate bill for the admission of South Dakota the special order for today and until it is finally disposed of; passed a bill incorporating the American Historical association, and a bill appropriating $2,000 for the expenses of the Fort Gibson migration committee, and indulged in a season of filibustering, led by the enemies of the Oklahoma and Pacific railroad bills, during which, to consume time, the senate tariff bill was introduced and its reading in full insisted upon. Adjournment was reached at 4:15 p. m.

A Chicago Double Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Ed Bonner, a tinsmith, shot and instantly killed his mistress, Kittie Kent, alias Nellie Wilson, and then blew out his own brains in "The Twins" saloon on State street last night. Jealousy over the attentions the woman paid to other men was the cause of the murder and suicide.

Work of a Rascally Thief.

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 18.—Thirty-three head of live stock, 500 bushels of wheat, hay and farming utensils burned with the barn of Samuel Diffenbach in Little Britain township, this county, on Saturday night. A thief took a horse and fired the barn to cover his tracks.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

Indian Names in Wisconsin.

Our readers are aware that most of the names of places in this vicinity are derived from the Indian tongue, some of them having been altered somewhat for the sake of euphony, as, for instance, Peshtigo for Pe-shet-i-go. We interviewed our old friend Captain Powell, the other day, who is well along in years, and was born here, and is almost as familiar with the Indian language as the Indians themselves, and he gave us the following as the significations of some of the names of the places in this vicinity:

Suamico—The yellow sand.
Oconto—The place of the pickerel.
Peshtigo—Snapping turtle.
Menominee—Wild rice.
Menekaune—The place where the lodges are; literally, the village.
Escanaba—A flat rock.
Manitowoc—The dwelling of the spirit.
Kewaunee—The name of a kind of duck.

Thus it will be seen that the Indians named places after some peculiarity of the location; or, as in the case of Manitowoc, after some superstition. Most of the American names are utterly meaningless, as applied to the locality, and we like the Indian plan the best.

Take, for instance, Appleton, Seymour, New London, Preble, etc., which convey no idea whatever. Bellevue is better, but it is French, and is duplicated in other languages, as, for instance, Buena Vista, in Spanish. Fond du Lac is good and conveys an idea.

Oshkosh perpetuates the name of an Indian chief, and Marinette that of an Indian woman, and both are very good.—Green Bay Advocate.

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal churches for communion. Excellent for females, weakly persons and the aged.

ADOPTED IN HOSPITALS AS THE BEST FOR INVALIDS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This celebrated wine is the pure juice of the dead ripe grape, grown, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal hospitals and boards of health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalid may use it to advantage. It is particular beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that effect the weaker sex.

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Vineyard Grape preserved in its natural fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the excitement of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's Socialite Claret.

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry.

Is a wine of superior character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

Is a pure distillation of the grape, and stands unrivalled in this country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

A Duel with Outlaws.

Tragedy on the Line of the Illinois Central.

A TRAIN STOPPED BY ROBBERS,

After the Train Was Stopped the Conductor Called Upon the Passengers for Help, but Only One Man Responded and He Was Killed—The Robbers Secure $2,500—Miscellaneous Wickedness.

AIFO, Ill., Dec. 18.—The southern express car on train No. 2, due here at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, fell a victim to the breezy train robber at 9 o'clock Sunday night when two miles north of Duck Hill, on the Illinois Central, twelve miles south of Grenada, Miss. Express messenger W. H. Harris, in charge of the car, gives substantially the following facts: While the train was at Duck Hill station two men got aboard the locomotive unknown to the engineer, who pulled out of the station immediately after. But when he discovered the strangers he at once reversed his lever and stopped with the intention of putting them off, saying at the same time that it was against the rules of the company for any one to ride upon the engine. With threats and drawn revolvers the engineer was ordered to proceed and stop where he was told, which he promptly did, two miles from the station and near the same point where obstructions have twice been placed to wreck trains. The men ordered the train stopped and got off, taking the engineer along and making him walk back to the express-car with them. The sudden stoppage excited the curiosity of the express messenger, who had no sooner opened the side door of his car than he was covered by a huge horse pistol in the hands of one of the men, the engineer being placed in front to catch any stray shots which might come from the car.

One of the men jumped into the car and ordered the messenger to unlock his safe, which he promptly did. A large leather bag was then produced and with a revolver in each hand, holding the bag open at the same time, the robber ordered the messenger to put the money packages into it. The money amounted in all to a little over $2,500. While this important business was going on the conductor of the train, P. B. Wilkinson, taking in the situation, ran back to the rear car and asked for volunteers to fight the robbers, and met with no response, notwithstanding the passengers on board were in possession of three Winchester rifles. Running to the car in front, his bid for volunteers was promptly answered by Charles Hughes, brother of Train-Dispatcher Hughes, of Vicksburg, himself a conductor on a through train, en route to his home in Jackson, Tenn. He was accompanied by his two sisters. The two men, securing a Winchester rifle each, sallied forth to battle with the robbers, leaving three cars more or less occupied by men who feared to leave their shelter.

The two heavy men promptly opened fire on the robbers, who as promptly returned the shots with such rapidity as warranted the belief that the two men on the locomotive had confederates in ambush where the train was stopped, a fact later demonstrated when the assailants escaped, six men being counted. Poor Hughes caught his death wound in the melee, a bullet entering the lower part of the abdomen, ranging upwards, making its exit a few inches below the left armpit. The wounded man walked back to his car, dying twenty minutes later in the car seat.

One of the robbers as he ran into the timber was seen to fall down several times, warranting the belief that he was wounded. Conductor Wilkinson and his friend Hughes displayed a commendable degree of nerve, and will doubtless receive the substantial recognition of the railroad and express companies. The car as viewed here Sunday bore evidence of hard usage, many bullet holes being visible in the door and sides.

Harris, in explanation of his opening the car door, said that the sudden stopping of the train in such an out of the way place induced the belief that an accident had happened, and he opened the door unsuspectingly. Had he not done so it is probable the robbers would have been defeated, as rapid firing by the conductor and Hughes would have driven them away. The men were all disguised with a scarf mask, covering their faces from the eyes down, and none of them were recognized.

WHITE BLOOD IS SHED.

Desperate Mississippi Negroes Make Use of the Shot-Gun.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18.—A special to The Picayune from West Point, Miss., says: News reached here yesterday morning of a horrible tragedy enacted Sunday night at the village of Wahalak, Miss., forty miles south of West Point on the Mobile & Ohio railroad. Five white men were killed outright and six wounded, three mortally. The particulars of the shooting are given as follows: Some two months ago a white farmer living a few miles from Wahalak lost his gin house, together with eight or ten bales of cotton, by a fire which was evidently the work of incendiaries. Suspicion pointed to two negroes living in the vicinity, with whom the farmer had had some trouble. Sufficient evidence having been secured, an officer Sunday night attempted to arrest one of the negroes. The negro resisted arrest and succeeded in making his escape, after having brutally assaulted the officer. The whites in the neighborhood then organized to capture the negro, and proceeded toward the fellow's house with the intention of arresting him. Before reaching the house, however, they were fired upon from ambush by fifty well-armed negroes, and every white man in the party was shot down. The horror-stricken people have telegraphed for aid. Seventy-five armed men left Meridian, Miss., yesterday morning for the scene of the tragedy, and West Point will furnish more help.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 18.—2:30 a. m.—A special from Wahalak says that but one man was killed—a white man named Seth Cobb—while four were wounded, only one of whom was at all seriously hurt, the other three being but slightly scratched. The posse was not a legal body, and no warrant had been issued for the negro. There is little likelihood of further trouble.

THE BIRMINGHAM TRAGEDY.

Body of the Baby Victim of the Hawes Murders Found.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 17.—About 11 o'clock Saturday the officers who have been for a week searching for the body of little Irene Hawes, found it at the bottom of the lake, only a few feet from the spot where the body of Mrs. Hawes was found one week ago. It was weighted down with about four pounds of railroad iron, but bore no marks of violence. The finding of the body caused no excitement. No further attempt at lynching Hawes is anticipated. When told of the finding of his baby's body Hawes refused to talk.

A Bomb at Rockford, Ills.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Dec. 17.—Rev. Mead Holmes, who is a strong temperance member of the city council, found upon his doorstep Saturday morning an unexploded bomb. Upon investigation it was found to be filled with powder and iron clippings and the fuse was burned to the iron. Had it exploded it would have blown the whole side of the house to pieces. Mr. Holmes has been threatened by alleged "White-Caps" if he did not "let up" on the whisky interest, and many believe that interest responsible for the outrage.

Chicago Letter Box Rifflers Convicted.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—The jury in the case of Oberkampf and Mack, the letter box robbers, returned a verdict of guilty late Saturday afternoon. The prisoners were remanded for sentence, pending a motion for a new trial. This is the case of the robbery of letters last Summer by which the boxes in this city were rifled of thousands of letters containing money, checks, drafts, etc.

IN BEHALF OF BAUEREISEN.

The Defense Begins Presenting Testimony—Substance of the Evidence.

GENEVA, Ill., Dec. 14.—The state closed its case against Bauereisen yesterday and the defense began presenting their testimony. The first witness was Thomas A. Kyle, an engineer on the Burlington road twenty years beginning in 1868. He testified that he had attended all meetings of the brotherhood at Aurora during the strike; that Bauereisen had never in open meeting made the statement that the "Q" was getting the best of the strikers; that he never said dynamite could be used with good effect; that such talk would not be tolerated for a moment; and that he had never at any time heard Bauereisen make mention of "stuff," or force, or dynamite.

John E. Bevier and Peter Hartz, of the drug firm of Bevier & Hartz, of Aurora, both testified that Bauereisen had never bought quantities, large or small, of vitriol, ammonia, or copperas. They positively remembered that they had not sold him such stuff during the month of last April.

GENEVA, Ills., Dec. 15.—Locomotive Engineers John White, William M. Wilson, M. J. Snover, Wilbur Spaulding, A. E. Coon, H. R. Sperry, Henry Gass, Charles H. Phillips, Thomas Robinson, Morgan Hooker, Frank Emerson, Charles De Gerald, Frank Lang and Cyrus K. Robinson, who used to work for the Burlington company, all testified yesterday in the Bauereisen trial that he never said in their hearing that the "Q" strike was a failure, or that dynamite should be used. This contradicts Bowles' testimony, and the cross-examination did not shake it. Bowles was also contradicted by Druggist Hertz, who swore that Bauereisen had not purchased vitriol or ammonia at his store.

AN IOWA RAILWAY LAW INVALID.

The "Sweney Law" Declared Unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 15.—A case involving the question of the constitutionality of what is known as the Sweney bill passed by the legislature of 1886, requiring a foreign corporation doing business in Iowa to incorporate under the laws of the state, was decided by the supreme court yesterday. It was aimed at the trunk line railways in order to bring them under the jurisdiction of the state courts. A penalty was to be enforced against any officer or agent of a corporation who disregarded the law. Goodell, agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road at Burlington, was arrested by Sheriff Krechbaum. The case went to the state supreme court, which body sustained the validity of the law. The decision yesterday reverses that opinion and declares the law unconstitutional. A decision covering the same point had previous been rendered by the Federal court in the case of Wingate, plaintiff in error, vs. Painter, sheriff of Polk county. Wingate was the "Q" agent at Des Moines, and was arrested as Goodell was at Burlington.

Mrs. Anarchist Parsons at Home.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Mrs. Lucy Parsons, widow of the Anarchist who was hung with Spies and others, arrived home yesterday from a trip to Europe. She was not met at the station by her friends, nor was there any demonstration whatever, the probability being that the "reds" did not care to run "afoul" of the police. Mrs. Parsons went immediately to her home and her children, who were soon happy over Christmas gifts from across the sea. To a reporter Mrs. Parsons said in reference to the report that she was to marry a European Socialist, that she would not marry the best man living, with the memory of her murdered husband before her, and that her life would be devoted to agitation, organization, and revolution, the latter of which was sure to come.

Work of a Bursting Steampipe.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 18.—The bursting of a steampipe in the engine-room of the Cincinnati Spring works, at Eighth and Depot streets, caused a horrible accident about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Several employes were close by, and three were badly and one fatally scalded. Louis Rukelhauser, the fireman, aged 25, was so badly scalded that he only lived a few minutes. Henry Demer, aged 24, living at Lytle street, was badly bruised about the face and arms.

Fatal Train Collision.

WABASHA, Minn., Dec. 14.—A collision occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad yesterday morning between a passenger train going west, and a freight train. Brooks, head brakeman on the freight train, was killed; Conductor Mead, of the passenger train, was fatally wounded. The engineer of the freight was badly bruised. The freight was running on the passenger train's time.

A Michigan Claim Rejected.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 18.—The secretary of the interior Monday rejected the claim of the state of the Michigan to a tract of land in the upper peninsula. Some 1,300 acres are directly involved, while more than 1,000,000 acres are indirected affected.

The finding of an outfit of woman's apparel on the river bank at Columbus, Ind., leads to the belief that there has been a suicide or murder, but no woman is reported missing.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

THE question has often been asked, "to what does The Century owe its great circulation?" The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that "it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department." In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue throughout the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln history and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." As is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters. A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons. George W. Cable will write "Strange, True Stories of Louisiana." There will be novelettes and short stories by leading writers, occasional articles on war subjects (supplemental to the famous "War Papers" by General Grant and others, which have been appearing in The Century), etc., etc.

The Century costs four dollars a year, and it is published by The Century Co., of New York, who will send a copy of the full prospectus to any one on request.

FOR CHILDREN OF ALL AGES.

St. Nicholas for 1889.

PEOPLE who have the idea that St. Nicholas Magazine is only for little children should look over the prospectus of that magazine for 1889, and they will discover that it is for children of all ages, "from five to eighty-five," as some one recently said of it. Indeed, while St. Nicholas is designed for girls and boys, it might almost be called a "family magazine," for the grown-up members of a household will find much to interest them in every number.

The editor, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, calls the next volume an "all-round-the-world year," because it is to contain so many illustrated papers about the world in general—not dry geographical papers, but stories and sketches and tales of travel and adventure by land and sea—and all illustrated by the best artists. The features will include a serial story, "How We Made the Farthest North," by Gen. A. W. Greely, the well-known commander of the Greely Expedition; a serial about Canada, by Mrs. Catherwood, who is writing a serial story for The Century this year; "Indians of the Amazon," by Mrs. Frank R. Stockton. There are many papers about Europe, including a Christmas story of life in Norway, by H. H. Boyesen; articles on Holland and the Dutch, by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge; "The Queen's Navy," by Lieut. F. Harrison Smith, R. N., with illustrations of many of England's finest war ships; "The Winchester School," illustrated by Joseph Pennell; "English Railway Trains," by Wm. H. Rideing, etc., etc. The French papers include "Ferdinand de Lesseps and his two Ship Canals," and there are several interesting contributions on German, Italian and Russian subjects.

Under "Asia," comes "Boys and Girls in China," by Yan Phou Lee (a recent graduate of Yale); "Home Life in the East," by Mrs. Holman Hunt, and a number of papers about Japan. Under "Africa" there is a sketch of Henry M. Stanley, by Noah Brooks, and several stories about Egypt. Australia is not forgotten, nor the islands of the sea, and there are even to be stories of under the sea.

Of course the bulk of the contents will relate to American subjects, as usual. Mrs. Burnett, the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," contributes a story of New York called "Little Saint Elizabeth;" there will be papers describing how the government offices are conducted, papers about athletics, amateur photography, etc. The full prospectus will be sent to any one who wishes to see it by the publishers, The Century Co., of New York.

The Graphic recently said of St. Nicholas, "the family without it is only half blessed."

ESTATE OF RICHARD ADAMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 5th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Richard Adams, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Norman H. Buckley, alleging among other things, the death of said Richard Adams and that some of the heirs-at-law of said deceased are resident of Great Britain a foreign country, and praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner the executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person and notice of the pendency of and the day appointed for the hearing of such application having this day been given to the Consul of such foreign nation in the City of New York as required by the statute in such case made and provided; a letter press copy of such notice is now on file in this court.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 14th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

FRAGMENTS.

THE NEW YEAR.

What is this fair New Year?
A flower that dropt from the bier
Where the Old Year lay, ere Time bore him away
To the Ages' tomb—with a tear.
—Unidentified.

IN OLDE ENGLAND.

This is Newe Yeare's day,
whereon to every friend
They costly presents in do bring and New Yeare's gifts do sende;
These giftes the husband gives his wife,
and father eke his childe,
And maister on his men bestowes
the like with favour milde. —Old Song.

WHERE IT BEGINS.

Oh, not when winter comes, through fields of snow,
With half worn shoes the new born year begins;
But where the streams of life unfettered flow,
And blossoms o'er the sunlit meadows blow
The fragrant hope that straight our credence wins.
—Philip O'Sullivan.

HIS GOOD LUCK.

A NEW YEAR'S STORY WITH THE SECRET OF SUCCESS IN IT

WE HAD been talking about the turn of fortune which comes to some people with the New Year. Dr. Mason, the oldest man in the room, said:

I will tell you a story worth writing and printing. I see that it is now the fashionable thing for men and women who have made a little stir in the world to tell all about the books which influenced them and the incidents which turned them into the highways which led to fortune or to fame. Well, I am not famous, thank heaven, but perhaps the experiences of a man who has escaped fame may not be without use to somebody.

I have always believed in luck. I don't attempt to justify my belief. I know that I can't hold my ground in argument against those who say there is no such thing. I only know that I believe in it. The superstition was born in me. There is a proverb in the Castilian tongue which says: "He who expects good luck will surely get it." I read that before I was 12 years old, and at once put faith in it. It confirmed the hope within me, that the future held something exceptionally good for me. Perhaps each one of us has that feeling, but not everybody evolves it into a faith and regularly lives by it. I did.

I had a dreary childhood, a difficult youth and a struggling early manhood. That proverb helped me to go through everything with courage. Usually I hated proverbs. My father had a stock of very disagreeable ones which he showered upon me at all seasons and hours. "They who know nothing fear nothing," "Birds that fly high light low," and others of equally discouraging power were ever on the end of his tongue. But the proverb that promised good luck simply because one expected it was both balm and inspiration to me.

When playing with other boys and trouble of any kind was imminent I always took the most cheerful ground, and assured them that everything would turn out all right. And I was terribly in earnest, too. I felt that all would go well somehow. The result was that every one took hope and met difficulty and danger as his master, not his victim. The boys soon learned to depend upon me for strength and encouragement, and they stuck to me with romantic devotion. I learned then the wonderful influence one mind can have over others when it recognizes no such thing as fear. Call it superstition, foolishness, what you will; but my faith in that proverb was something marvelous. I will admit, however, that I am of a credulous nature. When I was young I believed every assertion I ever heard or read. I was not a questioner or doubter. If a man asserted something I believed him because I supposed that he knew, else he would not assert. It never occurred to me that he might lie. Being honest myself I believed in the honesty of others.

I lived in the country and I longed to live in the city. My parents were well to do; but it was the custom of that locality to live simply and bring the children up to work. Mental accomplishments did not take high rank in the circle in which I moved for the first fifteen years of my life. I wanted a better education than I was ever likely to get. Somehow I fancied that I would get it, though I could not see how. The holidays always carry me back in memory to some of the main events of my life. I believe that fortune has a habit of making extraordinary changes when the Old Year goes out and the new one comes. At least it has done so more than once in my case; and that is why I now tell this story to you younger people, who naturally think of new leaves of many kinds in connection with the New Year.

I was only 15 years old when one bitter winter I took a contract to chop a large quantity of cord wood. It was one of the few ways boys had in that locality of earning a little money. It seems like a rough way to me now; but we did not think so then. I was up at 5 o'clock in the morning, and by 6 had had my breakfast, and was in the woods sending the echo of my strokes far over the hills. I was working for a purpose. The winter's chopping would give me money enough to start in a small business upon which I had set my heart. It was nothing less than to buy out a tin shop at "The Corners," the nearest village. In imagination I saw myself a "store keeper," at once a person of dignity in the community and highly satisfactory to himself. I soared even higher than that. I saw myself living in a fine house, growing elderly, pompous and fat, and in all probability president of a bank, like Judge Johnson, for whom I turned off the sidewalk every time I met him at "The Corners," as every other youth did, because he was so rich and important.

New Year's day found me in the woods, chopping away as usual. Holidays were not observed in that community, and festivities were as rare as angels' visits. An extra piece of pie in my lunch pail and a bit of some thing unusual for supper were all that marked the day from all the other crisp, cold winter days. But I thought of its being New Year's, and dreamed my dreams while I made the ax hum. The luck I expected out of that winter's work I could scarcely put in a small kingdom. While I was dwelling upon this interesting theme something snapped far above my head, there was a crash, some blinding flashes of light, and then—I was nowhere, at least consciously.

A heavy limb of an old dead tree had broken and fallen upon me. When I "came to" I found myself hurt and somewhat frozen. I dragged myself home only to take to my bed for the remainder of the winter. Such a winter as it was—so bitter and hopeless that at times I almost lost faith in my good luck. I couldn't finish my contract of wood chopping, and so the tin store vanished.

In the spring I was able to be about once more; but thin, pale, weak, and with a bad limp. The doctors said I would never be strong again. This was terrible news to me. Alas! for the good luck I had expected. And yet it came, though not as I had planned. It has a way of doing that, I have noticed.

In the early spring Uncle Zeph came to see us. He was a kind hearted, unselfish man, and he took an interest in me.

"Why, the boy isn't able to do hard work. He must be sent to school and to college," he said, after he thoroughly understood the situation. But my father winced and said nothing. Education was but little respected in those parts.

SENDING THE ECHOES OF MY STROKES.

"What else can be done with him?" asked my persistent uncle. "The boy has a good head. There's something in him. Give him a chance. You surely wouldn't force him to live his life without resources and tools with which to aid himself. It's a shame."

At last it was settled that I was to receive a thorough collegiate education, Uncle Zeph, who was childless, paying half the cost of it. Here was a piece of luck, indeed; better even than anything I had expected. It quite renewed my faith in my only proverb. And it had all come out of what I had deemed a stroke of the hardest kind of luck. Take courage, then, all of you, and don't think because you can't see light ahead of you that there is no light.

Well, I was graduated at last from one of the best colleges. After that I took a medical course and went to what was then considered the far west, Indiana, to practice. Patients came slowly, but I expected good luck, as I had learned to do, and had patience, if no patients.

I was just beginning to be a little known when I fell in love. The young lady who had effected this state of my emotions was Miss Alma Adams. She was very handsome. She had the dark eyes I am so fond of, and a placid, unemotional manner that I greatly admired. She was not rich, and I was rather glad of it, because I wanted to win her and to do everything for her myself. I think a man who is a man ought to feel that way. I was very much in love with her, and I thought that she felt more than kindly to me. But I wasn't sure. She was a queer girl. One could never tell of what she was thinking. I put off learning the actual state of her heart until I saw my way clear to a decent practice. In short, till I got some money in my purse.

Miss Adams' parents had in the family a niece about Alma's age, a plain little body, who was somewhat deaf and, therefore, something of a bore to a selfish young fool like me, who had only eyes and ears for the girl he adored. But, Laura, this cousin, was good if she was exceedingly plain, and the girls were very fond of each other.

At last my unspoken love became almost a burden. I thought of but little else than Alma. Rivals, I had, to be sure, but none whom I really feared. Young Wilcox, son of the richest man in the growing young town, hung around her constantly; and George Carey, a middle aged swell from "the east," was also devoted to her. But I was not afraid.

One evening as I parted from her my manner betrayed more tenderness than I had meant to express, though not more than I felt. In thinking of it afterwards I was happy in remembering that Alma had not seemed surprised or annoyed at my expression of feeling. "And she must have understood," I said to myself. As I walked to my lodgings I determined to tell her outright that I loved her, and ask her to marry me the very next month. The next day I was called away to the bedside of my dying father, and did not return for two months. Then I was a comparatively rich man, with my share of his estate. That is, rich for that time, not for the present.

I returned to Crestfield on New Year's day. I lost no time in going to see Alma. Visions of this moment of happiness had filled my mind for days. I met Laura just coming out of the house. Full of childish delight at being once more so near the little home circle which held my happiness, I rushed up to her and held out both my hands, saying: "I am so glad to see you. I shall be grateful if you are half as glad to see me."

"DO YOU REALLY MEAN IT, DR. MASON?"

Her eyes opened wide, with a look that was part pleasure and part astonishment, blended with deprecation. She had the appealing eyes which so often belong to the young who are afflicted with deafness. Something in her look told me that she had not really understood my words, but was honestly glad to see me. So I rattled on telling her how much I had thought of all of them while I had been away, still holding both her hands in a hearty clasp.

"I wish you a Happy New Year and many Happy New Years," I said finally. "Your welcome makes me very, very happy. Now, let us go and find Alma."

"Do you really mean it, Dr. Mason?" and she looked up at me with a strange, yearning expression on her plain face, which was flushing with red, like an early morning sky.

"Mean it! Mean it every word, with all my heart," and I held her hands tighter than ever in my enthusiasm. "Now let us find Alma, for whom I have what I hope may be glad tidings."

She smiled, and her smile was very sweet, although she was so plain. I noticed, too, that her eyes had a strange light in them which made them resemble the eyes we sometimes see in dreams, which speak so much more meaningly than do those we see in our waking hours. This light was the light of joy and nothing else. One does not see it often in woman's eyes. Sometimes only once in a life time.

She slipped her arm in mine and we walked into the house down the wide, old fashioned hall to the sitting room.

"Alma, dear," said Laura, as we opened the door and the tall, dark eyed goddess of my heart arose and came towards us, "Dr. Mason says I have made him very happy, and he wants to tell you of it at once, and so do I."

The goddess glanced at both of us, a faint pink color coming into her white cheek, and smiled at us as she would have smiled at two children, while I was longing to take her in my arms and tell her that I adored her. Instead of greeting me, or giving me a chance to greet her, she bent and kissed Laura, and then turned to me, saying:

"You have won the sweetest heart in the world, Dr. Mason. I congratulate you. I know that you will return an equal amount of good wishes when I tell you that I have promised to marry Mr. Carey. We will be married next month and go to New York to live at once."

I stood, as the novelists say, "rooted to the spot." The whole scene seemed unreal. I, who a few moments before was full of joyful anticipation, now found myself engaged to marry a woman whom I did not love, and hearing the woman I did love tell me that she was soon to marry one of my rivals. At first I could not understand what Alma meant. I thought that she and Laura were enjoying some joke too obscure for me. At last the beaming look in Laura's eyes enlightened me. She, being somewhat deaf, had mistaken my warm greeting for a declaration of love, and responded affirmatively.

With Laura's arm still within mine I walked to a sofa and sat down, she by my side. I had not uttered a word since I met Alma. Speech had utterly forsaken me. And, indeed, what could I say? Could I tell the trusting creature by my side that it was all a mistake; that she had misunderstood me; that I did not love her; that I loved her beautiful cousin? No; I was too shocked and dazed to do anything but sit there in silence, with the perspiration standing in cold drops on my face and my eyes staring vacantly ahead of me. I think I could have spoken had it not been that Alma stood before me looking placid and even happy in telling of her engagement to Mr. Carey. I accepted the situation in desperation. The whole face of life had been suddenly changed for me and I saw nothing but gloom ahead.

I thought myself a strong man, but is it any wonder that I wept like any child on my pillow that night? What a New Year's that was! Whither had my expected good luck gone?

I put the best possible face on my misery and went on in the dismal path fate had marked out for me. Since I could not have Alma, what did it matter whom I married? Ugly little Laura would do as well as any woman. It was fortunate that she expected no extraordinary demonstration of affection from me. Truly I could not have given it, my heart seemed frozen or dead. Yet I could not help seeing that she seemed quietly happy. Her plain face actually began to glow with new life, and there were times when she looked almost pretty. It occurred to me that I might forget my own misery by trying to make her happy. The idea was a spark from the mind of infinite love, for it brought a kind of peace to my sick soul.

I threw myself into the role of promised husband with all the energy I possessed. I suggested that we should be married on the same day that was fixed for the wedding of Alma to Mr. Carey. I can assure you that in those weeks I demonstrated, to myself at least, that I had something of the heroic in my nature.

Well, we were married. Alma and her husband went away, and Laura and I "went to housekeeping," as they say of newly married folk. I did my best to give Laura no cause to suspect that I was unhappy. The quiet happiness which shone day after day in her face became a joy to me. It even rebuked me, too. It was plain that she loved me devotedly; and she was so unselfish in her love, so wise, so sensible that I soon found myself admiring her. In the wish to do everything possible for her in order to recompense her for the love I did not have to give her, I thought of trying to remedy her defective hearing. We went to Philadelphia for that purpose. The best aurist in the city made an examination and at once assured us that the trouble was caused by a slight obstruction which would yield readily to simple treatment. In two months Laura returned perfectly cured.

Then I began to notice what a very bright woman my wife was, and she seemed to grow sunnier and sweeter every hour. In less than six months I loved her a thousand times more, it seemed to me, than I had ever loved Alma. When I began to realize I blessed Fate over and over again for giving me my own, even through such incomprehensible ways. "I might have known it," I said to myself. "I always expected to have happiness in my home, and I might have been sure of it, although the light refused to shine for awhile."

At the end of a year I was so infatuated with my lovely little wife that I told her the story of how I came to marry her. That she regarded as the best possible proof of my love for her. Then she confessed to me that she had loved me almost from the hour when she first saw me, but had imagined that I cared for Alma. Yet when I met her on that New Year's morning with such extraordinary cordiality her heart rather than her reason caused the misunderstanding. Yet she declares to this day that what she seemed to hear was, "I love you. Come and let me make you happy all the days of my life." Perhaps my wiser self spoke to her in some silent, heartward way and I knew it not. At all events I am grateful that she thought she heard these words if I didn't say them.

I did not see Alma for five years. Then I wondered how I ever could have loved her. She was still beautiful, of course; but devoted to a life of fashion and show, and was not at all the woman I had imagined she would be. She never knew how she had figured in the romance of my life.

You see, I always expected good luck and always got it, but not always in the way I had expected. After my blundering marriage turned out so well I never doubted my Spanish proverb again. It has never failed me throughout my life, and I will be eighty in December. If I were to preach a sermon to young people every day in the week, I think the concluding sentence would always be: "Expect good luck and you will get it." If I could send a New Year's message to every soul on the earth it would be to expect the good. Put it on your New Year's cards. Write it in your letters. Tell it to the little people. Keep it ever in mind. Believe in it and live by it. The true philosophy of life is in it. "Expect good luck and you will get it."

GERTRUDE GARRISON.

The year is dead! Oh, no! oh, no!
The year still lives! oh, ho! oh, ho!
The rain and wind have ceased, and so
Long life, New Year, to you!
All sounds are hushed, above, below;
Soft on the pane the snow! the snow!
A winding sheet that husheth all
In lowly hut or lordly hall—
A winding sheet for the Old Year—No!
A mantle for the New!

GOT THE BEST OF THE DOCTOR.

W. F. Beyer, Garretsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessant cough, when I invested my dollar in a bottle of your Papillon Catarrh Cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

What Two Good Old Conservative Moors Thought of Them.

We were much amused at watching a couple of eminently respectable old Moorish gentlemen who stood in picturesque attitudes, as if waiting for some painter to commit them to canvas, at a busy corner near the Archbishop's palace in Algiers.

As they chatted and attitudinized a Mohammedan lady of the better class went tripping saucily by, clad at first sight to all outward seeming as the followers of the Prophet ought ever to clothe themselves. But the good old Moors, sniffing innovation in the very sweep of her walk, gazed down with mingled amusement and contempt at the hussy's feet.

My eyes followed their glance instinctively, and in a moment I saw what had attracted their attention. That wretched innovator's nether extremities were positively incased in neat Parisian high-heeled bottines, above whose bronzed top, between the shoe itself and the baggy Turkish trousers that encased her limbs, one could just catch a glimpse of an exceedingly Frankish-looking crimson silk stocking.

I don't understand colloquial Arabic, at least when rapidly and hotly delivered, but I know exactly what those two good conservative old Moors were saying that moment.

One of them looked up at the other and remarked:

"Well, I declare, did you ever see anything like that in your life now?"

And his neighbor answered him, in very choice Arabic:

"You may say so, indeed! with their heels and their hairpins! I wonder what on earth the women are coming to!"—Cornhill Magazine.

INNOCENCE AT PRAYER.

A Change in the Form Necessitated by the Grown-up Sister.

The little girl had been taught to pray for all the family, and she had a list of blessings that was much longer than the usual prayer.

It was "God bless papa, and God bless mamma, and God bless Aunt Mary, and God bless Uncle George," and so on. She had got it all so perfect that nobody paid much attention to the names she put in.

The grown-up sister happened to come into the nursery while she was saying her prayers, and that seemed to recall the child to a mistake she had made. She stopped a moment and then said:

"Please, God, I made a mistake. Don't bless George Smith, 'cos Kitty went to the theatre to-night with Mr. Simpson, and I guess he's her new beau. God bless Mr. Simpson."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Doing the Square Thing.

He was a rising young lawyer and had been given the authority to perform the marriage ceremony.

The first couple that came to be married arrived after he had left his office for the evening. Nothing deterred, the would-be bridegroom hunted him out and brought him back, and the ceremony was performed.

The young couple expressed the desire for a nice marriage certificate. Feeling confident that the newly made bridegroom would be delighted to squander his last farthing on so propitious an occasion the young disciple of Blackstone sallied forth to a book store and there bought a gilt-edged certificate, paying $1 therefor.

The bridegroom beamed with gratitude and remarked as he drew forth his pocketbook and handed him $1:

"I'll do the square thing by ye, boss."

Blonde and Brunette.

What is a blonde and what is a brunette, and what is she who is neither of these? Definitions of the words I can find in a dictionary—they do not cover the ground.

A woman with black or dark brown hair and eyes and a dark complexion is a brunette. But here is one with those eyes and hair and a very light complexion; she is not a pure brunette—what is she? A girl with light hair and eyes and a dark complexion is not a blonde—what is the name for her? What is she whose hair is almost black, complexion dark, but light gray eyes?

(By "complexion" is meant the color of the skin of the face.)—Correspondent of Science.

How the Economists Live.

In the quaint Pennsylvania community of Economy every inhabitant is compelled to rigidly conform to somewhat exacting rules.

Every one is required to attend church twice every Sunday and hear two sermons from Father Henrici.

Any one found out of bed after 9 o'clock at night is immediately banished from the town, and all are required to rise at that poetic and lyric hour, "5 o'clock in the morning."

In addition to three of the squarest possible of square meals daily, a free lunch is served to the whole community at 9 o'clock every morning and at 2 o'clock every afternoon, and at each of those hours a pint of wine is meted out to every man, woman and child.—Boston Journal.

Almost Too Cautious.

"Dot vos no right to trifle mit people's lives," he said to the elevator boy; "vat if dot rope should break?"

"There is a safety-rope," politely explained the boy, "in case one should break."

"Ya, but vat if dot safety rope should break?"

"Well, even then the elevator wouldn't fall. There is a break that holds it."

"Ya, dot vas trifling mit people's lives. Vat if dot brake should give way?"

The boy eyed him with disfavor.

"Dutchy," he said, "you make me tired."

Report from the Family.

"What became of that trumpet Wigwug sent up to little Tommy, Christmas?" queried McPelter of his wife the other evening.

"Oh, I've put it away; I don't want him to destroy it before he's old enough to appreciate it."

"Good heavens, Helen! let the baby have it—let him smash it before he learns to blow it!"

Amiable Either Way.

"Charles, I hear you are going to marry Miss Softly. Charming woman! Let me congratulate you on your good taste."

"Ah, yes, but—the fact is, I have broken off the match and I'm not going to marry any one."

"Then let me congratulate you on your good sense."

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

THE WEEK'S PROCEEDINGS IN THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Bills and Resolutions Introduced by the Lawmakers, and Action Thereon—A Summarized Account of the Work of the National Solons in the Senate and House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 15.—Two bills were introduced in the senate yesterday for the suppression of trusts, one by Reagan and one by Sherman. Both were referred to the finance committee. A bill was introduced requiring the crews of American vessels of all kinds to be three-fourths American citizens. The fisheries treaty was then resumed, and defended by Morgan, who did not conclude his speech. Three vetoes of pension bills were received, as well as a veto of a joint resolution providing for printing additional copies of the United States map of 1888. A secret session was held and the senate adjourned.

The house concurred in the senate amendments to the bill providing for the erection of a marine hospital at Evansville, Ind. The senate bill to regulate the telegraph lines was referred to the commerce committee. In committee the fortifications bill was taken up, but Townshend of Illinois objected, and the committee rose. An attempt was made to order this bill taken up, but although the roll call showed a bare quorum, the votes on the motion were all short. After a short time spent in this filibustering the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 16.—Edmunds offered a resolution in the senate yesterday for an inquiry as to whether any white people lost money by the failure of the Freedman's bank, and how much. A resolution was passed asking the treasury for a statement of the amounts of deposits in national banks on the 1st instant, and amounts and descriptions of securities pledged for repayment of such deposits. A bill was passed for the relief of persons who have paid $2.50 per acre for lands since reduced to $1.25. The fisheries treaty then came up, and Morgan, Teller, Chandler, George and Vest debated it for a time. It was finally ordered that the vote thereon should be taken at noon to-day. A political debate regarding Gen. Harrison's position on the Chinese occupied most of the remainder of the session, but just before adjournment the conference report on the army appropriation was presented, and ordered printed.

The first vote in the house showed no quorum present. In committee of the whole the fortifications bill was taken up and debated all day. The point of order against the proposition to establish a gun factory at Watervliet arsenal was withdrawn, and the bill, substantially as it was first taken up, was reported to the house. The house then adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug 17.—The senate began yesterday with a debate on the safety of electricity as a motor for street cars, but did not decide the matter. It came up in some District business. The vote was then taken on Morgan's resolution to postpone the fisheries treaty until December, and it was defeated by a strict party vote—24 to 2. The resolution looking to the payment of the losses of white depositors in the Freedmen's bank was debated, but no action taken. Reagan criticised Blaine's Portland speech in regard to "trusts," and Blair said Reagan's criticism was based on the extract, and he had the full speech read by the clerk. The conference report on the army appropriation bill was concurred in, and the house fortifications bill presented and referred. The fisheries treaty was then taken up by sections, but the first section was not more than begun when Frye asked that the final voting on the treaty be begun on Tuesday next. Morgan said his side would take that proposition under advisement, and the senate adjourned.

The house passed the fortifications bill. Morrill wanted Aug. 29 and 30 set apart for pension legislation, but a vote showed no quorum, and the resolution went over. The resolution for another inquiry into the public printer's office was reported adversely and tabled. The point of no quorum was made against considering the Oklahoma bill, as also against that of the deficiency bill. Weaver moved to revoke all leaves of absence, but the motion was tabled. Lyman said he would raise the point of no quorum against all legislation until days were fixed for pension legislation, and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 18.—The senate passed a resolution yesterday instructing the District committee to require the District commissioners to revoke the permits given for overhead wires for electric motors on street railways in this city. A bill was passed prohibiting the mailing of obscene or libelous matter in transparent envelopes and display coverings. The fisheries treaty was taken up, and Morgan spoke for three hours in favor of ratification. It was ordered that the final vote be taken at noon on Tuesday next. The senate then adjourned until Monday.

Filibustering tactics on the part of members who wanted general pension legislation, and others who desired to take up the general deficiency bill, prevented the house from doing any business at all. On call of the roll there was a quorum, but on a vote no quorum appeared, and the house adjourned at 3:30 p. m.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 20.—McCreary in the house Saturday asked immediate consideration of the senate bill to carry out the new Chinese treaty, with an amendment repealing former acts. The session occupied the whole day, a feature being an attack by Bynum on Gen. Harrison's Chinese record and a defense of the same by Owen, both of Indiana. Pending debate the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 21.—The senate did little business yesterday—none of any interest—except to debate the fisheries treaty. Speeches were made by Morgan and Gray in favor of ratification, and by Hoar and Evarts for rejection. Morgan took the floor again at 5:30 and spoke half an hour in closing the debate, leaving him half an hour more to-day, when the vote will be taken. The senate adjourned at 6 p. m.

Breckinridge of Arkansas introduced a resolution in the house to reduce the duties on cotton bagging, cottonseed oil, coal oil, alcohol and sugar. Anderson of Iowa introduced a bill to define "trusts," and punish the perpetrators thereof. A motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill to detail army officers to colleges was defeated by the absence of a quorum, and the Chinese treaty bill was taken up, and after a good deal of political debate passed. The house then adjourned.

An Epidemic of Drownings.

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—There were many boating and bathing fatalities near here yesterday. At South Boston Joseph Hines, aged 19, while bathing, was drowned. At Taunton, Patrick Clark, aged 35, was drowned. At Fall River, Charles Brezelle, aged 16, was drowned while bathing. At Lowell, Robert Richardson was seized with cramps and was drowned. At Worcester, Francis C. Kittner, aged 8, fell from a boat in Lake Quinsigamond and perished. His mother has lost her reason in consequence of his death. At Lawrence, William J. Davers, aged 20, a hair dresser of Haverhill, tipped from a canoe and was drowned in the Merrimack.

"WALKING EGYPT."

A Singular New Year Custom Among the Negroes of the South.

IF the old slave customs of the southern states, now that the negroes have been free for nearly a quarter of a century, many are obsolete. The "old sperrituals," as the aged colored Christians call their peculiar hymns, are either given up entirely or modernized and refined till they are barely recognizable. But as the old goes and the new takes its place, we can still see—and it is a "persistence of type" worth the attention of philosophers—that the genius of the original African is still there. The song may be an adaptation from Watts' Hymns; but all the same it is an Africanized Watts.

When a traveler or man of science attends a "colored revival" in the back districts of the gulf states and hears this roaring chorus from one thousand throats—

I see St. Petah a standin' in the do',
Dip in the Golden Sea!
An' all my frien's what went befo',
Dip in the Golden Sea!
O, dip me, bathe me, sistahs, you:
O, brothers, won't you help me through?
We'll all ride behind the milk white steeds—
An' dip in the Golden Sea.

he perceives at once that this is African, not Saxon, imagery. And by the eye of scientific faith he can look back 300 years to the time when the ancestors of these people, under the palm or on the sandy shore, sang and rioted in praise of Bennamucka or Mumbo Jumbo.

The negroes have also had one experience common to all freed people. At first there was a violent reaction against everything that belonged to slave times; they carefully discarded the most trifling customs which might serve to imply a slave origin. By and by, when their freedom was an assured thing and taken as a matter of course, there was a counter reaction; they took up the old songs and customs, but gave them a tone that implied a sense of deliverance. Thus, "Roll, Jordan, roll," became an emancipation song, and "Old Nicodemus" was completely transformed. And by a similar evolution one phase of the old "Juba dance" became "Walking Egypt." This is, in plain English, only a mildly religionized form of the walking dance or dancing walk which the Africans, like all heathen people, have always had. The Indians' "corn dance" and "sun dance" are but variations of the same thing.

But "Walking Egypt," as it now is, dates from emancipation, and is performed on New Year's eve—that is, when they "watch the old year out and the new year in." One description, by a white lady who saw it from the gallery of a Georgia church, is as follows:

"The leader took his place on the floor and began the wild, half barbaric chant; then one by one, as the excitement grew, the others followed. Soon the whole line was in a tremor of excitement, and shouts and improvised lines like these:

Who's dat yondah dressed in black?
Oh, it's an angel dressed in black.

"The walk is by a slight forward jerk of the foot. As the walkers warmed to their work and grew wilder in their movements it was easy to see why the better educated colored people are opposed to the walk; for the men and women took most abandoned attitudes. The scene recalled pictures of the orgies of 'hashish' maddened fanatics. The walk went on for hours, up one aisle and down the other, new ones taking the place of those who dropped out exhausted; and at daylight several of the participators were down on their knees, still crawling around the church."

The "Egypt" part of it is an evident reference to the "Walk" of the Israelites out of bondage, for that is a parallel case in the mind of every freedman. But in prosaic fact the "walk" is only one of the thousand ways in which undeveloped people mingle the religious manifestations with the social, the musical and finally the voluptuous. And, of course, as the excitement increases the first element yields to the second and both to the last. In short, the walk is but the survival of some old African fetich worship, and is therefore possible only among the undiluted blacks of the most ignorant class. It is simple matter of truth and justice to add that no freed people in history have ever progressed faster than the negroes; and if they maintain their present rate of development, another generation will see the last of "Walking Egypt."

A Siamese New Year.

All Siamese birthdays are celebrated at New Year's, and at this time the curious custom of "hair cutting" is observed. When a boy reaches the age of 11 or 15, and a girl that of 9 or 13, they are considered no longer children. Up to this time a tuft of hair is allowed to grow just above the forehead, and is always dressed with great care. It is twisted into a graceful knot and held together with a long gold or jeweled pin. At the base of this knot is worn a wreath of fragrant white flowers. The ceremonies of hair cutting often last five or six days. It is the "coming out party" of the boy or girl, and thereafter they are not permitted to mingle with the other sex as children, but are considered to have arrived at a marriageable age.

A Happy New Year! Why not? The path of duty is the path of safety ever, and the separations of the good are for time alone. We are moving in a veritable journey. Our earthboat swims through seas of light sustained by the power that launched it into space.

Have your shrubbery in the front yard boxed upon New Year's day. We once knew a Galveston caller, an otherwise estimable young man, to tumble down the front steps of a lordly mansion and break a valuable tree all to flinders with his head.

SHOULD AULD ACQUAINTANCE BE FORGOT.

OR, HOW A NEW LEAF IS SOMETIMES TURNED OVER.

This is the day of all the days, when everybody thinks it pays to overturn a brand new leaf. This is the day when all our grief is heightened by the past year's sin. This is the day when we grow thin reflecting over last year's fun and thinking what we might have done.

Heigh O! I'm sad, now it's too late when I remember '88. Think of the money I have spent. Think of the bills (Great Scott! the rent!) 'Bout all I've done is earn my bread. My boy, you ought to soak your head! What use are you upon this earth? Why, pshaw! I tell you you're not worth the powder that would blow you up. I'm blue today. Well, well, my cup is very full. It makes me mad to think that I have been so bad.

But after all, what is the use? What's done is done. Come, come! a truce. My boy, brace up, 'twill be O.K. a hundred years from yesterday. It does no earthly good to fret. The thing is done, and vain regret won't make it better. Come, don't pine; 'twill be all right in '89. All right? Well, I should faintly smile. You bet; I've done with all past guile.

This raking up of chestnuts old is all played out. The day'll be cold when you observe upon my brow such wrinkles as were there just now. It's just as plain as day to me the reason we unhappy be. My son, it's will power, that is all. Exert it, and Old

Nick will fail. Why, all you've got to do is say "I won't!" By George! it's just as plain as day. Let's see, I'd better make a list, so that nothing will e'er be missed.

No more I'll thrum the gay guitar and wake the neighbors near and far. I'll make no bets, nor will I spring old chestnuts from the circus ring upon my friends, nor will I seek to borrow money on my cheek. I'll wake up in the morning bright, and in the dark I'll strike a light and start the fire while my poor wife in bed is lengthening her life. I'll hustle round and put in coal and saw up wood, upon my soul! I'd better keep a diary, too, to chronicle what I will do. No more tobacco! I have spoke. By Jove! a man's a fool to smoke. And in regard to spending cash I'll not throw it away on trash. This year ha! ha! by hook or crook, I'll put down figures in a book. I'll save! Let's see, well I should say, a cool five hundred in this way. No more you'll catch me out of nights. How transitory those delights. I tell you, will power is the thing. I've seen my day. I've had my fling.

Hello, who's there? Come in. Why, Jack, my boy, how came you back so soon? I'm glad you're here. Come, shake, old man. A Glad New Year. Sit down. Can't stay? Why what's on hand? No, no, my boy, I've too much sand. What's up? Yes! Well, who'll be there? Only this time. Don't know's I care. Remember then, this once I'll go; but after this no more. No; no. Oh, what a jolly time 'twill be! Only this once, mind. Whoopee! What is the use of feeling down in heart? We'll go and paint the town!

—Journal of Education.

ONE LOVE OF HIS LIFE.

An old gentleman, leaning forward with his hands clasped over a gold headed cane, was seated in a summer house, situated upon the grounds of a hotel at a fashionable watering place. He was in a corner hidden by drooping vines, and his face expressed deep and apparently painful thought. The refrain of his sad musing was:

"Only one person in the whole world to love me, and I shall lose even that love now!"

On the other side of the summer house, divided from the side the old gentleman occupied by a rustic partition, two ladies, young and fair, rustled in, and taking out some fancy work, settled down for a chat.

One was tall, and dressed in a pretty costume, that was at once youthful and matronly; the other was petite, blonde, and not more than eighteen. Mrs. Courtland spoke first.

"Embroidery, Alice?" she said. "A handkerchief corner. For your trousseau?"

"Yes," and the sweet voice faltered, while a burning blush crimsoned the fair cheek. "Is it not pretty?"

"Very. I want to talk about your prospects, child. Your Aunt Marcia tells me you are making a splendid match."

"Did she? I think so, Blanche. Malcolm is so noble and good and a true Christian!"

"But your aunt tells me he is the favorite nephew of the great oil merchant, Hiram Bates, whose wealth is something enormous. You have only to help him play his cards well, and he will probably be heir to a magnificent fortune. But what ails you? You look as if I was telling you a piece of news."

"I think Aunt Marcia has been misinformed, that is all."

"Then he is not Hiram Bates' nephew?

"I never heard him speak of a rich uncle, and I am quite sure he has no hope of inheriting money. He has a good salary, and my little fortune will buy and furnish a small house, so we can make a comfortable, and, I hope, a happy home."

"Did he never speak to you of his uncle?"

"Not of a rich uncle. He has told me of a lame uncle, his mother's brother, who has been very kind to him, given him his education and a start in business. He always talks of him with the deepest love and pity."

"Pity!"

"He suffers tortures from the effects of a fall that has lamed him for life and often causes him weeks of agonizing pain. Malcolm tells me with tears in his eyes of his fear of losing this dearest friend and kind uncle, and I think he hopes I may be useful sometimes in nursing him."

"I wonder if it is the same?"

The old man leaning upon the cane was thinking:

"Can it be true? Does Malcolm think so little of my money, that will be his, that he has never even mentioned it to his promised wife? Can it be that I shall gain a loving, tender niece, instead of losing my nephew, when Malcolm marries?"

Loving his nephew so deeply, Hiram Bates had felt a keen pain at the news of his betrothal. He had never seen Alice Hunter, but he knew she had been brought up in a circle of fashion and was the orphan niece of one of society's gayest votaries, Mrs. Marcia Haydon. He ascertained by inquiry that the young girl had inherited $10,000 from her father and that her winters were spent with her Aunt Marcia, her summers with a maiden sister of her father. She was quite a belle, though only in society one season, pretty and accomplished, and the old man groaned in spirit over his nephew's choice.

A belle, and with a head full of fashionable frivolity, he was convinced that the girl had been won by the prospect of Malcolm's heirship to his own fortune. He had seen in the future his nephew estranged from him by the influence of a dressy, empty headed woman, or, still more appalling, his niece-to-be making false protestations of affection, with a hope of winning golden favors.

While he mused upon the conversation he had overheard, the silvery voices of his young neighbors still sounding beside him, there was a sudden crash, something struck him upon the head and he lost consciousness.

Cries from the summer house, from groups of people collected in the grounds, brought a party of men speedily to the spot. The rotten posts supporting the roof upon one side had given way and the side and roof had fallen in. Mrs. Courtland and Miss Hunter were buried under the fallen timbers, the doorway being completely blockaded, but were uninjured. Not so the old gentleman, who had been their unsuspected listener. He was taken out pallid and senseless.

Nobody knew him. He had come by the morning train, had taken breakfast, but no room, and asked the hour for the return train. A surgeon summoned as speedily as possible announced a broken arm and injury to the head, making a likelihood of a long, tedious illness. There was some animated discussion, some suggestions of hospital, a search through the pockets of the unconscious victim, resulting in the discovery of a small sum of money, but no letters, papers or cards, and finally a desertion of one and another, each going his or her way, with the comforting reflection:

"It is none of my business."

But when they had all deserted, the injured man the surgeon, still busy binding up his arm as he lay upon a bench brought from the ruined summer house, felt a light touch on his hand, and looked up, to see a little figure in mourning, with a sweet face, very pale.

"Can I help you?" Alice Hunter asked.

"No, child, not now."

"What will they do with him?"

"I suppose he must go to a New York hospital."

"But the ride—the journey."

"Will cause great additional suffering, perhaps result in death."

"Doctor, will they keep him here if he is paid for?"

"Certainly; but there is not money enough about him to pay his board a week."

"I will pay it!"

"You!"

"Yes; I will not let him die for want of money I have. He"—and her lip quivered—"he looks like my dear father who is dead!"

"H'm—yes. Here come the fellows to carry him to the station. I think I will have him taken to the little cottage where I board. It will cost less and be more quiet."

Mrs. Courtland declared Alice was outraging the proprieties most dreadfully when the young girl went to the cottage and offered her services as nurse to the doctor; but Aunt Sophie silenced comment by moving her belongings from the hotel to the quiet boarding house, and the doctor found he had a valuable assistant.

Alice explained in her quiet, [illegible] ice that her father was ill for nine months before he died, and she was his nurse. This accounted for the noiseless woolen dresses, the velvet shod feet, the quick eye and ready hand, and when the sufferer recovered consciousness, the gentle voice and tact that quieted him in paroxysms of pain and fever. Aunt Sophy was too much of an invalid herself to help, but she sat beside the bed while Alice moved to and fro, made dainty soups and tempting dishes, and performed all nursing duties.

The invalid had one long talk with the doctor and then submitted to the gentle ministration of the two women, only insisting upon a man the doctor provided being with him at night and within call.

The season was over, and only these three remained of the summer boarders at the little cottage, when one cool October day the sick man, now fast recovering, called Alice to him.

"I shall soon be well again," he said, regretfully.

"You speak powerful cheerily, 'very soon.'"

"I shall miss my nurse."

"And I my patient; but I am glad you are recovering. We were afraid at one time there would be a more painful parting."

"You mean I was in danger of dying. Why should that be painful. I am old."

She made no answer, looking sorrowfully into his uplifted eyes.

"And a burden upon you, the doctor tells me. Why did you make yourself responsible for a stranger?"

The fair face flushed, the soft eyes were dewy with feeling as Alice said softly:

"Because you are old and seemed poor and friendless. I was glad it was in my power to aid you. Do not think it was at any great cost," she added, with a generous desire to lighten the burden of obligation. "I have some money lying idle."

"For the wedding day perhaps. Well, child, you might have poorer jewels to deck your bridal than an old man's tears of gratitude and love. I am getting well and shall soon leave you; will you give me a keepsake?"

The girl loosened a little locket from a chain round her throat, cut off one of her golden curls and put in the place of some hair she took out, and laid the trinket in the old man's hand.

"With my love," she said, softly

"Ah child," he sighed, "an old man, sick and feeble, wins little love."

"Yet," she said, earnestly, "you must believe that I have nursed you since you were conscious, with affection. My own father is gone, but if ever you want a daughter's care or affection, believe me I will gladly come to you, if possible."

Three days later the little cottage was deserted. Aunt Sophy and Alice returned to their home to make up for lost time in dress making and sewing, and Alice cheerfully paid out of her small patrimony for the board and expenses of her venerable patient.

She little guessed how deep an impression her care and tenderness had made upon the heart so long closed against human affection, so distrustful of any advances from his fellow creatures. It was a revelation to him, this active charity to an utter stranger. He had gone to the hotel merely to see Malcolm's choice and had purposely left all clew to his identity behind him. He had intended meeting Alice, if possible, unknown and watching her unobserved, but accident had thrown them together in a way he little anticipated. The first use he made of his recovery was to write to his nephew, and Malcolm met him at the depot when he returned home.

Knowing nothing of the recent accident, the young man was shocked at the change in his uncle's face.

"You have been ill?" he cried.

"Very ill."

"Why did you not send for me?"

"I had even better nursing than yours, Malcolm. Don't ask me any questions now, but tell me about your marriage preparations."

"Alice has gone home and will remain until November. Then she comes to Mrs. Haydon's and will buy her house and furniture."

"In November?"

"Yes."

Late in November she came, her trunks full of Aunt Sophy's daintiest stitching, and Aunt Marcia gave her cordial greeting. A grand wedding was the display upon which this lady had set her heart, and Alice shrank a little at the comments upon the rich uncle, and her own good fortune in the "first rate match."

But just before the wedding day, a little note was brought to Alice, by a gorgeous footman, who was driving to her aunt's behind a private carriage. The note was from Malcolm, and begged her to come to him in the carriage.

Wondering, but obedient, Alice was speedily ready, and was driven to a handsome brown stone house, where the door was opened to usher her into a stylish drawing room, where a gentleman awaited her, and Malcolm advancing said:

"My uncle Hiram, Alice."

Kindly blue eyes looked into her own, withered hands were extended, and a voice she knew well, said:

"We are old friends, Malcolm. Are we not, Alice?"

Then, before she could answer, the old man continued:

"I have thought, Alice, that it was unkind to have my nephew wait for my death before sharing of my wealth. I have borne a curse of distrust in my heart for many years, thinking my money won me all the affection, save Malcolm's, that was offered me. But though you are well content to wed the young clerk, and put your own patrimony into his home, you must not refuse my heir, who has accepted from me an income that makes him independent, and this home."

"My love for Malcolm can bear riches or poverty," was the answer, "but, sir, our home needs you. You will come, will you not, to the children, who will try to make your life happy by loving care? Long before I knew you, Malcolm told me he hoped, when he had a home, to win you to live in it. Will you let me, too, beg of you to come to us."

"Gladly, child! gladly!" the old man said.

So, where the rich, lonely man had feared to lose the one love of his life, he gained another tenderer, sweeter love, to brighten his declining years by a daughter's devotion and affection.

Col. Halford's Chirography.

Mr. Halford's chirography is bad. When the type writer wave broke over the west he invested in one of the machines and practiced on it for a while. The new come printers immediately held a jollification meeting over it, while the old timers who had been getting rich by setting double leaded "takes" of Halford that nobody else could read were downcast and despondent. But in a month or two he fell back into his old ways. Shortly afterward a new man got a sheet of his copy that commenced and ended in the middle of a sentence. He studied it for five minutes and then, walking over to a galley of "pi," picked up a handful and put it among the newly set matter, marking it to correspond with the number of the "take" he failed to read. He then put on his coat and walked out of the office, no doubt thinking if the editor sent in "pi" to read he should be accommodated with the genuine article.—Chicago Tribune.

IF BUT.

It was of lace, a handsome dress,
Upon the velvet sofa lying.
I touched its folds, and must confess,
My love aflame, I fell to sighing.

And then the thought came unto me
(Upon the dress ought I not to pin it?)
How much more beautiful 'twould be,
If but my charming Nell were in it!

LUCILLE.

"It comes hard on us to take that girl!" William Hart grumbled to his wife. "When Mary ran away with that Frenchman, Dubreuil, my father washed his hands of her, and to the day of his death he never mentioned her name, not even when the news of her husband's death came to us. They've always lived in France, and I thought we were rid of them. She has no claim on us, and yet she writes to me on her deathbed, asking me to take her daughter."

"Well, she thought as you and Hiram got all the property, and she was disinherited, you ought to give her daughter a home," answered Mrs. Hart.

She was almost as cold and hard and undemonstrative as her husband, but, unlike him, she was not selfish, and beneath her unsympathetic exterior she had a strong sense of duty.

"That girl didn't give us a chance to say yea or nay," Mr. Hart continued angrily. "She writes that she would sail the day after her mother's funeral, and by this telegram she must be here on the train today. Pretty piece of business! I've the greatest mind in the world to send her packing!"

The harsh lines on William Hart's face grew harsher as he dwelt on his grievances. It should not have been a grievance to give a home to a poor orphan niece. He was a wealthy farmer, with three sons, two of them coarse and robust like himself; the youngest, Robert, a weakly, fretful invalid about 18 years old.

"I don't see the use of making a fuss," Mrs. Hart said in a cold voice. "Hiram's dead, and you happen to be Lucille Dubreuil's only relative, so you've got to take her. You can't turn a girl of 17 out on the world. I dare say she'll give a deal of trouble—girls always do; and then she's foreign and not used to our ways."

"It don't matter her not being used to our ways. I reckon they're good enough for a pauper; but the question with me is, How are going to put up with her? I always did despise Frenchified people!"

"Here comes the train now!" said his wife.

"And yes, there's a girl getting out, in deep black. I suppose it's she."

The station was only a few steps from the farm gate, but those few steps Mr. Hart did not take. He and his wife leaned upon the low gate, and watched curiously a little figure hurrying toward them. A lad who was showing her the way pointed to the farmer and his wife, and then returned to the station.

She ran hastily forward, her veil thrown back from her small, pale face, her large gray eyes alight with eagerness, and an appealing smile on her lips.

"Ah, you are mon oncle!" she cried, and the next moment her arms were around the farmer's neck, and her kisses on his cheek. He almost pushed her from him.

"Yes, I'm your uncle," he said, coldly, "but you needn't choke me. This is your Aunt Jane."

His voice and repellant manner jarred upon Lucille's sensitive nature. She drew back, and gazed timidly at the tall, stern faced woman before her. She dared not proffer a caress which had already been repulsed, but she took Mrs. Hart's hand with a look which would have gone to any woman's heart. Whether it did on not, it never entered her aunt's mind to kiss the girl and make her welcome.

"Yes, I'm your uncle's wife," she answered, stiffly, "and I hope you're going to be a good girl, and not make us too much trouble."

"Why, she isn't but a mite," her uncle said, gazing at her disapprovingly, "and Mary was a fine large girl. But then that little whippersnapper of a Frenchman wasn't bigger than a pint cup."

"Hush!" said his wife, in a low voice. But Lucille, who had never heard the word "whippersnapper" before, and understood English but imperfectly, only gazed inquiringly at the speaker.

"Well, come to the house, and take off your bonnet," said Mrs. Hart. She led the way, Lucille following her, with all elasticity gone from her steps, and a half frightened look in her eyes. Was this to be her home, and that harsh, coarse man, was he her uncle, and her lovely mamma's brother? Oh, why did mamma send her to them?"

"Here's your room," Mrs. Hart said, opening a door, "and there's your trunk been brought up. You'd better have a wash before you come down to dinner."

"Merci, madame!" Lucille said. "I mean I tank you, my aunt."

"You'll have to talk better English than that," Mrs. Hart said, with a grim smile, "or you'll be laughed at. Hurry up, for I can't keep your dinner waiting; it's against my rules."

As she closed the door Lucille sank on her knees by the bed, and burying her face in it, wept violently. "Ah," she sobbed, in her own dear language, "I don't understand their words, but their looks, yes! They do not want me. They grudge me the shelter of their roof. They despise me. Ah, why, when mamma died, did I not stay in Dinard as a servant, a nurse, anything rather than come to these cold hearts? Ah, dear Dinard! If I could go back, if I could wake up in my own little room and find this an ugly dream!"

She closed her eyes, and before her rose the fields of Dinard, with their masses of scarlet poppies against the dull green background of waving grain. The solemn rhythm of the sea was in her ears, she was dancing the ronde with her playmates by moonlight, and her mother's beautiful eyes were smiling tenderly at her.

"Ah, she wanted me to come!" Lucille said, resolutely. She knew what was best for me, and I will be brave and cheerful and try to make them love me."

As she smoothed her hair before the small mirror, you saw Lucille was not pretty. She was pale and thin, but her eyes were full of expression, and her movements easy and graceful. There was refinement in the girl's every look and gesture, the refinement of good breeding [illegible] her father's side, and her pretty mother had been quick to mold her own habits and tastes on those of her husband's. The family was half through dinner when Lucille entered the kitchen. Her uncle looked up.

"You can't be hungry much, or you take too long to drink. This is your cousin Lucy, boys. That's her name in this house, for no Frenchified 'Lucille' for me.

"Lucy, that's your cousin Stephen," pointing with his knife to the larger of the two tall young men, who grinned and looked sheepish, but did not rise from their seats, and extend a hand of welcome. "This is James, and here is Bob, a no account cripple, as you can see. You'd better sit by him, I reckon, you're both so puny."

The young men stared and looked more sheepish than ever, as their cousin, with her pretty, graceful step, went to each, shook hands, and tried to say a few courteous words in English, which only made them stare harder, and giggle until their faces were red.

"If you don't talk the funniest lingo!" her uncle cried, with a rude laugh. "I tell you, Lucy, the first thing you must learn is to talk English so that folks can understand you."

She smiled good humoredly.

"Ah yes, mon oncle, I hat so English. We spik it not in Dinard. Only the strangers, travelers, are English. I will learn it bientot. My cousins vill help me," with an appealing smile at them which they met stoidly.

To Lucille that dinner was a revelation of how much men could eat, and how loudly they could talk without quarreling. Gazing at them she was reminded of a menagerie, where she once saw the animals fed.

Bob alone was sulky and silent. He was offended at what his father had said about him, and leaned back in his seat eating nothing, and giving fretful answers to his mother. When Stephen and James left the table to measure a pony, over whose height they had had a fierce altercation, Bob followed them, and as he took his first step Lucille saw that he was lame—a most painful lameness, where one of his feet doubled up as it touched the floor.

To Lucille's surprise, neither father nor mother tried to assist him, but his father called out roughly, as the boy stumbled: "Serves you right for trying to get along without your crutch! Folks will notice your foot just the same if that's what your trying to hide."

Lucille did not understand the words of the boy's reply as he turned his angry face to his father, but the look and tone shocked and surprised her. Whatever may be the faults of French training, want of respect to parents and old persons is not among them.

As for Bob, blind with anger, he tripped up against a box lying on the floor and fell flat.

In a moment Lucille was beside him, and as he scrambled up, she took his arm.

"Vill you not lean on me?" she said, in her soft voice. "I can help you out."

"Let me alone, will you!" he cried, roughly striking away the little hand.

Repulsed, and coloring hotly, the girl returned to her seat. Her aunt's manner was gentler to her that evening. Whether it was her proffer of service to the cripple, who was the only one of the family on whom the stern mother lavished anything like tenderness, or whether she felt some sympathy for Lucille's mortification, she was certainly kinder.

But what words could paint the stranger's homesickness as she bent over a piece of crochet to hide her tears that evening! She was outside the family circle. They spoke a language almost unknown to her, and they were interested in things she had never heard of. No one addressed a word or look to her, as she sat at some distance from them, feeling herself too wretched to live.

She was startled at Bob's voice in her ear.

"I say, Lucy, you look awfully lonesome here."

"Lonesome!" she repeated; "what you call dat? Ah, yes, seule! Yes, yes. It is to break de heart to be lonesome."

"Well, it is hard; but when you can talk English you won't mind, you know."

"I will talk English nevaire, nevaire!" she cried, raising her hands with a despairing gesture. "It is too difficile. Ah, but my tongue refuse to learn."

Bob laughed. Here was one inmate of the family more wretched and more helpless than himself.

"I say, Lucy," he began, sheepishly. "You didn't mind when I hollered at you because you wanted to help me? You don't know my ways yet, but I'd rather fall and break my neck than have any one help me."

She understood enough to know that he was making a kind of apology for his roughness.

"Ah, no!" she cried, "I don't mind notin if you vill me help to learn dat dreadful English dat ties up my tongue."

"I'll do it," and the compact was sealed. Lucille did not know that Bob's English was the worst of its kind, for the Hart family were ignorant, and had known little of schools, but human interest was just then what she was yearning for.

In her quiet, unobtrusive way, the girl made herself useful to all the family. To her aunt her ready, cheerful service was invaluable, and even her uncle would shout for "Lucy" when a button was wanted on his shirts or a message must be sent to a neighboring farm. She was so gentle, so courteous, so unselfish and ready to oblige, that a household which had known nothing of those qualities before began to find them very necessary to their comfort.

As for Bob, he often wondered how he had lived without his cousin, to interest him in her bright stories of foreign countries, to beat up his pillows and bathe his head when he was ill, and make herself a slave to his sick whims. But much as Lucille had grown into the hearts of the Hart household, they were not demonstrative, and in the next two years her aunt had never caressed her, and not even from Bob had she ever heard one word of affection.

How the poor, sore little heart longed for loving words and looks! How impossible to her emotional French nature did it seem for people to feel an affection they were neither able nor willing to express! They did not notice that the pale, thin girl became daily paler and thinner, and homesickness grew fiercer and stronger in her heart. Not so much a longing for Dinard as for the loving words and tender caresses of her humble friends there.

There are tender, simple natures like Lucille's in the world, but, thank God, they are few for their own sakes. Even Lucille's dreams became troubled by that cruel nostalgia which was consuming her life. She would be back at Dinard, and with the murmur of the waves would mix the sweet, shrill voices of her companions, as they sang the ronde:

Nous n'irons plus au bois.
Les lauriers sont coupes.

Then she would wake up, her face wet with tears and her bosom shaking with sobs. But one morning she did not wake to consciousness, and, her aunt, going into the room, found her muttering in a kind of low delirium.

"Typhoid fever," the doctor said, "and there is no constitution to resist it."

She faded slowly away, patient and quiet, with long intervals of consciousness, until the end came. She had fallen into a kind of stupor, apparently the coma which precedes death, when she suddenly opened her eyes, to see her aunt's face bending over her bathed in tears. Bob was sobbing on his knees by the bed, and her uncle's hard face was working convulsively.

"O Lucy, Lucy, don't leave us, my dear!" sobbed her aunt. "What shall we do without you?"

She looked at them with surprise, and then her pale lips parted in a charming smile.

"You love me, you want me," she cried, "and I did not know! Kiss me, aunt, oh, kiss me once!"

Her aunt raised her head, and with that farewell caress, the loving tender soul went forth to find its kind.

No one can say Lucille's life was lived quite in vain, for Mrs. Hart became gentler and more womanly because of it. As for Bob, poor Bob! he never forgot his sweet, patient cousin, and he was a better and worthier man for the lesson of her life.—M. B. Williams in The Youth's Companion.

LURLINE—A SONG.

O Lurline, let me stay,
And let your fingers stray
In soft meanderings o'er your light guitar;
The young moon's slender bow
Dips and declines below
The world's dim edge where glows the evening star.

And while I listening lean,
Play to me, Lurline,
Some dulcet song or wordless symphony;
From 'neath thy fingering
Let some idyllic thing
Murmur in plaints or swell in ecstacy.

Or sit in silence, dear,
Only let me be near
And share with thee the evening's holy balm.
Oh, listen to my plea,
Dear heart, 'twill safe to me
The gift I crave that makes life's sovereign balm.

All things seem listening, sweet;
Thy low response repeat
A trance like hush envelops all the same;
The katydids forget
A while their shrill duet
And slumber 'mid the cedar's somber green.

The fireflies now and then
Glitter across the glen,
A meteor slides adown the star sown slopes;
But in thine eyes' deep beams
A tenderer radiance gleams,
Soft as the dove's eyes, or the antelope's.

Before you bid me go,
Sweetheart, Lurline, bestow
Some look, some word, my worship to requite;
Before I go away
Bid me return, I pray;
Good night, Lurline. Ah, Lurline, dear, good night.

—Rosaline E. Jones in Boston Transcript.

ONE DAY WITH A CYNIC.

Mr. Thomas Leggett gives no outward signs of the confirmed pessimist that he is. He is now 50 years of age, the possessor of a good digestion and a fund of anecdotes. This, you must observe, is a rare combination in a professional cynic. But Thomas Leggett has changed wonderfully since his school days. Then, I remember, he was trusting, confiding, and rather more easily deceived than were other boys of his own age. Moreover he was a young patriot, believed honestly and reveentially in the stars and stripes, hallowed the names of Washington and Patrick Henry and threw his whole soul and all of his influence into the proper celebration of the Fourth of July.

And now, after a separation of thirty years, I was to meet Thomas Leggett at his home. We were to renew our youth and bask in the glorious twilight of reminiscence. I had received a note from him "ordering" me to repair to his domicile promptly at 9 a. m., and to then and there pass the day and evening. What a cheery, grotesque, yet unique and picturesque little bachelor's quarters were his! The house was a small, irregular Queen Anne cottage in the center of a large lawn in a fashionable suburb. The exterior and the cozy rooms within impressed one with their air of impudent neglige and scorn of conventionalism.

The Tom Leggett who welcomed me on the porch of this home on this particular balmy June morning—the lawn sparkling with dandelions and the air heavy with the incense of lilacs—was not the Tom Leggett of thirty years ago. That Tom was a thin, sensitive youth, with a girlish face and effeminate ways. This Tom was fat, bluff, hearty, sleek, quizzical, roly-poly and cool as a beer cellar.

"Bob," he said, extending both hands and almost crunching the bones of my own with his genial grasp, "I am glad to see you."

He did not, certainly, need to make affidavit to this. I believed him.

"I see," Tom continued, abruptly, "you observe the chipping off of the paint. It's an old swindle—a chemical imposition, you know. I told the scoundrel who sold it to me that I believed it was a fraud, and the perjurer offered to go before a notary and swear that it had given satisfaction to a thousand families in another part of the city. John"—to the butler—"send up two bottles of port—the red seal—that hasn't got quite so much logwood in it as the other."

Then we went into the library.

"This," Tom Leggett said, "is a trifle better than the front parlor. There are some real things in this room—these books, for instance. Some of the bindings are cheap, trashy imitations of Levant, tree calf and morocco, but the thoughts, the language, the style—they are all real and substantial. There's Shakespeare; but a man named Donnelly is turning the hose on Shakespeare, and trying to extinguish the immortal fire of his genius. But even Donnelly himself doesn't believe that Shake is a fraud. Oh no. Donnelly is too old a literary campaigner, has lived too long, and has got the world down too pat to believe any such thing himself. He caught all he was fishing for—a couple of hundred thousand or so, filched from the pockets of nabobs and fools—mostly fools. Have a cigar? They are Connecticut cabbage with medicated paper wrapper. Don't bite too much off the end or the filling will all sift down your œsophagus. A man should get a good cigar for $15 a hundred, but I can't do it when I send for 'em. The dealers won't put you up first class goods for a first class price unless you stand over them with a shotgun. Don't sit down in that Eastlake chair! Great Scott! You must know that an Eastlake chair is only intended for an ornament in a furniture store window, to stand there waiting for some chump to bite at it. I don't care a rap about your breaking it, but you might hurt yourself. Take the sleepy hollow. There's Dayboll across the way. He's got his whole house filled up with Eastlakes, all except his new parlor set, and in this the old ignoramus has given himself dead away. How do you suppose he has rigged his parlor up?"

"Purchased an imitation Turner or Munkacsy?" I ventured.

"No, he wouldn't trust himself to buy pictures. He wouldn't know a Munkacsy from a soap maker's lithograph. But when he got his new parlor set in he had linen pants put on the chairlegs and all the satin and plush covered up. That, Bob, is a standing advertisement that old Dayboll, rich as he claims to be, has actually got in a lot of furniture that he can't afford to use. That's it, Bob; he can't afford to use such rich stuff, and he makes a holy show of himself by having it in his house. Why, a man might as well plug up the top of a china cuspidor to keep people from spitting in it. I'd hate to make public confession that I was too poor to use my own furniture. Bah!"

Now, the cigars were fair and the wine was unobjectionable. So I ventured to suggest that both were fine. Tom regarded me attentively for a moment. Then he said, gravely:

"Bob, I'll take that from you for old time's sake. But, I tell you honestly, if any one else had said it I should have preached him a sermon on hypocrisy that would have made his ears burn, and when he went away he wouldn't think half as much of me as when he came. You do something in politics, I judge, Bob!"

I was obliged to admit the fact, and at once became thoreat uneasy.

"I thought so," chuckled Tom Leggett, "I guessed it. Well, now, the smaller your success the more I think of you. The prominent politicians—some term them statesmen—are all rascals, every mother's son of them. The real workers for the people's interests, the ones who introduce beneficial bills and are active in beneficial legislation, are never heard of, and they are not returned to congress or the legislature the second term, either. The people, Bob, politically, are just are just like drunkards. The sot has a vague idea that whisky is bad for him. Whenever he is himself, or even when not too drunk, he is ready to admit it. Just so with the people—the taxpayer and voter. They know that a good, honest, intelligent, though obscure man would fairly and faithfully represent them. But their infatuation for some stump howling blatherskite who has several times before sold them out, and who, they well know, will do it again, is too much for them, and, like the sot turning to his cups, they, too, turn out to the polls and vote into office the very ringster who is bound body and soul to some monopoly which is daily cutting the financial life out of them. And they push the honest, intelligent candidate back into obscurity. Can you recall any very humorous or exhilirating congressional legislation during the past two decades?"

I ventured a demurrer that the subject had never been considered by me exactly in that light.

"Guess not," again chuckled Tom Leggett; "you won't be apt to hear such ideas advanced, either, from any one else, unless it be from some lunatic of a red headed anarchist popping the idea up like a skyrocket, to end with a fizzle—or a dynamite bomb. The people will then hold up their hands in holy horror, but they have no reproaches for the miserable political sneak whose neglect of duty and pernicious legislation have inflamed the minds of radicals. Let's play a game of chess."

Usually chess is a game, like whist, to be played in silence, but Tom Leggett managed to enliven it with quite a display of invective and animadversion. Before such a rattling, harassing fire of small arms I was powerless to duly consider my moves, and Tom Leggett won three games before the lunch hour.

"Please pass the oleomargarine," he said.

I looked up with surprise and inquired:

"Surely you can get butter from the country and not be dependent on city dealers?"

"This came from the country; that's why I believe it's oleo."

"Pardon my obtuseness."

"It's this way. The city sharper goes into the country, buys country butter, brings it to the city, trades with the city dealers, receiving a pound and a half of oleo for one pound of butter, carries the former home, and the next day comes back to the city crying 'pure country butter,' with a nasal drawl and hay seed in his hair. Bah! Don't you taste the terra alba in these jumbles?"

"Terra alba?"

"Yes, the best cream tartar you can buy in the market is 85 per cent. terra alba. It's a trade secret, but true as gospel. Everything we eat almost is adulterated."

"But this is excellent coffee. Mocha, I presume."

"Mocha! My dear man, there are not ten pounds of mocha coffee imported into the United States in a year. They don't raise mocha enough for home consumption. In this country it would be worth its weight in silver. This coffee is, probably, a fair quality of O. G. Java, adulterated with chicory. Even my vinegar cruet contains nothing but a vile decoction of acids. French laces are woven in New York. Skillful physicians are losing patients every day through the weakening, uncertain adulteration of drugs, especially quinine. Russian leather is made in Connecticut. Kerosene oil is sold away below state test because the inspector held his hand behind his back when he inspected it. Spanish mackerel are caught on the New Jersey coast. The average saloon keeper can draw five distinct kinds of liquor from one barrel of high wines. Italian marble is quarried in Kentucky. Parisian art work comes from Boston. English cassimere is made in New Hampshire. Bordeaux wine is made in California. Marseilles linen is produced in Massachusetts, and Havana cigars are rolled by the million in Chicago. The merchant on one side of the street is ruining his competitor on the other, because the former has bribed custom house officials. Ah, this is a sad world. Let us talk of something pleasanter."

"So you renewed your friendship with Tom Leggett, did you?" inquired a legal friend, the day after my visit.

"I did," I replied, "but isn't he a most peculiar man?"

"Peculiar! I should say he was. Why, only last week I drew all the papers that released a mortgage of $300 on a poor widow's home, who had five children to support, and gave her a clear deed for the premises. Tom Leggett furnished the money, but she doesn't even know it, and always speaks of him as that cross old man on the corner lot."—Dick Steele in St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Utilizing Corn Husks.

One of the best utilized waste products in Austria, resulting in the manufacture of large quantities of paper and cloth, are corn husks. These are boiled with an alkali in tubular boilers, as a result of which the fibers of the husks are found at the bottom of the boiler in a spongy condition, filled with glutinous substance, and which proves to be a perfect dough of cornmeal, containing in a concentrated form all the pabulum originally contained in the husk. The glutinous matter is pressed out from the fibres by hydraulic apparatus, leaving the fiber in the shape of a mass or chain of longitudinal threads, interspersed with a dense mass of short fiber. The linen made from the long fibres furnishes a very good substitute for the coarser kinds of flax and hemp, and is superior to jute, gunny cloth, coir and the like. The paper, for which mostly the short fibers are used—the long fibers constituting the material for spinning—is stronger than papers of the same weight made from linen or cotton rags, its hardness and firmness of grain exceeding that of the best dipped English drawing papers, being especially adapted for pencil drawing, stenographic writing and water colors; its durability exceeds, it is claimed, that of paper made from any other material, and the corn husk parchment is not at exposed points destroyed by insects; if the gluten is left in the pulp the paper can be made extremely transparent without sacrificing any portion of its strength. Again, the fiber is easily worked either alone or in combination with rags, into the finest writing or printing papers; it also readily takes any tint or color, and can be worked almost to as much advantage into stout wrapping papers of superior quality as into fine note and envelope papers. —Boston Transcript.

Marriages of the Princes of Wales.

Five hundred years have elapsed since England beheld the first marriage of a Prince of Wales. Indeed, there have only been four such marriages in England, and one abroad. The preliminaries of marriage have often been made, but these were in such cases carried out after the prince's accession to the throne.—Literary World.

Railway Superintendent (to car inspector)—Any of the cars out of order?

"Yes, number 412 is unfit for service."

"Well, use it only for excursions after this."—Nebraska State Journal.

Got on to It Finally.

They were at the theatre and she had thoughtlessly eaten at dinner some soup with the flavor of onion in it.

"Oh, Mr. Howlingswell," she said, adroitly, putting a morsel of perfumed lace and cambric to her face, "do you notice that some one near us has had the bad taste to eat onions before coming to the theatre to-night?"

"Why, no, Miss Clara, I hadn't until you spoke."—The Epoch.

REVERIES OF A PHILOSOPHER.

Naught the lover's ardor damps
When his girl has got the stamps.

Lay figures—the price of eggs.

They're having now their breathing time,
But they're determined, all,
Whatever the result may be,
Next year they will play ball.

When a man, who greatly admires a beautiful woman, makes her a profound bow, is he, as one might say, courting her on the stoop?

"Is marriage a failure?" the bachelor cried.
And the youth who is courting a girl replied:
"I've never been married, and cannot guess,
But courtship, I know, is a big success."

There is usually a good deal of back talk when women get together to discuss the bustle.

Whether the play is bright or flat,
To him it is never known
Who stares at the back of a lady's hat
And swears, as the acts go on.

When a woman wants the earth, it is with the view of giving it to some man.

Love is stronger than friendship, so
The poets declare, and perhaps they know;
Yet we find, as the world we travel through,
That lovers are plenty and friends are few.

Good looks should not be despised. There have been few heroes with turn up noses and bow legs.

How wise are we when the chance has fled,
And a glance we backward cast!
We know just the thing that we should have said
When the time for saying it's past.

The man who is in the habit of getting "pretty well on" lessens his chance of getting to be "pretty well off."

The coal is now put in the bin
And the coal man rakes the shekels in;
But the wind blows keenly o'er the world,
And the world is cold, the world is cold!

A paper devoted to plumbers is called The Rasp. The craft will probably keep it on file.

Not, "Is it cold enough for you?"—
The phrase of which all have grown weary—
But have you read Robert Elsmere
Is now the popular query.

A female lawyer may be a spinster and have objections to marriage, but when she accepts a retaining fee she tacitly admits that she is engaged.

In black December, raw days, fog days
Follow close each other;
But it is only in the "dog days"
That we have "beastly weather."

"The same" is said to be the most popular drink in the market.

We strive and strive to reach a place above;
We're not content with what we see and know;
The man who wins a loving woman's love
Has got a glimpse of heaven here below!

"The Fishery Question"—Say, have you got any bait?

This is about the time when the farmer fishes through the ice and catches a twenty-two pound pickerel.

Sign painters should be comprehended under the denomination of "men of letters," and, by the way, so should letter carriers.

Brown—Green is a very intellectual man, what they call a man of large grasp.

Black—A man of large grasp! I should think he was. Why, when he dances in a waltz he can put his arms around "the whirled."

Young Wife—My love, I have a delightful surprise in store for you! You cannot guess what it is.

Young Husband (full of pleasant anticipations)—What is it, darling?

Y. W.—I've invited mother to spend the holidays with us.

Young Wife—How the world moves! There's Bessie Gray, an old chum of mine, a graduate of the normal school, has just entered a medical college. She will soon be able to write M. D. after her name. Women are coming to the front, I tell you. Formerly girls were taught nothing but housekeeping.

Young Husband—Yes, and now they're taught everything but housekeeping.

Where are you going to, my pretty maid?
I'm going to the dry goods store, she said.

May I go with you, my pretty maid?
You may if you'll wait outside, she said.

How long shall I wait for you, my pretty maid?
Until I look over the samples, she said.

And how many samples, my pretty maid?
Some of calico, some of silk, some of pique, some of linen, some of lawn, some of velvet—ribbons, trimmings, buttons, gloves, laces, embroideries——

I cannot go with you, he gloomily said.

—Boston Courier.

He Was Fond of Dogs.

An English lady traveling in a Paris railroad car carried her pet dog in her lap. A French dandy beside her began to caress the dog. "Well, sir," said she snappishly, "I must say that you do appear to be very fond of dogs!"

"Madame," said he, "I learned to love them during the siege, and since that time I scarcely ever eat anything else!"—New York Sun.

Anxiety's Alley.

Mrs. Jones (with unopened letter)—I wonder who it's from?

Mr. Jones—You can quickly find out by opening it.

Mrs. Jones—Yes, but I am enjoying the anxiety of suspense.—New York World.

HE LEFT THEN.

An Interesting Poker Story with an Abrupt End.

They were sitting in a hotel corridor, and an old man, who spoke in an intense but deliberate manner, was telling of a great poker game. As the story went on his listeners drew their chairs closer around the narrator. Every man was leaning forward with an eager glitter in his eye. Half smoked cigars fell unnoticed to the floor. There was scarcely a movement in the little group.

The old man was evidently a master at story telling. He had been, too, if one might judge by his lively description of the game which he was describing, an expert player himself. He began with the beginning of the jackpot, went carefully over the deal, the draw and the preliminary betting. And when he got to the first bet of the opener there was a breathless silence around him, save for his quiet, measured tones, as he told of the game. The game, as he described it, had been played in a train and he had been a witness of it.

"John," he said, tilting his chair back a little and then causing it to sway with a rhythmic motion of his body, "bet $30. The man next to him ran his cards over completely and raised him $50. The next man saw the raise. John raised $100 again. The next man again ran his cards over carefully, placed a crisp $100 note on the table, hesitated a moment and then, adding another one to it, pushed them both into the pot without a word. The third man laid down his cards, leaving John to bet next. He saw the raise and placed $1,000 beside it, whistling softly to himself. His opponent laid down his cards and pulled a long pocketbook from his pocket. He took out a roll of bills and counted them over very deliberately. Then he picked up his cards and ran them over again. His face was pale, but calm. He said nothing."

There was an intense strain in the absorbed silence of the group now. The man drew a long breath. Another moved uneasily in his chair, but no one said a word.

"The man counted out $1,000," continued the narrator, "then he counted out another thousand, and another and another until five piles lay before him. John looked at him a moment and went down into his pocket. The hands of both the players were trembling slightly, but both looked confident."

One of the listeners now tapped his foot impatiently on the floor.

"The man slowly pushed the five rolls to the center of the table," he went on. "John's eyebrows came together. He took his wallet and placed it beside the bills."

A flutter ran through the group, followed by a sudden hush. The narrator stopped in his story, and bringing his chair down to the floor, reached for a match. He struck it, waited for the sulphur to burn out, and relighted his cigar. For a moment he puffed away silently. "And then!" said one of his hearers nervously.

"Oh, then the train stopped at my station and I had to get off."—New York Tribune.

A Chilly Evening.

Unwelcome Suitor—That's a lovely song; it always carries me away.

She—If I had known how much pleasure it could give us both, I should have sung it earlier in the evening.

He was from Philadelphia, and it was not until the next morning, in the train, that he "caught on," and his heart grew sick as he viewed the kindly hint in the light of subsequent events.—Life.

A Friend and Benefactor.

"Confound your awkwardness!" groaned the man whose corns had been stepped on.

"I beg your pardon, sir," answered the offender, "but I think you were as much to blame as I was. You stepped directly in my way."

"Do you claim the whole sidewalk, sir, as yours? Has everybody got to get out of the way when you come along?"

"Sir, I have apologized to you for the accident. If you want any further satisfaction, I shall be happy to accommodate you at any time. Here is my card."

(Reads)—"'K. K. Guppins, manufacturer of railway lamps.' Do you make these lamps they use on the cars?"

"I do, sir."

(With emotion)—"My dear friend, permit me to grasp your hand! I am a spectacle peddler!"—Chicago Tribune.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Christmas passed off very quietly in our village.

Mrs. Wm. Riggs, who has been quite sick for several days past, is gaining at the present writing.

Wm. Beevers for the past week has been carefully administering to a felloned thumb.

On Saturday W. L. Jones lost a valuable brood mare, by blood poison, caused by running a nail in her foot.

Quite a number of our young people attended the Christmas exercises at Britton Sunday evening.

The Christmas greeting of the business houses of the village was an astonisher to every home in the place last week.

The village school closed Thursday for a few days vacation.

The attendence at the L. C. S. on Friday evening was not as large as it should have been, considering the moonlight evening and the fine wheeling.

The Sabbath school enjoyed an hour at the church on Christmas eve, in listening to some select readings by several teachers and remarks by the pastor, interspersed with singing by the school and a solo by Little Fern. At the close of the exercises a table that stood loaded with candy and nuts, popcorn and oranges, was relieved of its burden and each one of the school present were remembered by their teacher.

The feed mill was kept running day and night part of last week in order to meet the demands of customers.

Joe Sage, of Macon, the weather strip veterinary was in the village last week and administered to the infirmity of several doors about town. Joe is a hustler and when the chilling wind of December blows through his whiskers he remembers his brothers' affliction and at once flees to his rescue. He is on the road all the time, only reaching home once a week.

Several family gatherings were enjoyed by citizens of this village Christmas day.

W. H. and G. D. Arner visited in Adrian Wednesday.

Misses Flota Smith and Marcie Kelly visited Macon friends Friday and Saturday of last week.

Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Wilson, of Constantine, are spending their vacation with their parents here and at Blissfield.

Bertie Harrington, of Blissfield, is visiting friends here.

Ida Pocklington is home from the Normal during the holiday vacation.

Ray Luce went to Ann Arbor Monday to spend Christmas with her mother.

I. D. Loree is enjoying the holiday vacation with friends in Detroit and Flat Rock.

T. S. Van Duser and Vote Miller who are doing the baking at the Orchard Lake military academy are home for a few day's vacation accompanied by M. J. Moran.

Agent Geo. Arner and wife, of Augusta, spent Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Arner.

Mrs. John Arner visited her daughter Rhoba, at Dundee, Christmas.

Lester Osgood and wife went to St. John's Monday to enjoy Christmas with relatives.

Louis Helm, and wife of Decatur, Ind., surprised his parents with a holiday visit. They arrived on the evening train, Monday.

Ella and Emma Miller are holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Collier, of Detroit.

Wendell Bean, of Scottsville, N. Y., arrived Monday for his holiday vacation at his grandmother's, Mrs. Hall's.

Nellie and Lulu Ropleye spent the most of last week with their sister Florence at Dundee. Florence accompanied them home to spend her holiday vacation with her parents.

Mr. Z. Cook, of Raisin, president of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance company, was in the village Wednesday.

A. B. Clark, of Elkhart, was in the village the fore part of the week.

The Ladies Church Social will hold their next meeting at the home of Mrs. Jesse Potter, on North Church street, on Friday evening of next week. The president desires a full attendance of the executive committee as business of importance is on file for their consideration.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wilson Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Wilson enjoyed Christmas day with Prof. and Mrs. E. A. Wilson, of Tecumseh.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Mc Roberts, his parents and Della Freer, of Mason, were among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Russell, on Christmas.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Our village school is closed for the holiday vacation.

John Britton, and wife, Joseph Exelby and his family made a trip to Adrian last Saturday.

On Friday evening of last week quite a little excitement was aroused by the burning of an old barn, about half a mile South- West of Britton. If belongs to the Coates farm, occupied by John Gibson. Mr. Gibson, had several tons of hay stored in the barn and some valuable farm implements. We understand that the contents were all insured; the fire is supposed to have been started by sparks from the engine upon the Wabash railway.

Rev. Mr. Mathews delivered a lecture in Exelby's Hall, last Saturday evening. The subject, "Personal Travels in Africa." Owing to imperfect notice, there were but few present, but those in attendance spoke very highly of the lecture as deeply interesting and edifying; hopes are entertained that he may be induced to repeat it in the near future.

The Sunday School entertainment, that was given in the Christian Church, on Sabbath evening last, was a success. That is, it was pronounced in all essentials good. The recitations were well delivered, the music was excellent and the financial part was quite satisfactory, being $12-40. The house was well filled.

Mrs. McNiel, of Tecumseh, is visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Hawkes, and having together "A Merry Christmas."

Miss. Anna Gibson is spending the holidays with friends in Indiana.

The Osgood brothers have commenced work on their new feed mill. They propose to have it ready in a few days for business; it will stand at the junction of the railways, north of the depot.

Samuel Kniffen has rebuilt his barn and made a very fine thing of it, and he proposes to supply it with water works in the spring.

Britton has no rivers above ground, but she is highly favored with watercourses beneath the surface. There are several flowing wells in the village and the best of water can be had by digging and boring. Mr. Borden's well has a bore of forty feet deep, and the water stands at the top, so warm that it never freezes. The subterranean supply of water seems to be inexhaustible.

MACON MUSIC.

The ladies' mite society will meet at the home of Mrs. Maples, on Wednesday, Jan. 2nd. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Austin who has been sick for several months, passed away on Thursday last. The funeral was held Saturday morning at the Baptist church, Rev. A. W. Stalker, of Clinton, officiating.

The remains of R. R. Reed, of St. Louis, were brought here on Monday last. Funeral services were held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Samuel Hatch, on Wednesday last, Rev. Williams, of Clinton, officiating.

THE BELLE OF LIMA.

Her Beauty and Fascinations, and the Care Taken of Her by a Jealous Mother.

Lima from the earliest times has been noted for its beautiful women; not merely for symmetrical features, but elegance of physique and graceful movement.

In speaking of the women of Lima reference is made to the superior class of Spanish descendants, the genealogies of Pizarro and his followers, who, as Prescott states, shod their horses with silver shoes and gambled away in one night the accumulated wealth of centuries.

A typical Lima belle is of greater stature than the North American model of beauty, possessing a well rounded, graceful form, small and elegantly moulded feet, and pearly teeth.

The eyes are dark, large, and so bewitching in their expression as to drive care from the skipper's mind as he whirls his ideal beauty through the long hallway, his soul keeping time with the spirited waltzes, until gathered into the folds of the same manta with his senorita. The essentiality of the life of a Limaa belle is pleasure.

The young ladies (senoritas) of the family either accompany their parents in the evening ramble or are attended by their personal servants; usually two young ladies walk together, followed by their attendants. Should they meet a gentleman of their acquaintance, they cordially invite him to join them in their passo.

If he be a Peruvian he takes his place behind the ladies and chats over their shoulders as they pass along. Should he happen to be a grengo, as foreigners are termed, he would be politely asked to walk in the rear, and would suffer from solid indifference unless he should sufficiently compensate the attendants—which is no difficult matter—to remain in some alley until the return of the ladies.

If this arrangement is consented to by all, the young people seek secluded streets, where they are not liable to meet with parents and friends, and where all formality is thrown aside.

If it should transpire that this gentleman calls upon these young ladies the following evening, the coolness of his reception would indicate that they had never before met; but he would be ushered into the parlor and hospitably received by the family.

Young ladies are not allowed to receive gentlemen callers in private. One of the parents, a sister or an attendant assists in entertaining, and at times the whole family.

The mother, knowing the passionate disposition of her race, constantly endeavors to screen her daughter from secluded male company until her marriage. After marriage she is free to invite to her house all her lovers and endeavors to entertain them, whether her husband is there or not.

This newly gained freedom extends further—to the extent that she is now at liberty to indulge in flirtations upon the streets or in the gardens, with her fascinating glances luring her admirers to her home.

However, many daughters are exasperated beyond patience from observing the flirtations of a married sister or other relative, and devote the evenings upon the balcony passing notes to their lovers.

Perhaps he, a stranger, first attracted her attention as she leaned over the balcony by passing several times beneath the balcony. If she desires his acquaintance he receives some signal which emboldens him to bow or pass a card to the lady.

The initiatory being over, evenings are passed in this manner until the acquaintance has ripened into friendship, when the gentleman is free to call or stroll through the plaza or garden. These balcony scenes being clandestine, they are not enacted until a late hour, when the mother is unconscious of her daughter's whereabouts, as she has been carefully watched until she is safely lodged in her bedroom, with its barred windows.—San Francisco Chronicle.

GOT THE BEST OF THE DOCTOR.

W. F. Beyer, Gallipolis, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have worn what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was so far gone she could see with difficulty, and had a terrible cough, which induced us to try a bottle of your Permanent Catarrh Cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured. Paperion (six racks of flax) Catarrh Cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

How awful and right it is that gifts and good wishes should fill the air like snow flakes at Christmas tide. And beautiful is the year in its coming and in its going—most beautiful and blessed because it is always the Year of Our Lord.

Here is an old Scotch verse concerning Christmas:

Yule comes and Yule is gone
And we'll be merry while we may
Let Jock hammer the ironing iron
An' Jennie to her wheel

Are You Taking It?

"Are you taking the F. E. C. Kidney Remedy?" is becoming a common inquiry. The F. E. C. is known to be an honest remedy and is doing a world of good. J. J. Orr sells it.

Stanley Is All Right.

News of Him from Two Different Sources.

HE REACHES EMIN'S HEADQUARTERS

And Then Goes Back to Bring Up His Baggage Train—King Milan's Tenure of Office Somewhat Shaky—Feats of an Egyptian Soldier at Suakim—Dr. Tanner Raises Cain in Parliament—Banquet to Minister McLane—Foreign Notes.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—A telegram from Zanzibar says: "Letters dated Stanley Falls, Aug. 28, have been delivered here by Tippoo Tib's men. They state that a letter was received at Stanley Falls from Henry M. Stanley, Aug. 28. Stanley was then at Bonyala, on the Aruwhimi river, where he had arrived on Aug. 17. He had left Emin Pasha eighty two days before in perfect health and provided with plenty of food. Stanley had returned to Bonyala for the loads in charge of his rear guard, and intended to leave ten days later to rejoin Emin. He reported all the whites in the expedition healthy, and said that the expedition wanted nothing.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

In the commons last night Goschen read a telegram received by the West African Telegraph company from St. Thomas, reporting the arrival of Stanley and Emin at Aruwhimi. The government, Goschen said, had no direct official news on the subject. The telegram was received by the members with the most intense interest. The purport of the dispatch more than confirms the news received by the way of Zanzibar, and the fact that both dispatches were received on the same day, coming from both sides of Africa, is regarded as not only a remarkable coincidence, but almost indisputable evidence of Stanley's safety. It is now believed by many, as it has all along been believed by a few, that Stanley and Emin are en route to the mouth of the Congo river, and it is expected that the next news from them will be received from that point.

A dispatch to The Times from Zanzibar says: "Tippoo Tib's messengers came by way of Gubis, Upi, and Unianyembe, with letters from Stanley dated to Aug. 28. They confirm the other accounts that Stanley left Emin with Casati, and that both were perfectly well. The messengers will return shortly to Tippoo Tib."

Among the items of information contained in the letter received from Stanley on Aug. 28, was the statement that he had written to Emin that he was in possession of vast stores of ivory and an abundance of corn and food, and that he intended to leave Bonalya at the end of August.

A DASH AT DERVISHES.

Arabs Before Suakim Easily Driven by the British.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The British attack upon Arabs before Suakim was opened this morning. Frames exploded at 7 o'clock Thursday morning. It was finished in half an hour. It was a desperate and bloody contest. Gatling guns were used under the direction of Colonel Kitchener, who was in command. The Arabs were all the prepared and admirably hid. The forces advanced in order for the attack at dawn. When the British were within range the Arabs opened upon them with a heavy fire. The British responded with volleys of musketry and shrapnel. The Arabs were driven back in confusion. The British then advanced and pressed on until they reached the Arab camp. The Arabs were easily driven from their position. The British left Suakim at 3 o'clock this morning.

The Arabs were apparently ready to resist the attack. They fought like tigers to the last. Their dead lay piled over the redoubts. The ditches were filled with the dead. It was a bloody contest. The Arabs, besides, had the spears and swords, which they used throughout the battle. At the close range they used their guns. It was practically a battle between bayonets and small arms. It was soon seen, however, that the Arabs were no match for the British. Despite their valor and steadfast resistance, they were driven back at the point of the bayonet. The British lost twelve killed and wounded, and their Egyptian auxiliaries forty, including two officers wounded. The Arab loss is estimated at 400 killed and wounded. The Egyptians fought well and captured all the Arab cannons.

A Regular Black Butcher.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Prominent among the many detached incidents of the fighting at Suakim is the conduct of Ali Khool, an immense black, who used his bayonet with such vehemence that six inches of the point of the weapon was broken off and the barrel of the Enfield rifle to which it was attached was bent. It is estimated that he killed twenty Arabs. Upwards of 100 of the Enfield rifles used by the black troops were bent, twisted, or broken. Osman Digma's nephew, who made his name famous among the Arabs for his prowess and was finally taken prisoner, is dead.

MILAN MAY HAVE TO EMIGRATE.

The Result of Which May be a Russian Rule and Queen Natalie's Triumph.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—[Copyrighted, 1888.]—Dispatches from Belgrade state that the troubles growing out of the recent elections for the skoptschina are increasing, and the inhabitants in many parts of Servia are in a state of revolt. No open demand has yet been made for King Milan's abdication, but this is probably what the outcome of the disturbances will be. The defeat of M. Gorashanin, the Progressive leader, for re-election to the skoptschina is evidence of the contempt with which the king is held. M. Gorashanin is very near Milan, and is a hearty supporter of his sovereign, whose adviser he has long been. His defeat is the cause of much rejoicing among the Radicals. The victory achieved by the Radicals is many politicians of Europe foreshadows Russian rule in Servia before long. The Radicals are pro-Russian to a man, and would be glad to make it possible for the Czar to assume the rule of Servia. A way may be found to accomplish this object by the abdication of Milan and the appointment of Natalie as regent for her son. Then Russia would practically be master of the country.

Tanner Calls Balfour a Liar.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The house of commons being in committee on the appropriation bill last night, Gorst in the chair, Tanner, home rule member for Middle Cork, opposed the grant of £300 to Seagrave, an Irish resident magistrate. The chairman ruled the amendment of Tanner out of order. Tanner protested against the ruling, and said: "When we are here in committee appropriating money for a swindler and a thief and a servant of the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Balfour ought to be here, and not be such a coward as he is."

Gorst ordered Tanner to take his seat, and to withdraw the epithet "coward."

Tanner—I call him both a coward and a liar.

Goschen moved that Tanner be suspended. The motion was agreed to, and Tanner left the house.

Minister McLane Banqueted.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—A dinner was given at the National club last night in honor of Minister McLane. Among those present were M. Leroyer, president of the senate, Bartholdi, Cochery and Fallier. The speakers expressed their regret at the probable departure of Mr. McLane, and the latter responded in a speech asseverating his love for France. He expressed himself as certain that his successor would fulfill his duties satisfactorily and be as firm a friend to France as himself.

THE SOLONS AT WORK.

Proceedings in the Senate and House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 19.—The senate yesterday debated for a long time a resolution to fix the hour of meeting at 11 a. m., to take a recess at 5:30, and meet again at 8 p. m. The Democrats opposed it and it went over, as did the house concurrent resolution for a holiday adjournment which was reported back with an amendment providing that the senate take no holiday recess. The tariff bill was then resumed. An amendment reducing the duty on iron and steel wire valued at not more than 10 cents a pound, to 35 per cent. instead of 45 per cent. ad valorem was agreed to. Three pages of the bill were gone over, and the senate held a secret session, after which it adjourned.

The house, after a long political debate, passed the legislative appropriation bill, and then adjourned. An amendment to strike out the whole section referring to the civil service commission was defeated by a vote of 150 to 78.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 20.—The senate yesterday agreed to a resolution calling on the naval office for information as to the expenditure of $85,000 appropriated for construction and repair, and also to a resolution the preamble of which was a request for information as to whether the proposed New York custom house had not been planned larger than the lot it is to stand upon. The tariff debate was proceeded with and a number of amendments offered by Democratic senators were reported. Voorhees savagely attacked the bill, declaring it in several features a partisan blow at the south. After an executive session the senate adjourned.

Springer announced to the house that he would call up the bill for the admission of territories Jan. 15. The house refused to consider the bill allowing a cent to every member of congress not a committee chairman. The river and harbor bill was taken up and debated by Burnham and others, and pending further debate the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 21.—The senate got rather badly mixed yesterday in an effort to adjourn over the holidays from today until Jan. 2, the Democrats agreeing that voting on the tariff bill and amendments shall begin Jan. 4, 5 or 6, and continue without debate, unless unanimous consent is given therefor, and the bill is pressed to a vote, after a recent precedent, by a majority of the senators from Rhode Island and Nevada, and by a majority of the Democrats. Beyond this and a few other unimportant matters the tariff bill the day's work was a decrease in the duty on wire, which was carried by a vote of 37 to 25, and a resolution calling for a further statement of the expenditures on the Washington aqueduct. The senate then adjourned.

The house agreed to the senate amendments to the bill incorporating the American Historical society, and to the conference report on the bill for relief of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. The holiday recess resolution, as adopted by the senate, was agreed to. It was agreed to limit debate on the river and harbor bill to an hour and a half. The consideration of the bill goes far as the commencement of reading it by paragraphs when the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 22.—The senate yesterday passed the deficiency bill for the public printing office—$85,000. A resolution was adopted instructing the public buildings committee to investigate the supervising architect's office and one asking the treasury for a statement of bond purchases since March 4, 1885, was also agreed to. The tariff bill was taken up again, but no progress made except in oratory. The house amendments to the senate bill forfeiting the Marquette & Ontonagon railway land grant in Michigan were non-concurred in, and after a brief secret session the senate adjourned to Wednesday Jan. 2, 1889.

Beyond consideration of the Nicaragua canal bill the house transacted no business of importance yesterday. This bill was amended as follows: Requiring all securities of the canal to be issued at the New York office, and that they shall all be paid for in cash; requiring the majority of the directors to be citizens and residents of this country, and all either Americans or Nicaraguans; providing that no change affecting American rights shall be made without the consent of the United States; requiring annual reports to the secretary of the interior, and declaring false statements perjury, and punishing them as such. The previous question was ordered on the bill and amendments, and after a few unimportant ones had been disposed of the house adjourned to Jan. 2.

NATURAL GAS ACCIDENTS.

A Woman Seriously Burned and Two Buildings Destroyed.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 20.—An explosion of natural gas yesterday completely wrecked the residence of Charles White, in Haughville, an suburban village, and so seriously burned Mrs. White that her recovery is doubtful. A trap on one of the pipes had been left off, and when the gas was turned on the house was at once filled by gas and an explosion followed.

FINDLAY, O., Dec. 20.—Leakage in a natural gas pipe yesterday afternoon caused a fire in the Western Rapid Typewriter factory. The building was entirely consumed, with all its contents. The loss is $30,000, with $5,000 insurance.

Pulitzer's Gift Accepted.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—The municipal council of Paris have accepted the statues of Lafayette and Washington, presented to the city by Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, of The New York World.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferer are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Micro-scopic research, however, has proven this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent in receipt of ten cents by A. H. DIX ON & SON, 303 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Indian Names in Wisconsin.

Our readers are aware that most of the names of places in this vicinity are derived from the Indian tongue, some of them having been altered somewhat for the sake of euphony, as, for instance, Peshtigo for Pe-shet-i-go. We interviewed our old friend Captain Powell, the other day, who is well along in years, and was born here, and is almost as familiar with the Indian language as the Indians themselves, and he gave us the following as the significations of some of the names of the places in this vicinity:

Suamico—The yellow sand.
Oconto—The place of the pickerel.
Pensaukee—The place of the brants.
Peshtigo—Snapping turtle.
Menominee—Wild rice.
Menekaune—The place where the lodges are; literally, the village.
Escanaba—A flat rock.
Manitowoc—The dwelling of the spirit.
Kewaunee—The name of a kind of duck.

Thus it will be seen that the Indians named places after some peculiarity of the location; or, as in the case of Manitowoc, after some superstition. Most of the American names are utterly meaningless, as applied to the locality, and we like the Indian plan the best.

Take for instance, Appleton, Seymour, New London, Preble, etc., which convey no idea whatever. Bellevue is better, but it is French, and is duplicated in other languages, as, for instance, Buena Vista, in Spanish. Fond du Lac is good and conveys an idea.

Oshkosh perpetuates the name of an Indian chief, and Marinette that of an Indian woman and both are very good.—Green Bay Advocate.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free.

The Passion for Betting.

Years ago when riding with the late Rev. Dr. Bailard he remarked to us that he "did not like cards, so much gambling was done with them."

We replied:

"Doctor, we have just left the office and almost the last paragraph which we read was in relation to two young fellows about to attend church service, the men stopping at the door and making a bet upon the length of the sermon to be delivered."—Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph.

A Lifelike Dummy.

"Why can't they make these dummies more lifelike?" said a facetious fellow, halting with a friend in front of a clothing store on Market street and slapping a figure a vigorous blow on the cheek.

The "dummy" turned suddenly, let fly his left, and the facetious man went down on the pavement as though struck by a lightning express.—Philadelphia Times.

The Handsomest Lady in Tecumseh.

Remarked to a friend the other day that she knew Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs was a superior remedy, as it stopped her cough instantly when other remedies had no effect whatever. So to prove this and convince you of its merit, any druggist will give you a Sample Bottle Free. Large size 50c and $1.

Out of the Breastworks.

TATE SPRINGS, TENN., July 4, 1888.

The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—Seven years ago I contracted an exceedingly bad case of blood poison. I tried a physician, the best at command, but secured no benefit. My throat began to get sore, and my body covered with sores and ulcers. Going from bad to worse, I felt that my grave must be reached in the near future. I gave up the doctors' treatment and with a despairing hope I commenced taking your medicine. I began to improve from the first bottle, and in a short time the ulcers healed, and my skin cleared off and was entirely well.

Six years ago a case of catarrh developed in my system. The physician did his best, but could not cure me; but two bottles of Swift's Specific gave me permanent relief.

PRISCILLA spinning, long ago, sighs as she thinks how soon her linen
Will lose its glossy luster, when the wash it once or twice has been in.
She does not know that in the soap the evil lies that makes her suffer.
Its great excess of alkali, which cuts the fiber, makes it rougher.

Our modern maidens need not sigh since IVORY SOAP has been invented,
Containing no free alkali—by which the ruin is prevented.
For linen washed with IVORY SOAP in snowy beauty'll ne'er diminish,
But always, while it lasts, preserve its pristine gloss and lustrous finish.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

BILL NYE IN VIRGINIA.

HE DESCRIBES SOME OF THE BEAUTIES OF MONTICELLO.

An Attack on Fort Moultrie Graphically Described—The Man Who Lost His Hat and Why He Lost It—The Stranger Who Was Hard to Get Rid Of.

Loose in Virginia, along the latter part of this season, shortly previous to the writing of these lines, I visited Monticello, the former home of Thomas Jefferson, also his grave. Monticello is about an hour's ride from Charlottesville, by diligence. One rides over a road constructed of rip-rap and broken stone. It is called a macadamized road, and twenty miles of it will make the pelvis of a long waisted man chafe against his ears. I have decided that the site for my grave shall be at the end of a trunk line somewhere, and I will endow a dreaka to carry passengers to and from said grave.

Whatever my life may have been, and however short I may have fallen in my great struggle for a generous recognition of the American people, I propose to place my grave within reach of all.

Monticello is reached by a circuitous route to the top of a beautiful hill, on the crest of which rests the brick house where Mr. Jefferson lived. We enter a lodge gate in charge of a venerable negro, to whom we pay two bits apiece apiece for admission. This sum goes toward repairing the roads, according to the ticket which we get. It just goes toward it, however; it don't quite get there, I judge, for the roads are still appealing for aid. Up through a neglected thicket of Virginia shrubs and ill kempt trees we drive to the house. It is a house which would readily command $750 if sold this fall, with queer porches to it and large, airy windows. The top of the whole hill was graded level, or terraced, and must have required an enormous quantity of work to do it, but Jefferson did not care. He did not care for fatigue. With 200 slaves of his own and a dowry of 300 more, which was poured into his coffers by his marriage, Jeff did not care how much toil it took to polish off the top of a bluff or how much the sweat stood out on the brow of a hill.

Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. He sent it to one of the magazines, but it was returned as not available, so he used it in Congress and got it afterward printed in the Record.

I saw the chair he wrote it in. It is a plain, old fashioned wooden chair, with a kind of bosom board on the right, upon which Jefferson used to rest his Declaration of Independence whenever he wanted to write it.

He also has an old gig stored there in the house. In this gig he used to ride from Monticello to Washington in a day. This is a lie, but it goes with the place. It takes from 8:30 A. M. to noon to ride this distance on a fast train, and in a much more direct line than the old wagon road ran.

Mr. Jefferson was the father of the University of Virginia, one of the most historic piles I have ever clapped eyes on. It is now under the management of a classical janitor, who has a tinge of negro blood in his veins, mixed with the rich Castilian blood of somebody else.

He has been at the head of the university of Virginia for over forty years, bringing in the coals and exercising a general oversight over the curriculum. He is a modest man, with a tendency toward the classical in his researches. He took us up on the roof, showed us the outlying country, and jarred our ear drums with the big bell. Mr. Estes, who has charge of Monticello—called Montechello—said that Mr. Jefferson used to sit on his front porch with a powerful glass, and watch the progress of the work on the university, and if the workmen undertook to smuggle in a soft brick Mr. Jefferson, five or six miles away, detected it, and bounding lightly into his saddle, he rode down there to Charlottesville and clubbed the bricklayers till they were glad to pull down the wall to that brick and take it out again.

This story is what made me speak of that section a few minutes ago as an outlying country.

Charles L. Seigel told us the other day of an attack on Fort Moultrie during the early days of the war, which has never been printed. Mr. Seigel was a German Confederate during the war, and early in the fight was quartered, in company with others, at the Moultrie house, a seaside hotel, the guests having deserted the house.

Although large soft beds with curled hair mattresses were in each room, the department issued ticks or sacks to be filled with straw for the use of the soldiers, so that they would not forget that war was a serious matter. Nobody used them, but they were there all the same.

Attached to the Moultrie house, and wandering about the back yard, there was a small orphan jackass, a sorrowful little light blue mammal, with a tinge of bitter melancholy in his voice. He used to dwell on the past a good deal, and at night he would refer to it in a voice that was choked with emotion.

The boys caught him one evening as the gloaming began to arrange itself, and then threw him down on the green grass. They then pulled a straw bed over his head, and inserted him in it completely, cutting holes in it for his legs. Then they tied a string of sleigh bells to his tail, and hit him a smart, stinging blow with a blacksnake.

Probably that was what it was that suggested to him the idea of strolling down the beach, past the guard, and on toward the fort.

The darkness of the night, the rattle of the boots, the clash of the bells, the quick challenge of the guard, the failure to give the countersign, the sharp volley of the sentinels, and the wild cry "to arms," followed in rapid succession. The tocsin sounded, also the slogan. The culverin, ukase, and door tender were all fired. Huge beacons of fat pine were lighted all along the beach. The whole slumbering host sprang to arms, and the crack of the musket was heard through the intense darkness.

In the morning the enemy was found intrenched in a mud hole, south of the fort, with his new clean straw tick spattered with clay and a wildly disheveled tail.

On board the Richmond train last week, as pulled out of Petersburg, a man lost his hat, and it fell by the side of the track. The train was just moving slowly out of the station, and so he had a chance to jump off and run back after it. He got the hat, no doubt, but not till we had placed seven or eight miles between us and him. We could not help feeling sorry for him, because very likely his hat had an embroidered hat band in it, presented by one dearer than life itself, and so we worked up quite a feeling for him, though, of course, it was very foolish for him to lose his train just for a hat, even if it did have the needlework of his soul's idol in it.

Yesterday I was surprised to see the same man in Columbia, S. C., and he then told me this sad story:

"I started out a month ago to take a little trip of a few weeks, and the first day was very, very happy scrutinizing nature and scanning the faces of those I saw. On the second day out I ran across a young man whom I had known slightly before, and who is engaged in the business of being a companionable fellow and life of the party. That is about all the business he has. He knows a great many people, and his circle of acquaintances is getting larger all the time. He is proud of the enormous quantity of friendship he has acquired. He says he can't get on a train or visit any town in the Union that he don't find a friend.

"He is full of stories and witticisms, and explains the plays to theatre parties. He has seen a great deal of life and is a keen critic. He would have enjoyed criticising the Apostle Paul and his elocutionary style if he had been one of the Ephesians. He would have criticised Paul's gestures, and said, 'Paul, I like your epistles a heap better than I do your appearance on the platform. You express yourself well enough with your pen, but when you spoke for the Ephesian Y. M. C. A., we were disappointed in you and we lost money on you.'

"Well, he joined me, and finding out where I was going, he decided to go also. He went along to explain things to me, and talk to me when I wanted to sleep or read the newspaper. He introduced me to large numbers of people whom I did not want to meet, took me to see things I didn't want to see, read things to me that I didn't want to hear, and introduced me to people who didn't want to meet me. He multiplied misery by throwing uncongenial people together and then said, 'Wasn't it lucky that I could go along with you and make it pleasant for you?'

"Everywhere he met more new people with whom he had an acquaintance. He shook hands with them, and called them by their first names, and felt in their pockets for cigars. He was just bubbling over with mirth and laughed all the time, being so offensively joyous, in fact, that when he went into a car he attracted the general attention, which suited him first rate. He regarded himself as a general favorite and all around sunbeam.

"When we got to Washington he took me up to see the president. He knew the president well—claimed to know lots of things about the president that made him more or less feared by the administration; knew a thousand little vices of all our public men, which virtually placed them in his power. He knew how the president conducted himself at home, and was 'on to everything' in public life.

"Well, he shook hands with the president, and introduced me. I could see that the president was thinking about something else, though, and so I came away without really feeling that I knew him very well.

"Then we visited the departments, and I can see now that I hurt myself by being towed around by this man. He was so free and so joyous and so bubbling that wherever we went I could hear the key grate in the lock after we went out of the door.

"He started south with me. He was going to show me all the battlefields, and introduce me into society. I bought some strychnine in Washington and put it in his buckwheat cakes, but they got cold, and he sent them back. I did not know what to do, and was almost wild, for I was traveling entirely for pleasure, and not especially for his pleasure either.

"At Petersburg I was told that the train going the other way would meet us. As we started out I dropped my hat from the window while looking at something. It was a desperate move, but I did it. Then I jumped off the train and went back after it. As soon as I got around the curve I ran for Petersburg, where I took the other train. I presume you all felt sorry for me, but if you'd seen me fold myself in a long, passionate embrace after I had climbed on the other train you would have changed your minds."

He then passed gently from my sight.—Bill Nye in Once a Week.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind. testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at

DR. A. HRASKY'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Death on the River.

A Mississippi Steamer Full of Passengers Burned.

THIRTY SOULS SENT TO ETERNITY

Terribly Rapid Work of the Flames and Frenzy of Those in Peril.

Bunchers Leap Overboard Before the Red Destroyer—A More Awful Disaster Averted by the Brave Pilot—A Dastardly Sheriff—Twenty-One Persons Injured in a Train Wreck, One Fatally—Two Frightful Explosions of Nitro Glycerine Many Houses Crushed and Several Lives Lost—Other Disasters.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 24.—The magnificent lower Mississippi steamer Kate Adams was burned about 9 o'clock yesterday morning near Commerce, Miss., and thirty of the 200 people on board lost their lives. The boat left Helena at 1 o'clock in the morning, loaded to the guards. Besides 1,200 bales of cotton the lower deck had forty passengers, while over 100 passengers found quarters in the cabin. Many were at breakfast when Peter's island, forty miles below this city, was reached. Ten minutes later a column of smoke was discovered ascending out of the cotton piled on the boat, and the crew rushed to the spot with buckets and hose.

The first bale tossed aside, disclosed a widespread conflagration in the cotton below. The alarm was given and First Pilot Barton, who was on duty at the wheel, turned the bow of the steamer toward the Mississippi shore.

The vessel burned like powder, and in a flash the flames had taken possession of the forward part of the cabin and spread along the rails toward the stern. The passengers rushed around in a state of panic impossible for the captain to check, or the officers to subdue. Many of them leaped overboard and were drowned, while some few of the men succeeded in swimming from the middle of the river to the shore.

Among the deck passengers the panic was, if anything, greater. Most of them were colored men, and upon the approach of the fire they jumped into the river. Only a few succeeded in reaching land. Among the deck passengers were six colored women, and in attempting to rescue them Second Clerk George Corbett lost his life. An attempt was made to lower the yawl, but in the struggle to take possession of it the yawl was capsized and several people drowned.

The pilot remained at his post though surrounded by flame and smoke, and soon had the burning steamer against the bank. It was none to soon, for already a score of people were cut off and compelled to jump into the river from the opposite side, and just how many were lost in this plunge is not known. About 150 half drowned and partially burned people were landed from the cabin deck. Those below had been cut off and the loss of life was heavy. The majority of them were forced into the water on the side of the boat where the water was deep and the current strong. Fortunately there were only a few women and children on board.

Capt. Mark R. Cheek, who was on the hurricane deck, remained there giving his commands until the stage plank was safely lowered. The fire by this time had spread all through the cabin and he was compelled to retreat to the rear, and climbed over the rails and descended to the cabin. As he was groping his way aft, he stumbled and fell over some chairs and lost all the valuables he had secured, and it was with great difficulty that he succeeded in reaching the rear through the blinding smoke and flames which filled the cabin. Capt. Cheek seized a life preserver and placing it on Clerk Blanker helped him overboard into the water. He floated down about three miles before he was rescued by parties who had walked ashore and followed him down the river.

The lost, so far as can be learned, are: George Corbett, third clerk, aged 39 years, who had launched the yawl and was trying to save the colored women on the lower deck—he leaves a wife who resides in St. Louis; Joe Porter, Andrew Rees, Monroe Jackson, Jim Nelson, Senator Coleman, and Hillyard Horton, all of the colored cabin crew; Lee Finlay and Frank Wells, colored roustabouts. In addition about fifteen deck passengers, four of whom were white men, were also drowned. In this list of unknown were three colored women and two children. They were coming to Memphis to spend the holidays. The whites had been working on the levees, and their names and destination are unknown.

The burning steamer drifted away, after laying at the bank for twenty minutes, and floated down the river, her hull sinking at the head of Peter's island, four miles below Commerce. Mrs Fields is positive that W. A. Covington, a planter and merchant of Rosedale, Miss., perished in the flames.

It is reported that a negro murderer, who was being brought back here for trial, perished on board the steamer. He was handcuffed, and the officer in charge made his escape and left the negro in his helpless condition and he was burned to death.

All the passengers and crew arrived at Memphis yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock. There were 167 from the ill-fated steamer that came to Memphis, Capt. Cheek defraying the expenses of all those who did not have funds.

Three of the colored cabin crew who were rescued from the water died afterwards.

TREMENDOUS EXPLOSIONS.

Four Nitro-Glycerine Magazines Blown Up with Loss of Life.

BRADFORD, Pa., Dec. 24.—At 6 o'clock Saturday evening three nitro-glycerine magazines, located at Buchanan Hollow, a mile and a half below this city, exploded with a tremendous noise. The magazines belonged to George Casterline, "Curley" Baker and French & Gormerley, and contained about 8,000 pounds of the deadly explosive. The shock was terrific, shattering windows and shaking houses and barns within a radius of five miles. James Stewart, a milkman, occupied a house about a quarter of a mile from the magazines. His dwelling tumbled to pieces, burying him, his wife and five children in the debris. Two of the children were badly injured, and will probably die. At Tarport, a suburb of this city, all the windows in the stores on the north side of Main street were shattered by the force of the explosion.

W. L. Ward's house near the magazines fell in and Mrs. Ward received probably fatal injuries. One side of Eugene Reddington's house fell in and two of his children were slightly hurt by falling timbers. It is reported that at the magazines two "shooters" were killed by the explosion. A large number of plate-glass windows on Main street this city, were shattered. This is the third explosion of nitro-glycerine magazines in this vicinity in the last two weeks.

A Boy Blown Out of Existence.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 24.—The Times' special from Wheeling, W. Va., says that a heavy booming explosion and a tremor of the earth was felt in that city and surrounding towns at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Nothing could be learned of the cause until last evening, when a report was received to the effect that it was caused by the explosion of 3,000 pounds of dynamite at Mt. Pleasant, O., seventeen miles from Wheeling. The details which are very meager, state that the town is wrecked and many people are killed. The dynamite was for the use of workmen engaged on the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad tunnel.

The cause of the accident was the dropping of fire from a pipe by a boy named William Gleck, who entered the building smoking a pipe. Twenty people were severely injured. Gleck was blown out of existence. The injured were in houses and shanties near by that were demolished by the shock.

NINE CARS LEAVE THE RAILS.

Twenty-One Victims of the Wreck, Two of Them Fatally Hurt.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—An accident occurred to the Atlantic express on the New York Central road at Churchville station at about 7:30 o'clock last evening, by which twenty-one persons were injured, two of whom will die. The train consisted of nine cars made up of a baggage, two coaches and six sleepers, and was running at a high rate of speed, being about two hours late. Just as the engine passed the station, the wheels of the tender left the track, on account of a spread rail. The cars all left the track and went through a fence into a field adjoining.

The following is a complete list of the injured: Mrs. J. H. McCormick, fatally, broken jaw, scalp wound, bruised about body—sawed from the car; Miss A. Tenny, Lewiston, Me., fatally, head and shoulders bruised; J. Williams, Chicago, slightly; J. T. Jones, Utica, N. Y., slightly; F. H. Harris, New Haven, Conn., scalp wound and back injured, seriously; John Doyle, New York, back injured; Mrs. Joseph Delaney, Batavia, N. Y., bruised about head and shoulders; L. O. Leonard, Anaconda, M. T., face and arms cut; A. Cauffman, New York, bruised about arms; H. E. Owens, New York, rib broken; H. A. Coats, Buffalo, Mrs. Scherer, Buffalo; John Donohue, San Francisco; F. E. Ellis, Buffalo; George S. Swift, Quincy, N. Y.; J. J. Bruck, Pulteny, N. Y.; Miss Minnie Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; G. W. Graves, Buffalo; N. W. Balfour, New York; N. T. Hobard, Buffalo—all slightly.

A Hotel Boiler Explodes.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 24.—The boiler in the Eagle Bridge hotel, Eagle Bridge, N. Y., exploded Saturday afternoon, and injured the following persons: Adam E. Reynolds, station agent for the Delaware & Hudson road, badly scalded; Conductor C. A. Frost, slightly scalded; Mrs. C. E. Kirby, both legs broken and otherwise badly hurt, probably fatally; Miss Hogan, of West Hebron, scalp wound four inches long and nose nearly severed; Neal McCann, badly cut on head; C. E. Kirby, hurt on hip and back; Mrs. D. Brown, wife of the hotel proprietor, badly hurt internally. The damage to the property is small.

A Quarter Million Dollar Fire at Lynn.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—A fire which was first discovered in the morocco factory of P. Lenox, at the corner of Market street and Harrison court, Lynn, about 7 o'clock Saturday, entirely destroyed the building and stock. The flames spread to the building in the rear, occupied by Harvey Bros., morocco manufacturers, and that also was burned. Several other dwellings in the immediate vicinity caught fire and were badly damaged. Total loss is estimated at $250,000.

Shot His Brother by Accident.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—James Dempsey, aged 27 years, of 502 West Twenty-third street, was shot and killed Saturday night by his brother William, during a struggle for the possession of a revolver. The shooting is claimed to have been accidental, and before dying James said that his brother was not to blame.

Killed by a Defective Brake Chain.

PUEBLO, Colo., Dec. 24.—At Cuchares, on the Denver & Rio Grande road, Saturday, Conductor William E. Comstock and Brakeman Henry Borst were turning a brake, when the chain broke and both men were thrown under the cars and instantly killed.

Eight Men Reported Killed.

NOGALES, A. T., Dec. 24.—A train load of railway laborers was wrecked on the Arizona & Southeastern railway Saturday near the Bisbee Copper camp. The cars rolled down an embankment and eight of the laborers are reported killed.

THE NEGROES SHOW FIGHT.

Prospect for More Bloodshed Over the Wahalak Affair.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 22.—The American's special correspondent, who has been at Wahalak, Miss., reporting the race troubles, telegraphs as follows from Artesia, Miss.: On my way to Columbus from Wahalak, where I thought the race war was over, I was intercepted by a message which read as follows:

"I have just received a note from the hills reporting the negroes surrounded and showing fight. They outnumber the whites, who will defer an attack until aid comes."

Similar telegrams have been sent to all adjoining towns, representing the necessity for more men as urgent. I will return tomorrow.

All Quiet at Bevier, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 20.—The latest information from the Bevier, Mo., coal mines, is that the grand jury has adjourned without finding any indictments against any of the rioters. Over forty witnesses were examined, but it was impossible to extract from them sufficient of the proper kind of testimony to base indictments upon. Neither side would give the other away.

Allen O. Myers Acquitted.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 24.—The jury in the trial of Allen O. Myers for complicity in the tally-sheet forgery, Saturday, after eight hours' deliberation, returned a verdict of not guilty. Five ballots were taken, the first standing seven for conviction and five for acquittal. Myers shed tears when the verdict was announced.

Our Trouble With Hayti Ended.

HAVANA, Dec. 23.—The difficulty between the United States and Hayti over the latter's seizure of the American vessel Haytien Republic is ended. The Haytien Republic has been formally delivered to the American squadron, that vessel and the Haytien ships at the same time saluting the American flag.

Ben Hopkins Pardoned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 21.—The president Friday pardoned Benjamin Hopkins, the embezzling Fidelity National bank assistant cashier, now in the Ohio state prison.

Dairy Column.

Edited by the Bureau of Dairy Information
CHICAGO, ILL.

For the encouragement of improved methods of Dairying. Information upon all matters relating to the manufacture of butter and cheese and handling of milk will be given in answer to questions mailed to the Bureau at above address.

"Heat (Fire) is a good servant but a bad master."

When I talk about heat it is only a comparative term as heat may be cold and cold heat according to circumstances. Perhaps I had better use the term temperature, and you readers will find out how much the above proverb becomes true in the dairy.

Cold is a bad master when it whistles through our barns setting the cows shivering; it is a bad master when the ice water compels the cows to convert corn into firewood in order to heat it up. But cold is a good servant when its intensiveness sends the cream globules flying up in less than 12 hours; it is a good servant when it cools our cream to the right temperature for churning; it is a good servant when it hardens our butter between each working; it is a good servant when it cools our railroad cars and store rooms. Heat is a bad master when it gets in its little work on the milk before it reaches the creamery or dairy; it is a bad master when it ripens our cream too much; it is a bad master when it prevents our butter from coming; when it assists our butter in going——off——. On the other hand what a good servant heat is when it warms our barns, when it warms the water for our cows, when it ripens our cream, when it softens our butter to the right temperature for working, and last but not least when it kills all germs and microbes in the skim milk before we send it back from the creamery or ship it to the city. In this case the heat at 98° is our master but at 180° is our servant. How important is this question of heat or cold in the dairy, and yet we find dairies, aye, even creameries where they have no thermometer or else a very unreliable one. The craving for cheap (and nasty) things has also developed the manufacture of cheap and unreliable thermometers and I have found them to vary as much as 4°, and in a conversation with Mr. Drummond (who is showing the Scotch farmers how to make cheese) he told me that he had found them to vary 5°. This is too much, and if I have succeeded in convincing you readers of the truth of the above proverb, I should advise them to buy at least one good reliable thermometer, that they may control the ——other thermometer with it.

Both heat and cold are good servants and bad masters.

Dairy Dots.

The fact of a creamery being established in a community means more to the dairy farmer than the increased price of their milk and cream. It means a diffusion of intelligence and improved ideas on the whole subject of dairying. Better cows, better care and better facilities for taking care of the milk and cream, and a general working up to do the best possible with their herds. That creameries have failed is a fact. But with that there is some compensation. The farmers have got started with improved appliances for handling their milk, and learned that good butter is always in demand. It is a fact that in localities where creameries on the gathered cream plan have been opened and closed, a much better article of dairy butter is produced than before, and the yield per cow has been increased from ten to twenty-five per cent.

The owner of several large creameries subscribed for one of the best dairy papers published, so as to give each patron a copy, for three months. This paper was full of good solid information concerning the dairy, giving the results of experiments in feeding and caring for stock, in fact a paper that every dairyman could read with profit. Out of 300 copies thus distributed free the publisher reports three actual subscribers. What a commentary on the intelligence or stupidity of the creamery patron. It would look as though the farmers either had all the information needed on this subject or else were so stupid as not to appreciate this information. Reading and thinking must be the rule if farmers want to make the most of their opportunities. Dairy farmers will find a subscription to a good dairy paper the best investment.

At the great Buffalo fair the first premium, for five packages, not less than 30 pounds, made at any factory, dairy or creamery, was awarded to the Green Mountain stock farm, of West Randolph, Vt. The herd is composed of pure blood Jerseys. The same farm took the first prize on farm dairy.

A feed of grain at milking time does much to induce the cows to give their milk in full, and adds to the quantity as well as to the quality.

Persons living in unhealthy localities may avoid all bilious attacks, by taking a dose of Laxador occasionally to keep the liver in a healthy action. Price only 25 cents a package. At all druggists.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,

B. L. Baxter was in town this morning. He will go to Ridgeway and Deerfield on business to-morrow and Saturday and will return to Battle Creek Monday.

Weddings are becoming fashionable at the Lilley House. Rumor says that one of the proprietors will go next, but which one is a mystery, for Ben and Charley both plead "not guilty."

Edgar Ide has obtained a position as assistant collection clerk in the Preston Nat'l bank, of Detroit, and began his new duties Monday morning. This is another step up the ladder.

THE CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The fourth annual Christmas party, given at the Opera House on Tuesday night, eclipsed all its predecessors. The room was tastily decorated with evergreen festoons and Chinese lanterns which produced a very handsome effect by gas light. Promptly at eight o'clock Wolfe's Orchestra took their place on the platform and treated the crowded galleries to a few fine orchestral selections during which time "Ye merrie dancers" were gathering on the floor below. Mr. James Locke's performance with two cornets at one time evoked the most rapturous applause and he was obliged to respond to two hearty encores. About nine o'clock the grand march was called on, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Eccles, and the display was second only that of the concert. It is but justice to say that Mr. Eccles rather surpassed himself in this direction. The old figures were nicely executed and some new combinations were given that took down the house. The dancing fraternity of Tecumseh were mostly present, and many young society people from adjoining towns were also in attendance. "Van" was in the van as usual in the cuisine department of the affair. The tables were spread in Armory Hall, and enough covers were placed to accommodate the entire company at once. No company of dancers ever partook of a better supper in Tecumseh.

The attendance was such that all expenses was paid and the committee in charge had the satisfaction of balancing all bills without drawing upon their private funds. There were 36 dance tickets sold, 62 gallery tickets, reserved and 258 general admission.

The committee of arrangements consisted of the following young men: Jas. A. Boyd, Will Hayden, Thede Harris, Fred Tiffany, Will Whiting, Chas. Bell, Geo. Field, E. A. Ward, B. J. Garlinghouse and C. E. Patterson.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

What is a rainy Christmas the sign of?

The Romeo Hydrant takes sweet cider on subscription.

Frank H. Hall is enjoying his holiday vacation at home.

Harry Dunn, of Chicago, is spending the holidays at his old home.

Will Baker, of Detroit, spent Christmas with his parents in Tecumseh.

We understand that Woolston Comfort has moved to Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Ware have been spending a few days at Wm. Hayden's.

Mrs. Judge Stacy is passing holiday week with her son George, at Elgin, Ill.

Prof. E. A. Wilson is attending the teachers' association at Lansing this week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Bordine went to Battle Creek Monday to remain over Christmas.

Jas. W. Patterson came home from Elkhart, Ind., Monday to spend Christmas with his family.

Passenger travel is very heavy now on all roads, owing to half fare rates during holiday week.

The Universalist S. S. will give a Christmas concert on Sunday evening next, Dec. 30. All are invited to attend.

Lyster H. Dewey, of the Agricultural college is at home during the holidays, and spent Christmas with Tecumseh friends.

Both teachers and scholars are enjoying their winter vacation of two weeks. The next term will begin on Monday, Jan. 7.

Miss Nellie Locke, sister of the double cornet player, James Locke, of Toledo, was the guest of Mrs. Wm. Tilton Christmas day and night.

J. W. Wooden has secured a business position at Battle Creek, and if the place proves to be congenial and profitable he may move his family there.

J. H. Smith had a family Christmas tree at his residence. His friends from Cambridge were down and they enjoyed a very pleasant family reunion.

Geo. S. Spafford and wife left home Monday for Lansidg where he will remain most of the week visiting his friends there and taking in the sights of the capital city.

Will Spayde had a family reunion at his house on Christmas. A brother from Grand Rapids was present, and a sister whom he had not seen for nine years.

The new clock placed in the postoffice last week is a beauty, and is a novelty in the way of advertising clocks. The postoffice clock will compete with the "regulators" hereafter in furnishing correct time.

Palmer & Russell left a fine sample of their red and white celery at our office the other day. They were both prime. The red variety will keep until May and will, we believe, be quite popular.

C. H. Hopkins and his daughter, Mrs. Will Wooden, arrived Monday from Longmont, Colo., where they have been sojourning for several months. Mrs. Wooden's health has been very much improved by her stay there.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hayden enjoyed an old fashioned family reunion on Christmas day. Every member of the family was present except Levi, who is away at school. Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hayden, of Milan, and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Ware were among those who partook of the parental hospitality.

The Baptist Sunday school observed Christmas by giving an entertaining concert at their church last Sunday evening. The school did finely and the recitations and songs were very pleasantly rendered. At the close of the exercises, Orrin Finch delivered a neat little speech, and in behalf of the school presented an elegant upholstered chair to the superintendent, Dr. L. G. North. The Doctor was taken by surprise, and—as you might say—"completely floored," but recovered himself and replied in a few feeling remarks, thanking the donors for the gift. He has officiated as superintendent for that school nine years.

The public installation of officers of the Masonic lodge last Friday evening was well attended and passed off to the satisfaction of all concerned. The installation ceremony was recited by Lucius Lilley, Esq., in his usual felicitous manner, after which Rev. Getchell delivered a brief address that was well received. Music was furnished at intervals during the evening by Prof. Paul Ahrens' orchestra, with Miss Jennie Root at the organ, and two selections were given by the City band. After the installation exercises, the audience passed the remainder of the evening in social chat, and at the banquet table. Masons and their wives were present in full force, and among the guests there was also quite a sprinkling of outsiders. It was nearly midnight before the last table was served and the guests departed to their homes.

Happy New Year to all.

Miss Stella Cleveland visited Adrian Christmas day.

Paul Ahrens spent Christmas at his home in Adrian.

Miss Nellie Reynolds is visiting her sister in Detroit.

Bert Hause was shaking hands with his old friends Christmas day.

Walter Fowler, of Ann Arbor was the guest of J. J. Orr's family Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Tribou went to Detroit Monday to stay during the holidays.

Miss Carrie Burger, of Elgin, Ill., arrived home this week and will remain a few days.

S. A. James and wife and Alf. James and wife, of Detroit, ate Christmas turkey with their Tecumseh friends.

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Adams and Mrs. Fred Miles, of Battle Creek, are spending the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ross.

Harris & Hitesho collared a Clinton man in the act of making off with a pair of gloves in their store Monday, and he paid several times the price of the gloves in order to keep the matter quiet.

The mail at the postoffice for the past three days has exceeded all precedent. Six large sacks containing packages and bundles were received Monday, and nearly as much more on Tuesday.

Sheriff Fessenden, of Mt. Pleasant, dropped in upon his Tecumseh friends the day before Christmas. Yesterday he went to Hudson to visit his brother and will return home the last of the week. He was re-elected sheriff of Isabella county in November.

Christmas was very generally observed in Tecumseh. The business houses were nearly all closed, and our citizens gave themselves up to the festivities of the day. The weather was adapted to indoor enjoyment and everybody made the mos of it.

Our thanks are due Cub Berdan for a copy of his latest vocal composition entitled "Comrades Forever," a G. A. R. song. It is arranged for the piano with a song and chorus. It is a beautiful melody, and ought to find a place in the musical collection of all G. A. R. families.

The biennial report of the Reform School at Lansing is on our table, which gives a large amount of valuable statistics relating to the school. Lenawee county is credited with 143 boys up to date. Chas. A. Gower, the present superintendent seems to be the right man in the right place.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. of Tecumseh have organized a sewing society to meet the last Friday in each month. The first meeting will be held Friday, Dec. 28, at the home of Mrs. N. R. Merritt, on Logan st., at 2 p.m. All ladies and gentlemen interested in temperance work are cordially invited. Supper will be served from 5 to 6:30. Tickets 10c.

A fine crowd assembled at Armory hall Monday evening and indulged in tripping the light fantastic until the small hours of Christmas morning admonished them to desist. The music by Hubbard & Macham's orchestra was all that could be desired. The attendance was good, while mirth and music ruled the hour.

G. W. Jackson will hereafter, in addition to wagon and carriage repairing, run a general repair shop, which means anything needing repairing—shears, skates, and saws of all kinds sharpened. All work promptly done at hard pan prices, and guaranteed to suit, which a trial will prove. Shop in Rowland's blacksmith shop, opposite the rink.

Another wedding was celebrated at the Lilley House on Christmas Eve, when Frank C. Rising, was united in marriage to Martha E. Maynard by Rev. J. M. Getchell. Both of the contracting parties are employees of the hotel but they will retain their old positions, and the hotel will continue to entertain guests. In fact it seemed as though the Christmas dinner was better than ever.

The State Republican, of Lansing, is one of our most valued exchanges. Under the editorial management of L. J. Bates it has become recognized as among the ablest Republican papers, not only of Michigan, but of the western states. Published at the State capital, it possesses facilities for obtaining political news second to none of its contemporaries, and its circulation is rapidly increasing. May its shadow never grow less.

The Presbyterian church was the scene of a happy gathering Christmas eve. A huge evergreen adorned the platform, loaded down with nick-nacks and costly gifts for members of the Sunday school. A brief musical and literary program was given appropriate to the event. At its close a rustle was heard in the vestibule, and presently old Santa Claus himself marched down the center aisle with a dignified air that was truly bewitching. He went "straight to his work" without fooling away any time in parley, and the tree was stripped of its fruit in short order. An hour there was well spent, simply to see the little folks enjoy themselves.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

EDITOR HERALD—In my endeavors to write up this country I may repeat some that I have written.

San Diego and National City are built on the Mosa land on the northeast portion of the bay, and for a distance of about 20 miles around the bay the land is all laid off into city plats, one joining on to the other, and more or less improved. Before the enterprise was inaugurated quite a number of people invested in small tracts of land and began improvements by sinking wells, erecting wind mills, laying pipes for irrigation, setting out trees, etc., for the purpose of testing the practicability of growing fruit. The expense of providing water for irrigation was very heavy, but it was demonstrated that all the semi-tropical and most of the tropical fruits could be successfully grown here, and most of them with profit; and after the trees come into full bearing a fair profit is realized. A great many are investing in small tracts of from one to ten acres with a view of growing fruit. An extensive system of water supply has been inaugurated intended to supply this whole section with abundance of water at low cost. One bringing the water to this place from nine miles back in the mountains was completed last March. Another to bring the water 25 miles nearly completed. Extensive dams have been built to provide reservoirs, and the water is conducted in flumes and pipes. A full discription of these works will be given in another letter.

Evergreens are planted very extensively; the cypress is also used for hedges in front of lots in the city and in many cases surround the entire place, and on the windward side are trimmed high to form wind breaks. When properly trimmed they present a very beautiful appearance. The cypress, the pepper and the cassia tree is used extensively for shade trees along the streets. They are all beautiful trees and are green the year round.

The olive is also planted along the streets for shade and profit. It grows everywhere and almost spontaneous. It is claimed that great profit is derived from growing it for the oil. The fig and olive will produce two crops in the season if irrigated. The orange and lemon need water to be profitable. The raisin and wine grape do well on both valley and hill land without irrigation. It is useless to attempt to name all the varieties of fruit that can be grown here by the selection of proper location and soils and proper cultivation. I shall have to reserve for another letter the mode of growing and caring for the fruit, as in this letter I intend more particularly to give a discription of the Bay region.

San Diego is situated on the northeast point of the bay. The land slopes gradually back for a distance, then rises abruptly to high table lands from which fine views can be had of Ocean Bay and surrounding country, and is beautiful for residences for those who like elevated positions and fine views. The formation of the land is such that it has required a great deal of labor and expense to grade the streets, and they have fine streets. San Diego is a port of entry, and is the county seat. The government has a military post, and a company of soldiers stationed here. The city is laid out over three miles square. I has many fine business blocks, hotels and residences that would do credit to Chicago. The growth of San Diego has been largely of the mushroom order, and figuratively speaking, houses have sprung up in a night. Building is done in an entirely different manner than in the east. The work is done cheaply and in a hurry, yet the dwelling, when finished, present a neat and fine appearance. The climate is such here that the people don't have to build for protection against frost and cold, hence a different style of building. There is a great variety of architecture exhibited which gives a pleasant and picturesque appearance to all the buildings in this section of the country. Nearly all the buildings have been of wood or frames veneered with brick, though there is a good many brick blocks and houses. There is a large amount of business done here, both in shipping and ordinary trade. Quite a large wholesale trade is carried on.

I will quote a few items from published statistics to give some idea of the amount of business done here. One of the sea captains told me that five years ago his vessel brought all the lumber that was used here. Now a large fleet is employed in the lumber business.

The total arrival of vessels for the year 1887 was 930, against 239 in 1886, not including coasting vessels, of which there were over 500 in 1887 against 114 in 1886. The receipts at the custom house for November, 1887, was $69,000, against $10,000 for the entire year ending June 30, 1886. The total receipts of lumber during 1887 was 131,205,000 feet over the preceding year. Its population of two years ago has grown to 27,000. The arrivals by rail and steamer at San Diego during 1887, was 82,520 as against 22,000 for the whole year of 1886. Over 30 miles of street grading was done the past year. The sewer system being put in embraces 47 miles at a cost of $400,000. San Diego has a park reservation of 1,400 acres. The real estate transfers for the year ending December 31, 1887, amounted to $26,064,193, an increase of $16,000,000 over '86. The total of freight arriving by water and rail in '87 was 175,000 tons, against 57,000 in '86. The city has gas and electric light, and more than 20 miles of street railway propelled by electricity steam motor, and horse power. These statistics are for the year 1887, and show the result of the boom. The boom collapsed last spring, and has a very depressing effect upon all this region. All classes are crippled, but, I have'nt heard of a single business failure. The times are hard, and are felt most by mechanics and laborers. There are a good many that can get none or but little work, who are holding on, hoping for business to improve, while hundreds have left. But this is not a dead place by any means. Its location and surroundings are such that it is bound to advance. There is considerable business and building going on, and improvements are being made. People from the east are beginning to arrive and a large influx is looked for after the holidays.

In my next I will continue my discription of the Bay region. A.D.S.

OBITUARY.

On Dec. 12th, 1888, at the residence of Frank Marshall in Franklin township, occurred the death of Garrett Marshall. The deceased was a son of Thomas and Mary Marshall. He was born Dec. 5, 1847, and came to Franklin in 1862 with his parents.

Having never been married he lived with his parents during their lifetime; since then with his brother Frank.

He was a kind and dutiful son and a loving brother, of a quiet and unostentatious disposition. He was one of the few natures that by their quiet manners and gentlemanly deportment seem to weave themselves into the hearts of their friends. Those who knew him best loved him most. The death of such an individual seems to give a greater shock to the community because it strikes a tender chord. He was one we loved to have among us. His influence was always on the side of truth and honor. His character was such as to have a marked effect upon the education of our children. His hold upon society was well attested by the large attendence at the funeral conducted by Rev. Mr. Williams, of Clinton. His remains will repose by the side of his father and mother, in the east part of Clinton township.

To Whom It May Concern.

The undersigned have purchased all book accounts due the Ohio & Mich. Coal & Mfg Co. Those having accounts due as above are requested to favor us with an early settlement.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

Many Phases of Editorial Life Called by The Detroit Free Press.

The last issue of the Arizona Kicker contains the following:

NEARING THE LIMIT.—We have been repeatedly asked why we did not open on the G. & S. railroad for its slow time, miserable cars, rough road, high rates and generally incompetent service. It is because we have been expecting an annual pass from the road. We applied for it three months ago, but have heard nothing as yet. We are nearing the limit. If that pass is not here inside of a fortnight we shall sound our bugle in a manner to make the officials of the road wish they had never been born.

NOT OUR FIGHT.—Maj. Rathbone made a personal assault on us last Tuesday, as we were about to interview the prosecuting attorney in regard to the Kellar affair. We presume it was because The Kicker of last week referred to the major as a liar and an absconder. We presume it was, although he made no explanation. A minute before he seized us we felt like fighting. A minute afterwards we were on the run. There are times when we can fight to the death, and other times when we can outrun any coyote in the glorious west. The major happened to get us on our off night, or he would otherwise have been reduced to pulp. There is a good deal of winking and chuckling around town, but we don't see anything to laugh at. If we didn't have our off spells we'd be a veritable terror to the whole district. It's lucky for Arizona that we were born that way.

ONLY OUR WAY.—We understand that Col. Colfax feels aggrieved because we referred to him last week as a dead beat bum who ought to be given a dose of White Cap medicine. The colonel should not be so thin skinned. It's only our way of keeping track of the leaders of society.

A FALSE ALARM.—A Chicago correspondent dropped in on us the other day for a brief visit, and after showing him our Washington hand-press, six varieties of job type and two bundles of print paper, we took him out for a survey of the town. The news had gone abroad that he was a Chicago detective, and it was laughable to note the effect upon our leading citizens. A dozen or more broke for the sage brush, without stopping for clean shirts, and so many others cut off their whiskers or donned false ones that we walked the whole length of Apache avenue without meeting a man we could recognize at first glance.

While there is nothing mean about us, this is a feature we are going to work about twice a month on this town. It will keep the boys unsettled and anxious, and may be the means of converting some of them from the error of their ways. It's an awful good feeling to feel that you are the only man in a town of 3,000 people whose liver don't kick the breath out of him every time a stranger comes along and takes a second look at the bridge of your nose.

WE COME DOWN.—We stated our belief last week that our contemporary, which is eternally bragging about its increase of circulation, did not print 150 copies weekly. We were honest in what we said. The old bristle backed hyena who claims to be editor and publisher sent for us yesterday to examine his books and figure up his circulation. We made the astounding discovery that he has a bona fide circulation of 163 copies. When we are right we stick to the limbs at all hazards. When we are wrong we let go and come down. We were wrong in this case. We come down. The Howling Coyote and Weekly Wish-Wash will please accept our humble apology.

DON'T FORGET IT.—In addition to the grocery in our front room, which is rapidly securing the cream of trade, we have established a tin shop in the rear of the shanty and propose to do all sorts of repairing. Later on we may and a harness shop and other needed enterprises. If we build in the spring, as we now figure on, we shall put in a marble shop and furnish gravestones cheaper than has ever been heard of in Arizona. We may also add a grist mill.

James Gordon Bennett, Henry Watterson and Amelie Rives may have time to junket around the country and show off their clothes, but we haven't. We are always at home. The Chicago Times may ridicule our grocery in connection with The Kicker, but there are no flies on us. Six bars for a quarter, and a horn comb thrown in. "Give us a call before purchasing elsewhere."—Detroit Free Press.

A Slip Somewhere.

We were humming along at the rate of thirty miles an hour on a train bound into Nashville, when I spotted a couple of three card monte men in the car. They had made up to a farmer like chap and had things all their own way. One of them tossed the cards and the other acted as a capper and made a hit of $20 the first thing. This was to egg the farmer on, and he was willing to be egged.

"Reckon I've got a leetle money that says I kin pick out that yere keard," he said, and he slowly counted out three $10 bills.

"You pick the ace of hearts, do you?" asked the thrower.

"She's the one."

"And which is it?"

"This ar' the one."

"And you bet $20 on it?"

"I do."

The card was turned over, and lo! it was the ace of hearts and the old man had won. He pocketed the money and the monte men retired in disgust. Later on I asked the thrower how he came to make such a mistake.

"Why, I paid a feller $20 to learn me the business the other day, and this is my first trip. There's $50 clean cash gone to Goshen, and I'm going back home to farm it for the old man at $18 a month."—Detroit Free Press.

Agreeably Disappointed.

Miss Clara—So Mr. Featherly acted as your escort at the Vancouver affair last week, I hear, Ethel.

Miss Ethel—Yes, Clara. Did he say he had a pleasant time?

Miss Clara—Oh, yes. I heard him say he had a much pleasanter time than he anticipated.—New York Sun.

A RAILROAD INCIDENT.

The Story of the Man with the Permanent Position.

The car was quite full, and I was down in a seat with a rather intelligent looking man who had a newspaper in his lap. He was pleasant and remarked that "it looked some like snow," which was a fact. Then he abused the railroad company for not providing better cars and making better time, and we were soon very friendly. It is always a great pleasure to meet a man on the train who will abuse the company with you and act as if he cared to make it pleasant for his fellow travellers. We found fault with the company until we were tired, and then he said he was going to Allegheny. He was going to settle down there, he said, and stop roaming around. He'd traveled a good deal in his time, but he'd concluded it didn't pay, and hereafter Allegheny was his home. He'd struck something there that he thought was sure to be a steady thing for several years at least, and he didn't see why he might not as well stay right there. In fact, he'd firmly made up his mind to it, and no consideration would induce him to move. He said if I ever happened in Allegheny to hunt him up, and I promised to do so. He would be glad to see me, he explained, any day I wasn't going to be out doing so. I told him if he was in New York at any time to come in and see me. He looked at the water cooler vaguely, and said he probably wouldn't be that way much, as his duties in Allegheny would keep him pretty closely confined. We chatted some time very pleasantly and found fault with the company some more, when he asked me cheerfully if I wouldn't please take off his hat and place it in the rack above, as it was getting rather warm in the car.

I looked at him as inquiringly as I knew how, but not learning anything that way, I asked him gently why he didn't take off his own hat. He wriggled his arms around a little, and the newspaper slipped off his lap, and I saw he was wearing a pair of adjustable steel handcuffs. He also had shackles on his ankles. A man in the seat behind rose and took off my companion's hat and put it in the rack, explaining as he did so that he was the county sheriff, and that he was taking my friend to Allegheny to serve a twenty year term in the penitentiary for pounding his brother over the head with a brick. I then went back and sat with a fat woman who was carrying a basket of eggs in her lap.—New York Tribune.

—Life.

Why Wasn't He a Comet?

Young Mr. Staylate was sitting in the dimly lighted parlor the other night watching a 17 year-old girl trying to keep awake long enough to see the morning star rise. They talked astronomy.

"I wish I was a star," he said, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting hands in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she replied, with a brooding earnestness that fell on his soul like a bare foot on a cold oilcloth, "because then you would only come around once in every 1,500 years."

He didn't say anything until he was half way to the front gate, when he turned around and shook his fist at the house and muttered between his teeth: "By the gods, it'll be a thundering sight longer than that before I come around again."

But by that time the poor girl was in bed and fast asleep.—New York World.

Her Apology.

A little girl who had a foolish habit of plain speaking was taken to the sewing circle with her mother. On entering the room, after exchanging greetings with several matrons of her acquaintance, Miss Truthful walked up to another lady, and in the confident tone of one who gives utterance to a self evident fact, she said, loudly enough for every one present to hear:

"Why, Mrs. Handley, how homely you are!"

While the victim was hiding her confusion as best she might, and the rest were trying hard to conceal their amusement, the young lady herself was hastily taken from the room.

Once in the hall, she was dealt with somewhat severely, and made to feel the enormity of her unintentional rudeness. Then she was taken back to apologize.

Walking straight up to Mrs. Handley, while all the ladies held their breath to listen, she said, with trembling tones and with the tears still upon her cheeks:

"Mrs. Handley, I'm sorry you're so homely!"—Youth's Companion.

Presence of Mind.

A Mount Holly young man had a strange experience when he spent the evening with his best girl on Saturday. About 10 o'clock the girl went to the cellar for apples, and soon after there were screams for help. The young man rushed to the rescue, and saw a pair of feet sticking out of the apple barrel and gesticulating wildly. The girl had fallen in head first. He was about to go to her assistance when she shouted to him to put out the light first. This he did, and under the shelter of darkness grabbed her by the feet and pulled her out.—Philadelphia Record.

Too Big a Hurry.

Literary man (to wife)—I want to dictate some matter this morning to you, my dear.

Wife—Yes. Shall I use the typewriter, John?

Literary man—No; I am cramped for time, so you had better use the pen.—New York Sun.

If You Are Sick

With Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Blood Humors, Kidney Disease, Constipation, Female Troubles, Fever and Ague, Sleeplessness, Partial Paralysis, or Nervous Prostration, use Paine's Celery Compound and be cured. In each of these the cause is mental or physical overwork, anxiety, exposure or malaria, the effect of which is to weaken the nervous system, resulting in one of these diseases. Remove the CAUSE with that great Nerve Tonic, and the EFFECT will disappear.

Paine's Celery Compound

DR. L. BOWEN, Springfield, Mass., writes: "Paine's Celery Compound cannot be excelled as a Nerve Tonic. In my case it made some wonderful cures. It brought a great change. My nervousness entirely disappeared, and with it the resulting affection of the stomach, heart and liver, and the whole tone of the system was wonderfully invigorated. I tell my friends if sick as I have been, Paine's Celery Compound."

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. $22 TO $900. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments but the Mason & Hamlin organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogue free.

PIANOS. Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos that they are superb. GRAND & UPRIGHT, for all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1862, and now known as the "Mason & Hamlin Piano Stringer," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant. Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

F. E. C. WHAT IS IT? KIDNEY F.E.C. TRADE MARK REMEDY

An interesting letter for Ladies:

Hastings Centre, Oswego Co., N. Y., August 26, 1886.

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Dear Sirs—Pardon me the liberty of addressing strangers, but you are indeed benefactors of mankind. Your medicine is a boon and blessing to man and more especially women. It renews the very life principle in the system and takes away the terrible scourge of woman and in the place of weakness brings strength. It is indeed doing wonders for the afflicted and no one need to suffer from the terrible drain on the system arising from a disordered state of the kidneys, or from female weakness, that will try this, for it is sure. Hoping you will not consider it is letter impertinent, I remain,

MARY H. BERMAN.

That dreaded backache can be cured

Rochester, N. Y., August 2, 1886.

F. E. C. Medicine Co.—Dear Sir—Allow me to recommend your medicine to anyone suffering from backache and kidney trouble. It has cured me entirely, and I am quite sure will do the same for anyone who will give it a fair trial.

Yours truly, MRS. A. W. KELLEY, 59 Courtland st., N. Y.

Beauty

is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—R. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

Abundant and Glossy,

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a head of hair as any one could wish for."—R. T. Schmittou, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, M. D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratitude I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Delavan, Ill.

LESSONS REVIEWED.

FOURTH QUARTER OF THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUST CLOSED.

Lesson XIII, for December 30, 1888—General Topic, the Development of the Commonwealth of Israel from Their Occupation of Canaan to Birth of Obed.

The third quarter closed with the children of Israel entering on the Promised Land, which they soon occupied, except the portions still occupied by the Jebusites and other nations whom God had left "to prove them," because they had partially failed to keep His commandments. The remaining lessons of the fourth quarter detail the wonderful history of a period of four centuries and more, during which the chosen people went through a succession of trials for the development of their character. There is a strange and remarkably interesting series of repetitions, each phase having its own peculiarities, yet all enforcing the same lesson—that unfaithfulness brings punishment.

The processes are uniform: first there was peace, and with it prosperity till the people forgot God, neglected His ordinances and adopted corrupt practices from their neighbors; then God allowed those neighbors to triumph over them and reduce them to slavery till in their misery they called on the Lord for a deliverer; then a great hero arose, delivered them from bondage and gave peace till prosperity again brought in impiety and its punishment slavery, and then the reformatory process was repeated. Nearly all the nations whose records make history have had similar experiences. Peace created prosperity, prosperity was followed by corruption, and that led to civil or foreign war, sometimes to complete subjugation; poverty and misery taught their hard lessons, and on the ruins of the old civilization a new one sprang up, in turn to grow corrupt and decay. But this process, which goes on slowly in modern Europe and America, went on rapidly in the warmer climate of southwestern Asia in the early ages of the world. Since the beginning of written history, Palestine and the adjacent regions have been held by seven distinct races: the Hamitic, the Semitic, the Persian, the Greek, the Roman, the Saracen and the Turkish. And under each there were minor, but bloody revolutions. We have just completed the history of its conquest by the Semitic Israelites; let us glance a moment at those nations who surrounded them, and part of whom they expelled.

They had many names and principalities, but were all of one race, the Hamites, and one general type of heathenism. They had progressed far enough to have walled towns and extensive writings, and those nearest the Phœnicians partook of the civilization of that people; but all ancient writers agree that as they advanced in wealth and arts they declined in morals. Their religion was at first, probably, a worship of the heavenly bodies and the forces of nature; from that they went on to worship the images of animals and to have in their temples such impure and disgusting rites as cannot be described with decency (Romans i. 24). The prophets tell us clearly of God's intention to annihilate people guilty of such practices, and wonderfully have those prophecies been fulfilled. The Israelites finally exterminated the Canaanites, and the Persians and others blotted out those other nations; the Greeks destroyed Tyre and the Romans annihilated Tyre's offspring, the Carthaginians; God dwelt "in the tents of Shem," that is, the Israelites preserved the knowledge of His word. He "enlarged Japhet" and made the offspring of Ham subject to him. The licentious Canaanites have no representatives in the modern world; the Israelites are among us, an ever present proof of ever fulfilling prophecy, and a glorious future is still in reserve for them.

After the conquest we are told that the Israelites served the Lord "all the days of Joshua and all the days of the elders that outlived Joshua," but the taint of idolatrous practices was not yet worked out of their blood, so they soon "did evil in the sight of the Lord and served Baalim." Seven times, in strikingly similar language, is this statement made about their serving the gods of the neighboring nations, and it is occasionally added that they adopted the impure and cruel rites with which the heathen celebrated their worship. Their punishment was terrible. "They could not any longer stand before their enemies" and sank into the most galling slavery. Their first noted oppressors were of Mesopotamia, and when they had served their eight years the Lord raised up Othniel to deliver them. He gave them rest forty years, then they transgressed again, and Eglon, king of Moab, brought them under for eighteen years. Ehud slew Eglon and delivered them, and this time they had rest for eighty years—that is, probably, till the youngest children who could remember the deliverance had died.

Then come twenty years of still more galling subjection to Jabin, king of Canaan—meaning at that time a small country just south of the Israelites. From this captivity Barak and Deborah delivered them—"And the land had rest forty years." Again they worshiped idols, and the Lord gave them into the hand of Midian. And this was worse than all before, for the Midianites were nomadic robbers who destroyed all the fruit of the fields; so the Israelites fled from the valleys and "made them dens in the mountains." Seven years of horror and famine they suffered, and then the Lord raised up Gideon to deliver them. "And the country was in quietness forty years in the days of Gideon." Then the wearying story was repeated; there was apostasy, wholesale murder, civil war and the wicked rule of Abimelech. After him there was comparative peace forty-two years, then another apostasy and slavery for eighteen years. Jephtha delivered them and another peace was followed by subjection to the Philistines, which brings us to the wonderful story of Samson.

After Samson there was another civil war and a period when there was practically no ruler. "Every man did that which was right in his own eyes." The sad narration is then broken by the affecting story of Ruth. Samuel, the prophet, was then called and for a time Israel enjoyed better days.

Sensations of a Rope Walker.

I am often asked as to my sensations when walking the rope; but if by that is meant whether I feel fear or nervousness, I must answer decidedly in the negative. When walking I look some eighteen or twenty feet ahead of me, and whistle softly or hum a snatch of a song, as the humor may seize me. I also invariably keep time in my step to the music the band is playing, and I find that helps me wonderfully in preserving my balance. With my own weight and that of the balancing pole there must be about 230 pounds bearing on the rope, which naturally gives considerably, this sagging being one of the chief difficulties we have to encounter in keeping our balance. I prefer to perform in the open air, for in a hall or theatre even of the largest dimensions the vitiated air found at the elevation at which my rope is always stretched is most unpleasant to breathe.—J. F. Blondin in Lippincott's Magazine.

A Narrow Escape.

Mrs L. S. Pickerell, of Middlebury, Ind., had a very narrow escape from the insane asylum. For years she was subject to headache, palpitation, spinal pain, sleeplessness and nervous prostration. For three years she had convulsions, often as many as fifty a night. Able physicians failed to help her. At last after taking that wonderful remedy, Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for six weeks she was entirely cured. It is a recent discovery by one of the greatest of living physicians, and is working wonders. Trial bottle free at Baker and Hall's, Drug Store.

The Youth of Our Land.

There really ought to be some law against the sale of dime novels to young boys. Instances occur almost daily where the minds of young boys have become so distorted by reading trash that they are ready to slaughter their fellow beings in large quantities. A boy who reads about some avenger of the prairie who chops and splits his cord and a half of Indians regular every day, or some pirate whose scuppers run off enough blood every minute to make a hundred dollars worth of blood sausage, gets into an abnormal condition of mind and is wholly unfit for the solid work and low wages of real, every day life.

He begins to accumulate pistols, daggers and other old junk, and longs to run a peniard into some false Spaniard, and twist it around, while he hisses through his set teeth some drivel that he has read in a novel. Such a boy will not hoe corn. Near Peru, in Illinois, the other day, a sheriff found a cave where a number of these boys whose minds had become inflated, had established a sort of pirate's glen. The pirats were not at home, being away probably on an expedition to capture a dark-eyed Spanish beauty, or a bantam or shanghi beauty and the sheriff entered the place and took an account of stock. All around were the sinister looking weapons of death, and the treasures and spoils of war, and among them were twelve bottles of lemon beer. This in itself ought to teach boys that there is no such thing as realizing what novels tell about. There never was a novel yet that told about the duke pacing back and forth with a clouded brow in the elegant drawing room of his castle, and then going to the sideboard and draining a flagon of lemon beer. Not any. The duke always drains a flagon of fine old Rhenish wine, seven hundred years old, before he sets out to mutilate a couple of townships of people. A boy ought to see by this that if he is going to try and follow the duke's example he will have to use old Rhenish wine instead of lemon beer. And where would be the fun in slaughtering those two townships of people with a skin full of lemon beer or pop? It would be insipid. And not only that, but ridiculous. Suppose the duke should draw his rapier to run a person through the body, and just as he was about to say, "Die, villain," the gas from the lemon beer should come up in his nose. He would feel like a fool. A boy who reads a novel, and becomes all wrought up and excited, never thinks of this. Neither does he think who it is that writes the novel. If he could see the author of the novel—who is some poor devil in a New York garret, who has starved himself half to death for money to buy whisky, and who changes his quarters every month to save rent—he would be ashamed to be seen reading such stuff. The poor broken down scribbler who writes about the brilliant diamonds of inestimable value that flashed upon the bosom of the countess, is probably wearing a sheet of writing paper for a shirt front.—Peck's Sun.

Americans are breaking down under high pressure application to business and duties at the desk; they are losing nerve force. Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic restores lost nerve force by supplying food for the nerve tissues, and by its gentle aperative action removes all restraint from the secretive organs, hence, curing all diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys. Dr. Geo. Ferguson will supply the genuine Red Clover Tonic at 50 cents a bottle.

Beauty.

Young man, don't marry a girl because she is pretty. Will beauty satisfy you through the life-long journey, to the exclusion of those moral qualities, mind and heart? Will beauty alone cook your dinner, train your children and prove a true solace in the hours of weary toil and trial—the lot of every man on earth? The poet has said:

"Beauty is a doubtful good, a glass, a flower, Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour."

Wed not yourself to that which time will surely snatch from you, leaving the faded eye, withered cheek and vacant mind. Study well the character and capabilities of your choice. See to it that she possesses a mind capable of grasping the ordinary questions of the day; and that a portion of her time is spent in reading something besides fashion notes and novels. And above all, be assured that she is well disciplined in those virtues without which, home is wretched. Sweetness of temper is not incompatible with firmness or moral courage, and a woman possessing these attributes will not belong to the vapid, "wishy-washy" sort; but on the contrary the class who develop into noble wives and mothers, faithful in friendship, and devout Christians, capable of exerting both at home and in society, the best of an influence for the right and for virtue.

If to these high and independent qualities is added beauty, then your choice is indeed blessed of God. Take such a one to your heart, and while loving and cherishing, fail not to prove yourself worthy to be the possessor of such a priceless gem.

THE BEST PHYSICIANS OUTDONE.

J. A. Crawford says; "I have had the worst form of Eczema two years, and found no relief from some of our best physicians who have made this disease a specialty. I was pursuaded to try Papillon (extract of flax) The relief I received was like a charm and I am well. I think Papillon one of the blessings of the age." Try Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

A prompt source of relief from every symptom of indigestion is found in Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic. This elegant and efficacious remedy is prompt and thorough in its action, acceptable to the taste and stomach, curing dyspepsia, jaundice, bad breath, piles, pimples, low spirits, headache, ague, malaria, scrofula, salt rheum, eczema, boils, tetter, rheumatism and all chronic diseases of the blood, stomach and liver. Fifty cents of Dr. Geo. Ferguson. Cures many who vainly seek relief of physicians.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle thus does not do its work will cost you nothing.

SPEER'S

GRAPE WINES

ALSO

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal churches for communion. Excellent for females, weakly persons and the aged.

ADOPTED IN HOSPITALS AS THE BEST FOR INVALIDS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This celebrated wine is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal hospitals and boards of health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particular beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that effect the weaker sex.

TONIC AND STRENGTHENING PROPERTIES

IT IS IN every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Oporto Grape preserved in its natural fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the exciter of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret,

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry.

Is a wine of superior character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

Is a pure distillation of the grape, and stands unrivalled in this country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS WHO KEEP FIRST CLASS WINES.

THE BUYERS' GUIDE is issued March and Sept., each year. It is an encyclopedia of useful information for all who purchase the luxuries or the necessities of life. WEDDING

John Hanier, 171 Woodward Ave.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Three years ago a couple of Sanilac county citizens began clearing up a 200-acre farm, and the past season raked 125 tons of hay and 900 bushels of wheat thereon.

Some chap burgled the Alaska postoffice $50 worth the other evening, while several little keepsakes of Postmaster Colson's are also missing.

A Siddons parson wandered out in the primeval forest the other day with a dog and gun for a little rest and recreation. While this engaged an innocent deer came ambling along and the parson blazed away. The deer escaped, but a relentless game warden "caught on" to the sport and made the parson whack up with a $50 fine.

A patent "cooling" has been entered into by the laundrymen of Detroit. It will cost Detroiters something henceforth to keep clean.

Thirteen bodies have been reduced to ashes in the Detroit crematory during the past year.

The Saginaw City Hospital association raised $3,000 by holding a carnival, and is now out of debt. The charity entertainment seems to be a feature of modern civilization.

George Whirl, a Mosherville huntsman, is said to have whirled the life out of twenty-eight bears in the upper peninsula this season. When George and his gun take to the woods there's trouble bruin.

John Galehouse, a Trufants citizen, was convicted in the United States court at Grand Rapids of making counterfeit silver dollars.

Weather flags are now regularly displayed at 104 Michigan towns, but it's advisable to take along your overcoat when going away from home even though the warm weather flag is flying from the masthead.

An Ionia lady went down into the house cistern the other day on an exploring expedition to ascertain the condition of the family water supply. But just as she started to climb the return trip the pesky ladder broke and the poor woman was imprisoned for two mortal hours in the cold, damp cavern, before the folks could locate the voice that supplicated for deliverance.

A "Soo" man claims to have a medal that came direct from Pharaoh's tomb. We supposed that Pharaoh had suspended the medal business several years ago, but when a "Soo" citizen solemnly avers a thing, we're not the one to dispute his claim.

Muskegon has quadrupled her population since 1870, and is forging right along on the highway of prosperity.

A Kalkaska county man, who wagered $100 that the jury of which he was a member wouldn't agree, has since been eyeing a $30 fine squarely in the face. He won't bet so cod next time.

Marquette's Snow Shoe club has got tired of waiting for snow and has gone to hulling it on the bare, brown earth. That's what most everybody wants nowadays—the earth.

A Battle Creek policeman has had a new $18 overcoat stolen. The man who coined the term, "sleepy police," may not have been so far out of the way, after all.

Michigan has 7,378 school houses, 453,915 pupils and 15,566 teachers, the wages of the latter aggregating nearly $5,000,000. Male teachers average a trifle over $45 per month, and female teachers $[illegible], although the preponderance of the latter enables them to draw two-thirds [illegible] the amount of the salaries paid. Less than three-fourths of the children of school age attend school at all.

Jackson sinners are being hustled toward repentance by a powerful revival now in session in that city. 'Tis estimated that nearly 500 have already made their New Year's resolves, but how many will keep 'em is quite another question.

Monroe is quite anxious for water works, but not enough so to guarantee taking $5,500 worth of water yearly in order to secure 'em. Monroe has a goodly number of watering places already.

The Celery city has forty of Kalamazoo county's forty-six saloons, which is one to each 500 of her inhabitants. This state of affairs, combined with an excellent system of water works, ought to reduce the possibilities of a drought to a minimum.

More than one-half of the 41,000,000 feet of lumber turned out by Saginaw river mills the past season, was shipped to Tonawanda and Buffalo, N. Y. It looks as though the "effete east" was thinking about building a house.

A Michigan editor claims to have a tooth from the identical whale that swallowed Jonah. But it takes a whale of an imagination to swallow a yarn like that.

Sixteen unmarked graves of the soldier dead at Lansing are to have as many marble headstones, the government having sent them for that purpose.

The governor of a great state like Michigan drawing a princely salary of $1,000 per annum, has many opportunities for earning said salary. The other day Governor Luce received an application for the pardon of an alleged glandered horse. The state veterinarian had condemned the animal to death but the owner couldn't bear the thought of parting with his favorite steed, and so sought the governor's intervention. This is probably the first instance on record where horse pardon has been applied for.

Dundee can have telephonic connection with the civilized world by guaranteeing $800 worth of hallooing annually.

The muskrat having built itself a ventilated house, many Michigan people are predicting an open winter. But we wouldn't advise any one to neglect the woodpile or coal-bin on that account.

John Risberg, a Thompson huntist, had two arms before his gun burst, but now he has but one. There is such a thing as having to carry arms—firearms.

A Jackson mining company has struck a fine bed of coal, but we don't anticipate any immediate reduction in the price of fuel on that account.

A Monroe youth, with an eye on a matrimonial prize, has put in his spare evenings the past year in sewing carpet-rags, and has accumulated material enough for forty yards of carpeting.

About $20,000 worth of opium, which had been successfully smuggled across from Canada, has been captured by revenue officers near Sand Beach, this state.

The insurance companies doing business at Muskegon having recently delivered themself of some pretty plain English to the effect that the river tugs doing business there should use coal instead of slabs for fuel. The many disastrous fires that have been kindled by sparks from the tugs is what's the matter with the insurance companies.

Fred Aldrich, a Flint editor, has thrown away his quill and gone to making road carts. More money in it, of course.

With two lawyers and seven doctors, Morenci folk still feel as though here was something lacking that's essential to perfect happiness.

Four persons were recently sentenced to the Detroit house of correction for from one to three years each by the United States court at Grand Rapids, because of their connection with the counterfeiting industry.

There is such a thing as a man's talking too much with his mouth, and this may have been the case with W. J. Notley, of Vicksburg, who has been fined $5,000 worth on a charge of slander.

'Tis claimed that Clinton county farmers raise more dollars worth of butter and eggs than of wheat.

The Morenci tax collector is taking a December course of the diseases, and had 'em so like sin that the property owners of the place have thought best to defer their payment of tithes till '89, with the added percentage.

A Michigan Village Destroyed.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 24.—A special to the Free Press confirms a report of the complete destruction of the village of Hermansville, Mich., by fire. The place is a lumbering settlement of about 400 population, and the loss is $200,000, with little insurance. No lives were lost.

GREAT BATTLE IN HAYTI.

The First Important Engagement Since War Was First Declared.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—According to passengers who arrived on the steamer Adirondack from Hayti Friday, a great battle has been fought between the north and south, and several hundred warriors have been killed. On the morning of the 12th inst. the northern army, numbering several thousand mounted men, drew up in front of the town of Mirabelais, and immediately opened fire with several field pieces upon the city. The southerners returned the fire from their mounted batteries, and seventy men were killed at the first fire. Then the northern army advanced double quick and carried the gates of the city by storm. The troops of the rival factions began a hand-to-hand fight. The battle seemed to be in favor of the northerners until re-inforcements came to Legitime's aid. Then the battle was renewed furiously. Hippolyte's adherents are now in possession of Mirabelais in spite of the opposing army's energetic efforts to dislodge them, and this is the first and real engagement of importance since war was first declared.

GEN. LEGITIME.

No More Secret Cuts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The adjourned meeting of the western railroad presidents was held Friday morning at the residence of J. Pierrepont Morgan. After some discussion of the situation the presidents agreed that there should be no more secret cuts, and extra commissions will not be paid by any road. The announcement was also made that an agreement for the maintenance of rates after Jan. 1, 1889, had been drawn up by President Strong of the Atchison, Adams of the Union Pacific, Cable of the Rock Island, Knight of the Northwestern, and Vice President Bond of the St. Paul.

Sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The United States minister and Mrs. Phelps attended the exercises of the United Westminister schools Friday. Mrs. Phelps distributed the prizes. The choir sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." Mr. Phelps in an address said that both he and Mrs. Phelps would return to America with pleasant memories of their stay in England. Mr. Mundella, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Phelps, said that no other minister had ever been more welcome in England than Mr. Phelps. Lord Hobhouse seconded the proposal, which was carried with enthusiasm.

Sanitary Bureau, New York City.

Dr. Cyrus Edson of the New York Health Department prescribes Speer's Port Grape Wine in his practice as the purest and most reliable wine to be had and his opinion is endorsed by his associates as will be seen from the following letter:

New York, December 9, 1887.
The Speer N. J. Wine Co.,
Gentlemen:

Having used your Port Wine in a large extent in my family in cases of sickness and found it to be all that was recommended of it by my family physicians, I desire to purchase it by the dozen bottles.

Respectfully yours,
JAMES BRYAN,
Sanitary Inspector Health Department, New York City. Druggists kept it.

To Whom it May Concern.

The undersigned have leased for a term of years, the Sash and Door factory lately occupied by the Tecumseh Mfg. & Co., and will conduct a lumber and coal business, and as demanded manufacture best grades of mill and factory work. Carefully prepared estimates will be furnished those contemplating building. Soliciting a fair share of the public favors, we are,

Respectfully,
TECUMSEH COAL & MFG. CO.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing nauseous and disgusting ills that flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

The best on earth can truly be said of Grigg's Glycerine Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruptions. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents. Sold by Dr. Geo. Ferguson's.

Used one bottle of Mother's Friend before my first confinement. It is a wonderful remedy. Looked and felt so well afterwards friends remarked it. Would not be without Mother's Friend for any consideration.

THE SUN FOR 1889.

And for the Democracy.

THE SUN believes that the campaign for the election of a Democratic Congress in 1890 and a Democratic President in 1892 should begin on or about the fourth of next March. THE SUN will be on hand at the beginning and until the end of the most interesting and important political conflict since the war, doing its honest utmost, as ever, to secure the triumph of the Democratic party and the permanent supremacy of the principles held by Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden.

The great fact of the year is the return to absolute power of the common enemy of all good Democrats—the political organization for whose overthrow THE SUN fought at the front for fifteen years, the memorable years of Grant and the Fraud Hayes, and Garfield and Arthur.

It is the same old enemy that Democrats now confront, and he will be intrenched in the same strong position. It has been carried once by brave and hopeful fighting. Do you not believe with THE SUN that the thing can be done again? Wait and see!

The hope of the Democracy is in the loyal efforts of a united press, cherishing no memories of past difference in non-essentials, forgetting every thing but the lessons of experience, and that victory is a duty.

Probably you know THE SUN already as a newspaper which gets all the news and prints it in incomparably interesting shape; which chronicles facts as they occur and tells the truth about men and events with absolute fearlessness, making the completest and most entertaining journal published anywhere on earth; and which sells its opinions only to its subscribers and purchasers at two cents a copy—on Sundays four cents. If you do not know THE SUN, send for it and learn what a wonderful thing it is to be in the sunshine.

West Franklin Farmers' Club.

The club met this time at the residence of Albert Vanderpool. After the President's call to order, Miss Louie Vanderpool was elected Secretary pro tem., Miss Nettie Boyd then called the following programe:

Instrumental music—Fannie German.

Select Reading—"How to Cook a Husband"—Miss Virginia Daniels.

Song—Misses Susie and Louie Vanderpool.

Recitation—"The Farm"—Miss Wilber Selling.

Instrumental music—Miss Louie Vanderpool.

Recitation—Miss Nettie Boyd.

Instrumental music—Miss Susie Vanderpool.

The question box being opened, the questions were distributed, then a recess was taken.

After the call to order, C. Cooper read and discussed the question—"which is preferable, spring or fall ploughing?"

Mr. M. Perkins—"Which is the most profitable to keep two cats or one dog?"

Mr. Verne Roberts—"To what extent should a wife know her husband's business?"

H. C. Daniels—"Whose place is it to do the churning and hunt the eggs?"

Joseph Lanning—"Which is the most profitable, raising onions or watermelons for market?"

John Osborn—"Who ought to bring in the wood, and do the churning and milking?"

Evergreen Hill was the name given to this place.

The Committee then reported the programe for next meeting.

President Osborn appointed Verne Roberts, Misses Wilber and Amy Alexander as the next Committee.

A motion to adjourn was then made, to meet at Frank Gray's in four weeks. All felt well paid for coming, so come again.

Good Templars at Pentecost.

—District Deputy Breedon, assisted by a number of the Adrian lodge of Good Templars, organized a new lodge at Pentecost, Dec. 20th, with nineteen members, and the outlook for a large increase shortly. The following were the officers chosen for the first quarter:

Chief—Alba J. Case.
Vice Templar—Miss Virginia Daniels.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Powers block, Rochester, N. Y.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh.

J. J. Orr, the druggist, has on hand and will keep the celebrated Indian Pill, manufactured by Dr. R. MacFarland, Genoa, O. This is the Pill that cures sick headache and headache of all kinds; also constipation and costiveness, and for one failure we will give $100. We can tell you more: this pill cures rheumatism, sciatic and chronic inflammatory; all stomach diseases yield to this wonderful discovery. Paralysis is prevented and dropsy cured by this pill. The high standard of excellency in this medicine is the result of years of hard study and experience in these diseases by the eminent Dr. MacFarland. Price $1, a box, 50 pills in a box. Dose, one pill on going to bed. J. J. Orr, keeps them, Tecumseh Mich.

It is the only medicine I would give to my baby, a mother said, speaking of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. It is safe. At all drug stores, 25 cents.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

School opened Monday after a week's vacation, with a fair attendance.

Mrs. Bert Tate, of Tecumseh, has been spending several days with friends here.

Mrs. Geo. Kies returned to Elkhart, last Saturday, after a ten day's visit here.

Mrs. Leoni Pomeroy returned to her home in Fayette, O., last Saturday, accompanied by Miss Tillie Becker.

Miss Louise Mc Dermott came home from Detroit last Saturday to spend New Years. She returned Wednesday morning.

Miss Lizzie Kirk went to Toledo this week. She expects to engage in dressmaking there.

Mrs. George McConnell came home last week from a visit of several weeks among friends in New York.

Miss Anna Manning, of Columbus, O., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Albert Nimocks.

E. R. Smith went to Detroit last Monday.

F. D. Lancaster has been invoicing his stock of clothing this week.

Mrs. Dell Ordiway is seriously ill.

Geo. Freese has been spending the holidays in New York.

Ben. Ellis returned from Detroit last Saturday night.

George Field spent Sunday in town.

Chas. Thompson went to Tecumseh Monday.

Mrs. Cole, of Raisin, spent part of last week with her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Hopkins.

Miss Mollie McAuliff, who has been working in White's tailor shop, left Monday for her home in Albion.

Mrs. G. E. Pomeroy, of Toledo, spent a few days here last week.

Mrs. Augusta Brooks who has been taking treatment for rheumatism at the Jackson Sanitarium, came home last Saturday, much improved in health. She speaks very highly of the institution.

Kies Bros. store at Elkhart was entered last Thursday night by burglers who exchanged their old clothes for new suits throughout and helped themselves to quite an amount of jewelry. The drm's loss is about one hundred dollars.

Chas. Johnson's youngest child died He had been sick for some time with a severe cold but was not considered dangerously ill until Friday, when the disease was pronounced diptheria. The remains were buried privately Sunday morning.

Frank Scovill's baby has been quite sick, but is better at present.

Miss Edna Sloan who has been attending Hellmuth College at London, Ont., is a guest of Blanche Smith.

Among the ladies who attended the Leap-year party from abroad were: Miss Florence Rowland, Miss Elida James, Miss Brown and Miss May De-Wolfe, of Tecumseh, Miss Laura Hermantz, of Toledo, Miss Edna Sloan, of Indiana and Miss Marie Merigold, of Winona, Minn.

Marcus Wood, living two miles east of here, died last Friday night. He has been out of health for some time past with kidney trouble, but was confined to the house but two weeks. The funeral services were held at his home on Thursday, at 2 p. m., Rev Williams officiating. The remains were taken to Saline for interment.

with diptheria last Saturday night.

The leap year party given by the young ladies of Clinton last Friday evening was said to eclipse any former event of the kind in years. Great credit is due to the committee of arrangements for the happy manner in which the guests were received and entertained. The grand march led by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Eccles was very successfully performed, considering the size of the hall and the pillars which will persist in holding their own, all efforts of the dancers to the contrary notwithstanding. Ollie Hunt's orchestra fairly outdid themselves. The supper at the Lancaster house was a model one in every respect. The guests were well served and all did justice to the bountiful repast that was spread before them.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Mrs. Pease and daughter, of Owosso, and Mr. Jo Herbison, near Lansing, have been spending the holidays with their mother, Mrs. J. Herbison. Mr. Herbison returned to his home on Saturday. Mr. Pease remained over New Years.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hunt and S. N. Munger spent Christmas with Mr. A. V. Hunt, father of the former and grandfather of the latter gentleman, in Coldwater. They found Mr. H. who is 82 years old, enjoying his usual health, bearing his almost century of life lights and with strength of mind and body enough for many years to come. While at Coldwater they had the pleasure of meeting Walter Deming, an old Franklin boy. Mr. D. is pleasantly located on a fine farm, ten miles south of Coldwater. The two sons of his wife, by a former marriage, Adrian and Louis Seeley have lucrative positions in Jackson.

Mr. C. VanDoren not very long ago put into bales a rather overgrown hay stack. One pile was 100 ft. long, 20ft. wide at the base and 35ft. high after settling. It was stacked by means of a hay fork attached to a derrick of Mr. V's own invention.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Allen have a flock of 130 hens and they have sold in the past year 1000 dozen of eggs which have brought a total of $173.91. In addition the chickens sold bring the sum up to over $200 besides having 75 fine pullets yet in stock. No note has been taken of the fowls consumed at home, and they have not been few, or of the eggs although in 1887 100 dozen were used.

The following additional information concerning the red-legged spider has been received:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 28.

AUGUSTA B. WISNER.

Dear Madam:

Your letter of the 11th inst accompanying a bottle containing specimens of the mite concerning which you had previously written us, has been received. I am very glad to get these specimens although they do not confirm my guess. The material is so rotten that it is difficult to study, but the species is evidently near the genus Tetranychus, which is the genus to which the common red spider of our greenhouse belongs. Concerning the habits of this particular species which you send I can say nothing except that all of the species of the genus so far as we know feed upon the leaves of plants and your species may have been very common on grass or low herbage. Thanking you for your additional information I remain,

Yours very truly,
C. V. RILEY,
Entomologist.

Born, to Fred and Addie Bunting, on the 30th., a boy. Mother and child doing well.

The Franklin Union Literary and Lyceum met at the home of A. D. Hunt, Dec. 21st. A very good though short literary program was carried out. The society presented a paper called The Literary Journal, edited on this occasion by G. W. Allen; below we give a few extracts:

We understand that David Burroughs has commenced moving his goods to Calhoun county where he will go to live in the spring. Dave is a hustler when he means business.

The Centre school has over 70 scholars and yet the director is an old bachelor.

Lore. Taylor has improved the splendid weather by making extensive drains through his farm.

Leap year is almost gone and there are a number of bachelors and a few widows left yet. Girls make hay while the sun shines.

Bloody Affray: While the writer of this article was busy in his yard a few days ago, he was startled by a terrible apparition. Looking up from his work he saw a man but a few feet from whose clothes were covered with blood, blood stains were on his face, blood was trickling from his hands in one of which he clutched a sharp and bloody knife, and as I gazed on this terrible form thinking, was it a murderer, a maniac or a suicide, I was brought to my senses by the apparition saying: "Hurry up with that hog hook, he's dead enough to scald." And I hurried.

Auction: I will sell at auction on my premises 2 miles east and 5 miles south of Poverty Corners, the following described property to wit; One veal calf, 17 years old, 4 suckling pigs, 2 years old, one spring colt 19 years old, 2 yearlings, 25 years old, one wagon, two hind wheels gone and no spokes in front wheel, one plow 37 years old, 25 cabbage heads and other household goods too numerous to mention. Usual terms of sale.

CECIL BILLINGTON.
CARL WISNER,
Auctioneer.

After a few moments recess the question, Resolved, that the majority of the people are ruled more by fashion than by reason, was taken up and after a rather lengthy discussion was decided by the three judges, unanimously, in the negative. The next meeting will occur at Ezra Simmons' on Jan. 4th. 1889. The following program will be presented:

Inst. Music—S. Simmons and E. Spaulding.
Rec.—Inez Allen.
Dec.—Cecil Billington.
Rec.—Lena Witheral.
Song—Mr. and Mrs. B. Billington.
Dec.—Newell Wisner.
Rec.—Edith Taylor.
Song—Edith and Grace Spaulding.
Dec.—Andrew Taylor.
Dialogue—Alma Whelan and Hollis Taylor.
Rec.—Ella Munger.
Inst. Music—Mrs. Wm. Witheral and S. Simmons.
Dec.—L. E. Taylor.
Paper—Mrs. A. B. Wisner and J. S. Allen.
Dec.—Wilford Allen.
Rec.—Dora Davenport.
Song—H. Davenport.
Dec.—Clarence Burgess.
Dia.—Mrs. A. B. Wisner and G. W. Allen.
Inst. Music—H. Davenport and S. Simmons.

The question for discussion will be, That the happiness of the household depends more on the wife than the husband. Leading disputants, Aff. Miss Ala Burroughs, Neg. Rena Allen.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Mrs. Mary Woods, of Hillsdale made a week's visit at Redmon Taylor's recently.

Misses Addie and Bertha Lamkin entertained a happy party of little folks last Saturday.

We wish to offer heartiest congratulations to Fred Bunting and wife on account of the fine baby boy who came to them on Sunday.

Mrs Mollie Alexander has had a long and distressing illness but has recovered sufficiently to [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Abe [illegible] Christmas with Mr. Hunt's [illegible] in Coldwater. Mr. Munger accompanied them also. He is a grandson of the old gentleman.

Hollis and Edith Taylor drove out to Brooklyn on Wednesday of last week, returning Friday.

James E. Earl, of Jackson, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Luce. He formerly lived in Franklin, where he has yet many friends who would be glad to see and talk with him.

The Updike family are in the habit of holding a Christmas reunion at the home of one or another of their mem-members. They usually have a Christmas tree, but decided that this time it would be pleasanter to go a fishing, which they did, in Mart Updike's parlor.

Elijah Allen and family have moved into Alonzo Marshall's vacant house.

Will Deming and family spent the holidays in Franklin. Will has a good situation in Jackson.

Levi Taylor, of Liberty, ate his Christmas dinner at R. Taylor's. His daughter Carrie, who is a teacher in the public schools at Parma, was also present.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The New Year, came in very fine and pleasant with the appearance of early Spring.

Daniel Linn, who has been confined to the house for the past two months is able with the help of crutches to walk down town.

William Birdsell, is quite sick at present writing.

Mrs. A. J. Sutton is suffering quite badly with an ulcered tooth and for fear of breaking the jaw can't have it extracted.

Mrs. Jennie Linn, is failing slowly having given up all hopes of recovering.

Dr. D. W. Loree, was called to Toledo. Monday to counsel, over Mrs. John Beckley who is there with friends very sick.

The funeral services of Miss. Ida Mc. Curby, were held at the church Tuesday afternoon, Rev, J. A. Lowry officiated. The deceased has been sick for some time, being relieved from suffering and pain Sunday at 10 A. M. at the age of 24 years and 9 months.

Prof. Martin Palmer, of Flat Rock, spent a few days with his parents last week.

Nettie Pocklington of Dundee visited her aunt Mrs. R. H. Nelson several days past.

Eugene Clarkson, of Detroit enjoyed his holiday vacation at his old home, returning Wednesday.

Sheriff Fessenton and wife of Mt. Pleasant, visited W. R. Wilson and family Monday.

Misses. May Mc. Elroy and Mattie Consaul of Adrian and Mrs. Lyman Geer and daughter Lena while spending the holiday week with Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Gove, called on Belle Barlow, Friday.

Albertis E. Palmer, wife and son of Hillsdale spent the Sabbath with his parents.

Lou Arner spent New Years, at Dundee with her sister Rhoba.

We are informed that Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barrett who have been in California for the past year are at Pratt Kansas, with her sister Mrs. B. B. Morley.

Dr. North of Tecumseh has been called to attend Mrs. Jennie Linn, in her sickness.

G. W. Jackson, wife and son of Tecumseh, W. J. Clark, wife and son of Britton, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Loree New Years day.

Jennie Allen, visited her brother Agent Allen, of Tecumseh, several days last week.

Dasie Biggs, spent a week with Saline relatives.

Willie Herington and Rose Arner visited friends at Blissfield, Tuesday.

Mrs. Hazell of Ludington visited Mrs. Hall and family Tuesday.

Remember the social hop, next Friday evening at the house of Mrs. Jesse Potter.

W. H. and G. D. Arner are in Adrian this week attending court as witnesses in the Thorp and Demmers suit.

Mrs. B. J. Collar, of Detroit arrived Monday to spend a few days at her parents Lewis Miller.

Will Bidwell, of Tecumseh for the past week was the bosom friend of D. W. Smith.

Miss. Grace Harrington of Blissfield, visited her brother Willie Monday.

G. P. Waring made a business trip to Detroit Wednesday.

Lawrance Rappleye spent Wednesday and Thursday at Tecumseh with Clarance Jackson.

As the New Year broke on us, we breathed with more freedom, "Leap Year" had gone, and we had escaped the matrimonial snare while several of our brothers on our right and left had been captured by American's fair daughters, who believe it is not good for man to live alone.

We are informed however by some of the young Ladies that it isn't their fault, they are left, for they did all they could to have it otherwise.

THE FINEST YET.

We refer to the Russell & Morgan Printing Companys' calendar for 1889, a copy of which is now before us.

The calendar consists of twelve sheets (one for each month) of coated board, size 12x7¾ inches, printed in nine to twelve colors and gold from engraved metal plates costing over $2,000. Each page is entirely different from the others, and all are new and original designs illustrating the origin and use of playing cards, etc.

January opens with the story of the playing card—its birthplace: "Midst austere walls of convent gray," which is carried through by different representations and descriptions to the end, December showing the "house of cards" and a view of The Russell & Morgan Company's building, the largest playing card company on the earth.

This is the most elaborate calendar ever produced, and while The Russell & Morgan Company have not forgotten to work in a fair amount of advertising pertinent to their business, the calendar itself is a most practical one. The figures are large and plain, and on the back of the December sheet is furnished a full commercial calendar for the years 1889 and 1890, with the consecutive figures so useful to bookkeepers and business men who wish to make a "note" of time.

A notice printed on the face of the calendar advises us that sample copies will be mailed to any address upon receipt of twenty-five cents.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in lining membranes of the nose and eustachin tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proven this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 3.

COSTLY FIRE AT ST. LOUIS.

The Big Bridge Town Suffers a Loss of Half a Million.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 2.—The entire fire department of this city fought a conflagration Tuesday morning from 2 to 3:30. Richardson's drug house, the largest in the west, was totally destroyed, involving a loss of $500,000. The whole block was in danger for a time, but the firemen succeeded in confining the flames to Richardson's.

Another Cruiser Completed.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 31.—Mr. Scott, president of the Union Iron Works, of San Francisco, where the new cruiser "Charleston" has been constructed, was at the navy department Saturday and accepted the conditions proposed by the department for the official trial of that vessel. The "Charleston" is now completed, but the builders wish to test her machinery thoroughly by dock trial, and it will probably be a month or six weeks before the official trial will take place.

THE CHARLESTON.

The Historical Association.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 29.—The American Historical association Friday listened to a number of papers dealing with questions of the history of this country, and at night elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Charles K. Adams, of Cornell university; first vice president, Hon. John Jay, of New York; second vice president, William Wirt Henry, of Richmond, Va.; treasurer, Clarence W. Bowen; secretary, Professor Herbert B. Adams. The association decided to hold its annual meetings hereafter in Washington and adjourned sine dis.

A Cool-Headed Engineer.

WATERBURY, Vt., Dec. 29.—A wild engine in charge of Engineer Pierce, the hero of the memorable White river bridge disaster two years ago, ran into the caboose of a freight train Friday morning. Four brakemen in the caboose narrowly escaped by jumping. Fireman Curran was slightly injured. The men in the caboose owe their lives to the warning whistle of Engineer Pierce, who preserved his coolness in the face of danger, as his brakes refused to work and the train was moving fifteen miles an hour when he sighted the freight.

No Demand for Indemnity Made.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 29.—It was announced positively at the department of state that no demand for the indemnity had been made in the case of the steamer Hayton Republic. Mr. Morse, the owner of the vessel, recently requested Secretary Bayard to demand $250,000 damages. The secretary has informed him in reply that there is no need of haste in the matter, and that the question of damage can best be determined after the vessel has arrived at New York, where it is due in a few days.

The Case Against Cutting Dismissed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—The charges against Master in Chancery C. S. Cutting, for complicity in the bond robbery case were dismissed in justice court Saturday morning. The cases of Shaw, Plessner, Taylor and Corbett were continued until Jan. 2 in bonds of $5,000 each. It's understood the grand jury has indicted the first three mentioned for burglary and receiving stolen property, and Otis Corbett, the Iowa man, for receiving stolen property.

Received Notices from White-Caps.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 29.—Some seven or eight citizens of Monroeville, a town ten miles east of here on the Ohio state line, received notices from the White-Caps Friday. The receivers of the letters were warned to mend their ways, or they would receive a visit from the regulators. The letters were signed "Benton, Ohio, Order No. 39," and were ornamented with the usual drawings of a skull and cross-bones and the cat-o'-nine tails.

Death of Thomas G. Cary.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 29.—Thomas G. Cary, for many years a voluntary assistant of the late Professor Agassiz in procuring museum exhibits, died Friday, aged 64. In early life he spent several years in the west and on the Pacific slope, and subsequently contributed to many magazines instructive papers on the primitive history of California.

Caused a Couple of Deaths.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 29.—Two freight trains on the Rock Island road collided near Tip Top Friday, both being almost demolished by the shock. Fireman Harding was killed and Engineer Hoge fatally injured. Engineer Case was severely hurt.

THE SKY SHIP.

In the soft wind that blows,
You cloud ship of the sky
Spreads its white sail and throws
A shadow where I lie.

And with my dream is blent
A breath of spice and gums
Out of the Orient,
Betraying whence it comes.

Unto a land remote
To all its rich bazaars
Sails this Arabian boat
Amid the island stars.

And in yon harbor calm
Of Heaven's ocean blue,
Empties her freight of palm—
The twilight's silver dew.

WANTED TO MARRY.

On a wild mountain road between the Yadkin river and Salisbury, N. C., I came upon a humble cabin in which resided the Widow Watkins and her three children, the oldest being a boy of 15 and the youngest a girl of 5. I had heard of the widow while ten miles away. Her husband was a justice of the peace and something of a religious exhorter, and what he didn't know about the history of America wasn't worth looking up. His mule ran away with him one day, and fell into a ravine and both were killed. The widow, as one of the natives expressed it, was "the well fixedest woman in four counties," having a small farm all clear and considerable personal property. Half a mile from the house I met Jeremiah, the boy spoken of. He was bareheaded, barefooted, coatless, vestless, and so freckled that it was hard to say what his natural complexion was. He rose up off a rock as I approached, made an awkward bow and said:

"Cribbins, stranger."

"Cribbins to you, my boy. And who may you be?"

"Jerry Watkins."

"Son of the widow, eh?"

"Yaas. Be you'n he 'un?"

"Yes."

"From the no'th."

"Yes."

"Come to see ma?"

"Yes; I'll stop for dinner."

"Glad on't. Gwine to hev' chicken. Ma sent me out to meet you 'un."

"Many thanks to both of you."

"Say!" he continued as he trotted along beside me, "I like you 'un; you 'un wears white shirts and clothes, and I'll jigger (bet) you 'un know roots from tree tops. Hev you 'un cum to marry ma?"

I laughed, and he was much put out for a moment. Then he said:

"Wish you 'un would. Then I could hev a gun. If you 'un will I'll mind everything you say."

"Perhaps your mother doesn't want to marry again."

"Maggs! She'd marry you 'un like lightning. Say! If you 'un has her you 'un will git me a gun, won't you? Say! I saw a bar yesterday. Say! I know whar I could shoot a powerful lot o' coons. Say! I'll speak to ma fur ye if you 'un will promise the gun."

The widow was at the door to give me welcome. The second child, who was a 10-year-old girl, was barefooted and freckled and towheaded, and the younger one had on only a single garment and was rolling in the dirt.

"Cum right in an' squat," said the widow as we shook hands. "Pete McCoy was saying last night that you was headed this way and would stop. An' ye thirsty? May, jostle him over a glass of buttermilk. We'll cribbins (eat) in about an hour."

We talked about the weather, the state of the roads, etc., as she bustled around to get dinner, but pretty soon Jerry went out of doors and called:

"Ma'gum! Cum outer yere!"

"Jerry, you shet!" replied the mother.

"Ma! will you 'un marry he 'un?" continued Jerry.

"Now, Jerry, if yer don't stop yer guzzum I'll skin yer alive!" she exclaimed, as she stood in the door and flourished a skillet at him.

Jerry made off and sat down on a log, and the widow turned to me to explain:

"Don't pay no seriousness to he 'un, sir. Jerry wants a new pop right bad, and I do say that I'm dun tired of this yere gittin' along alone, but I'm not gwine to offer myself to anybody."

Just before dinner the oldest girl made friends with me, materially assisted by some candy, and she suddenly bawled out:

"Ma! ma! gwine to marry him?"

"Now, Mollie!" chided the mother.

"Wish yer would!" added the youngest, who went by the name of Nancy.

"Now, Nancy! While I do go fur to say he 'un is the smartest looking stranger I've seen fur a year, mebbe he 'un don't think shucks of me."

I kept fighting shy of the main question, and by and by we sat down to dinner. The blessing had been scarcely asked when Jerry, who had made a tremendous effort to wash his face and comb his hair, looked up at his mother and asked:

"Has he 'un asked you yit?"

"Jerry!" she chided.

"But don't he 'un want yer?"

"Jerry!"

"But don't I want a new pap and a gun?" he loudly demanded.

"Don't serious him," she said to me, as she helped me to the leg of a chicken. "While I will go fur to declare that I have seventy-six acres of land, three mewls, a cow, thirty-two hogs, four stacks of hay and $28 in cash, I've allus sorter disagreed with second marriages. They mayn't be happy."

"Your husband was a good man, I've heard," I replied.

"Yes. A pumpkin is good—good 'nuff fur a pumpkin. He knowed considerable, and thar' was considerable he never knowed. He was all goodness—too much of it. Never made a hundred dollars in his life."

"You must have been quite a business woman to have got along so well."

"Jigger! I kin turn a dollar as well as the best of 'em. While I will go fur to say second marriages are not allus happy, the man who gits me don't git no sitter nor complainer."

I managed to turn the subject for awhile, but as soon as dinner was over Jerry took his mother into the other room for a consultation, and Molly came and sat down beside me and asked:

"Do you 'un like ma?"

"Oh, yes."

"And she likes you. Wish you was my pap. Mebbe you will be by too morrer."

I went out and sat down under a tree to smoke a cigar, and pretty soon Jerry came out. He had a business look all over his face as he said:

"I've axed ma if she would hev ye."

"Have you? You are real kind."

"And she says she will."

"Indeed!"

"And how about that gun? When shall I git it?"

"Say, Jerry, did you ever have a dollar all at once?" I asked.

"Lor' no—nor two bits!"

"If I'll give you a big silver dollar will you let up on the gun until I come again?"

"Will I? Hoop snakes and bed fighters, but I will!"

I gave t'm the dollar and he dashed through the house to show it to his sisters, and then started on a run for a neighbor's two miles away. When I returned to the house and said I must be going I was met by such an avalanche of protests that I had to agree to stay until next day. That night I "sat up" with the Widow Watkins. I got around to it after awhile to state that I was living with my third, and had three sets of children numbering five in a set, and that I couldn't possibly see how I could make her my wife. It was very sorry, but helpless, and I hoped she would let me send her a new gingham dress from Salisbury.

"That's honest and straight," she said in reply. "While I will go fur to say I like yer looks, and I believe we could live happily together, if ye can't marry, why, ye can't. Ye would if ye could, wouldn't ye?"

"Quicker'n scat!"

"That's next to it, and I'll go fur to say that I'll wait five years on ye and see how things turn. Mebbe I'll wait six, but I'll say five fur sartin. I'd as lief be a fourth as a second wife."

And she is waiting, while Jerry writes that "guns hev got so cheapless that he kin git one fur $5.—M. Quad in Detroit Free Press.

Do Sun Spots Affect the Great Lakes?

During the sun spot maximum of 1883-4-5-6 the great lakes were at very high levels. Ontario's waters were so high as to submerge docks at Irondequoit bay. During the present sun spot minimum the lake is low. This year the lake is two feet lower than it was last year. Capt. Palfrey, of the United States engineers, made a statement of the present low condition of the lake before the chamber of commerce Monday evening.

The Democrat and Chronicle called attention to the high water in connection with maximum sun spots during the maximum. During the high water lake storms were very destructive. Their force was increased by the solar activity and the waves reached further, eating into the bluffs of the south shore, causing serious damage to property at many points. Several buildings were undermined at Sea Breeze and the tracks of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg railway were encroached upon for a long distance west of Sea Breeze.

A gentleman residing in Perry states that Silver Lake is now so low as to cause serious alarm. The outlet has dried up, and the surplus waters are discharged by evaporation alone. Silver Lake follows the general rule of a periodicity in high and low water, corresponding with the sun spot maximum and minimum.—Rochester Democrat.

The Romance of a Cab.

A line of street cabs has been established in Trenton, and already one of them has developed a pretty romance. The other evening a merchant, tired out after a hard day's jaunt in New York, walked up the incline at the Clinton street station and got into one of the new cabs. As he entered he saw that a lady had taken a seat, and would evidently be a fellow traveler down town. He politely raised his hat, and the vehicle dashed down Clinton avenue to State street.

As they turned the corner on the way to the center of the city the electric light flashed into the dark little compartment, and in a moment two eyes were fixed on two others on the opposite side of the cab. The eyes had not met for many a month, and one pair belonged to a husband and another to his wife. The pair had parted, as many people part, over a slight difficulty, and the unthought of meeting was the means of making happy a home which had been dreary for many a day. At first neither spoke; then a hand was extended and grasped, and as the cab crossed the canal bridge the equilibrium of the vehicle was lost, for both sat together, and they alighted together.—Trenton (N. J.) Times.

Autumn Leaves and Ferns.

Sparingly introduced, autumn leaves have a lovely decorative use which is all their own. Too many of them in an apartment vulgarize it and spoil each other, besides gathering dust and holding it. A few leaves or vines, perfectly pressed and daintily disposed, are very charming with their whisper of outdoor breeze and sunshine.

No better way of pressing either ferns or autumn leaves has been discovered than the simple device of laying them smoothly, as soon after getting them as possible, between the leaves of an old book, or between newspapers. A heavy weight should be laid on them, and the papers should be changed every three or four days.

"When thoroughly pressed," says an authority on the subject, "they should be wiped over, using for the purpose a piece of soft cloth, with a mixture consisting of three ounces of spirits of turpentine, two ounces of boiled linseed oil, and half an ounce of white varnish. Ironing, either with or without melted wax, changes the color and makes them very brittle."—Scottish World.

"For My Sake."

These three little words are the touchstone of love. The application of this touchstone begins with infancy and ends only with the end of life. If that baby in his mother's arms could speak intelligently it would say: "It is for my sake that a mother's eye watches unsleeping through the midnight hours, and her arms hold me until they are ready to drop off for weariness." "For my sake" many a successful man acknowledges gratefully that his parents toiled and economized in order to buy books and pay college bills. "For my sake" provides the sheltering roof and the arm chair for dear old grandma at the fireside. Take these words out of our language and you would rob home of its sweetness and human life of some of its noblest aspirations.—Exchange.

Tom White is a colored porter for a Macon (Ga.) firm. He has never been on a railroad train, and he had the idea that you got on and immediately found yourself at your destination. He was sent to Sandersville the other night and got off at the first station, where he was soon informed that he was twelve miles from Macon and about thirty from Sandersville. He walked back, arriving home at 3 o'clock in the morning. He swears that he will never ride on a railway train again.

New York Republican Electors.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—About fifteen of the thirty-six Republican presidential electors of this state, met in secret session in room 74, Astor house, Saturday afternoon. The young man who guarded the door where the meeting was being held, would not or could not say how long the secret session would last. He did not seem to have the remotest idea what the gentlemen met for. He admitted that there were very few electors from out of town present. It is thought they were making arrangements for holding a dinner in Albany soon.

The Removal of Consul Bassett.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The recent removal of Consul Bassett is now attributed to his zealous advocacy of the election of Gen. Harrison as president, his activity in that direction having come to the ears of Gen. Legitima about the time of Lord Sackville-West's dismissal. The general concluded to remove Consul Bassett before that gentleman experienced a similar fate at the hands of President Cleveland. Bassett has retired to his home in New Haven and seldom visits the scene of his former labors.

Gladstone Reaches Naples.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—All the continental railways are providing Gladstone with saloon carriages on his way to Italy. He is received with most careful attention everywhere. He arrived at Lucerne Thursday morning and resumed his journey Friday morning. The St Gothard company has provided him with a special saloon carriage having an upper gallery, which affords a specially fine view of the scenery. Gladstone arrived at Milan Friday and reached Naples Saturday evening.

Father and Son Killed.

STURGEON BAY, Wis., Dec. 22.—Ernest Kurtz and his 19-year-old son were found dead in the woods about three miles from Jacksonport Friday. They had gone out early in the morning to cut cordwood, and the supposition is that a limb fell from a tree which they were cutting down and killed both instantly. Kurtz was formerly a resident of Milwaukee. He leaves a wife and three children in poor circumstances.

Seven or Eight Men Killed.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 22.—Meager advices from Tucson, A. T., say that on Thursday evening a construction train on the Arizona & Eastern railroad, having aboard about fifty or sixty laborers, jumped the track near a cone siding. The train was precipitated down a high embankment and seven or eight men were killed. Others were injured, but to what extent can not be ascertained.

Gen. Grenfell Praises His Troops.

SUAKIM, Dec. 22.—Gen. Grenfell reviewed the troops in his command Saturday. He afterward addressed them, praising them for the bravery they had shown in battle. He also read dispatches from Mr. Stanhope, secretary of war, the duke of Cambridge, and the queen congratulating them on the victory. The troops enthusiastically cheered the general.

FOR CHILDREN OF ALL AGES.

St. Nicholas for 1889.

PEOPLE who have the idea that St. Nicholas Magazine is only for little children should look over the prospectus of that magazine for 1889, and they will discover that it is for children of all ages, "from five to eighty-five," as some one recently said of it. Indeed, while St. Nicholas is designed for girls and boys, it might almost be called a "family magazine," for the grown-up members of a household will find much to interest them in every number.

The editor, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, calls the next volume an "all-round-the-world year," because it is to contain so many illustrated papers about the world in general—not dry geographical papers, but stories and sketches and tales of travel and adventure by land and sea—and all illustrated by the best artists. The features will include a serial story, "How We Made the Farthest North," by Gen. A. W. Greely, the well-known commander of the Greely Expedition; a serial about Canada, by Mrs. Catherwood, who is writing a serial story for The Century this year; "Indians of the Amazon," by Mrs. Frank R. Stockton. There are many papers about Europe, including a Christmas story of life in Norway, by H. H. Boyesen; articles on Holland and the Dutch, by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge; "The Queen's Navy," by Lieut. F. Harrison Smith, R. N., with illustrations of many of England's finest war ships; "The Winchester School," illustrated by Joseph Pennell; "English Railway Trains," by Wm. H. Rideing, etc., etc. The French papers include "Ferdinand de Lesseps and his two Ship Canals," and there are several interesting contributions on German, Italian and Russian subjects.

Under "Asia," comes "Boys and Girls in China," by Yan Phou Lee (a recent graduate of Yale); "Home Life in the East," by Mrs. Holman Hunt, and a number of papers about Japan. Under "Africa" there is a sketch of Henry M. Stanley, by Noah Brooks, and several stories about Egypt. Australia is not forgotten, nor the islands of the sea, and there are even to be stories of under the sea.

Of course the bulk of the contents will relate to American subjects, as usual. Mrs. Burnett, the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," contributes a story of New York called "Little Saint Elizabeth," there will be papers describing how the government offices are conducted, papers about athletics, amateur photography, etc. The full prospectus will be sent to any one who wishes to see it by the publishers, The Century Co., of New York.

The Graphic recently said of St. Nicholas, "the famous magazine that is only half blessed."

A PHYSICIAN'S LETTER

"GENTLEMEN:—I am glad to write you my opinion of 'IVORY SOAP,' and have long intended doing so.

It has become a household necessity with us.

If there is an unusually obstinate spot on the clothing, on the woodwork, an ink daub on my desk cover; a polish required for the door-plate or surgical instruments, a cleansing and harmless preparation for the teeth, and a very superior toilet soap needed, we resort to 'IVORY.'

We buy it by the box, remove the wrappers, and allow the soap to thoroughly ripen.

Now, if I had saved fifteen wrappers I would write you to send my little girl a drawing book in accordance with your offer in the Youth's Companion; but as it is, we all feel under obligations to you for manufacturing 'IVORY SOAP' for us.

We do not hesitate to recommend it unqualifiedly to all our friends. It is one of the few articles that will do what it is advertised to do."

A WORD OF WARNING

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

THE SORTER MAN JIM IS.

Never owed a livin' soul
  Nor a bank of ship-yard coal,
Never owned a fancy "mother;"
  Never went out on a bender
Never wore a pair of trousers,
  But his mother wove an' spun;
Never tried to be to drummer
  As the other fellers done;
Never used an ounce of "black tar"
  On his boots to make 'em shine,
But he quite preferred that taller,
  Well rubbed in, was somethin' fine;
Never took to sport readin',
  But would set all night to hark
To some old school politicians
  Blow the Andrew Jackson spark;
Never seemed to care for frolics
  Nor the fun that youngsters found
In the cheese house where the rafters
  Used to ring with merry sound;
Never noticed of the papers
  That his brothers used to bring;
Never took to silly bonbonse
  Sich as boys an' girls'll fling;
Led a life as pure an' modest
  As a boy could ever lead;
Never made his fa'ther trouble,
  Nor his mother's heart to bleed.
That's the sorter boy that Jimmy
  Was a dozen years ago,
But he found a nut an' cracked it—
  An' he's no more counted slow,
For he broke up the old meader
  An' he made the gravel whizz,
An' he found a vein of yaller—
  That's the sorter man Jim is.

—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE BURIED BUNGALOW.

"What can this mean?" asked I, reining up my horse close to the dense milk-thorn hedge that shut in Mr. Warren's pretty house and its garden, gay with flowers, from the tea plantations, the green valley, the upland pastures and the dazzling peaks of the Himalayas soaring overhead. There, on a fragment of rock, stood the well known, tall form of the planter himself, angrily confronting a motley mob of natives—some tawny, some yellow skinned, and a few nearly black. These, although they had flung aside hoe and spade, I knew to be the coolies employed at the prosperous hill station, where such a scene of confusion had been hitherto unknown.

"The scoundrels are going to leave me—that's all!" said Mr. Warren, curtly. And at that instant there stepped forward in advance of the rest a gaunt Tibetan, clad in sheepskins, who, ceremoniously, with perfect gravity, placed on the ground a fragment of wheaten cake, a handful of salt and a lota, or brass drinking cup, nearly filled with coins, from silver rupees to copper pice. Then, pointing with a peeled willow wand that he held in his hand, to the food and the money thrice, he snapped in twain the slender stock, and with bent head and downcast mien stood motionless, as though waiting to be questioned.

"What mummery is this?" asked I, in an undertone. My intended father-in-law, who knew the people and the country better than I did, shook his head.

"It means mischief," he whispered. "Something has terrified the superstitious curs; and see! They renounce my bread and salt, return the advance of wages, and break the wand, in token that they are my men no more. You mean," he added, harshly, in the Bengali dialect, "to desert me, then, Han Gorain!"

"The Sahib Warren is a good master," replied the Tibetan, in the same language. "If we go, it is because the evil eye has looked upon this threshold, and the voice that never lies has laid a curse on Yirmi Sou and all that dwell there."

The man spoke slowly and with some difficulty, such as besets those who use a foreign tongue imperfectly mastered; but he had uttered his brief speech with emphasis, and with a certain dignity of bearing. Behind him stood the Tibetans and hill men—sturdy fellows on whom devolved the rough work of trenching and dyke building, while a little way off clustered the dusky coolies from India proper, their lips tightened over their shining teeth, and in attitudes expressive of the most abject servility. Clearly there was no stimulus short of physical fear which would have nerved these crouching creatures to disobey the Burra Sahib, or owner of the plantation, whose lightest word had been law to his meek subordinates.

"If the Sahib will harken to the counsel of the poor," said the spokesman, after a pause, "he and his will hasten away before"——

But here Mr. Warren lost patience, and interrupted the orator, roundly rebuking the whole gang as a pack of craven hounds, frightened at their own shadows, and without a spark of manliness to redeem them. Were it worth while, he said, he could gallop over to the nearest magistrate and enforce the performance of the contract under pain of flogging and imprisonment, but he wanted no half hearts in his service, so they might go. "You hear me!" he thundered, silencing Han Gorain's fresh effort to speak; and the men slunk away cowed, as Orientals usually are, by this undoubting assertion of authority.

The planter recovered his temper as soon as the recusants had departed, and laid his broad hand on my shoulder, saying, with a jolly laugh, "A lesson, George, my boy, as to the thorns that will lie in your path when you and Edith live here in my stead, as I hope you'll do, after the gathering in of the next tea crop, and set to to feather your nest, as her mother and I have done. I thought better things, too, of the overseer—that Han Gorain, who, before some heathen bogie scared him, was a shrewd and reliable servant. But never mind! Come in, Musgrave, come in! The parson from Nynee Tal is here already, and you must help the bride expectant to entertain him until dinner time."

Pretty Edith, who was on the morrow to become my wife, smiled away any uncomfortable feelings which the conduct of Han Gorain and his companions had left behind; and neither she nor her parents, nor Mr. Edwards, the clergyman—who had come over expressly to perform the marriage ceremony—seemed to attach any importance to the panic among the coolies.

"It was something," explained Mr. Warren, "about Alp Dagh, the big mountain at the foot of which we live; but I have been a planter here too long to care for the tattle of coolies. They are like children who tell of the nursery ghost until they see it in every dark corner. A delightful life I should have led here had I been credulous."

And with that he dismissed the subject, and the evening passed gently enough. Later on, however, after the whispered farewell to my sweet fiancée in the porch, draped with the glistening leaves and big white blossoms of the Indian creeper, after the ride home to my own dwelling among the hills, and when my head rested on its pillow, a vague sense of insecurity began to creep upon me, and even when I fell asleep my dreams were troubled and not quite so pleasant as those of one of whom the world smiles as it did on me, George Musgrave. The dawning of the new day—my wedding day—however, chased away the clouds from my mind, and when I mounted my horse to ride to Yirmi Sou, attired as a bridegroom should be, my heart was light and full of happy hope. Edith loved me better than I deserved—I knew that; that it was her father's intention to establish the young couple on his own fine plantation, while he and Mrs. Warren returned to England to enjoy their well earned competency.

The day was fine—no rarity in the east—but a sort of silver haze hung over the peaks northward, and there were frequent gusts of ice cold winds rushing down from gap and pass in the rocky range that forms the boundary of India. I rode on, and presently, from an angle in the mountain road, I caught a glimpse of the "Twenty Springs," as Mr. Warren's thriving station was called, with its gardens and meadows, and the now deserted plantations, and the empty huts of the coolies. Then I turned the corner and saw it no more; but even as it vanished from my eyes I heard a strange, deep sound like that of distant thunder, the nature of which I could not divine. My horse suddenly snorted and reared, and then stood trembling and could scarcely be urged forward. While I was in the act of stooping forward to pat the Arab's glossy neck, speaking soothingly to him the while, there broke upon my ear a sullen roar—louder, nearer, at each instant, and culminating in a crash so dreadful that the simultaneous discharge of a thousand cannons would have seemed puny when compared with it.

Deafened, dizzy and confused, I dismounted from my frightened horse, now wholly unmanageable, and hurried on foot to a spot whence, as I remembered, Edith's home was in sight. The air was thick with dust and withered leaves; but as the prospect grew clearer I could see no trace of the bungalow, of its homestead and gardens, or of the thriving tea plantations and verdant meadows around it. Vainly did I strain my eyes to catch one well known feature of the familiar scene. Nothing was visible save a dreary waste of stones, mud and rocks filling up half the valley, and above which hung a cloud of tawny dust that was slowly subsiding.

As I stood stupidly gazing on the scene of ruin, I caught sight of a man, bareheaded, and with a white scared face. I knew him. It was the young clergyman who had come from Nynee Tal to perform the marriage ceremony between Edith and me.

"Mr. Edwards?" I said, inquiringly, as I neared him.

He caught my hand, covered his face and burst into tears. Then, for the first time, I realized what fear was.

"For pity's sake, tell me all!" cried I, hoarsely. "Is Miss Warren—is Edith safe? What has"——

"Of all beneath that roof—the roof of Mr. Warren's hospitable house—I alone am spared," answered the clergyman in broken accents. "Death, the grim mower, has garnered in his harvest there."

The cause of the disaster was but too evident. A stone avalanche, or moraine, as it is called in Switzerland, had rushed down upon the unscaled heights of the huge mountain towering above Yirmi Sou, and had overwhelmed all beneath it.

"I caught a glimpse of Miss Warren in the garden, as the stony flood burst on us with its deafening roar," said the clergyman, as he grew calmer; "it may be that God's mercy has spared her life, too."

And indeed I have much to be thankful for, since my dear Edith was found, fainting, but unhurt, at the foot of a tall cedar, the only tree left standing, wedged in between fallen rocks. But the other inmates of the house had perished, nor were even their bodies ever extricated from the mighty mausoleum which nature's own hand had piled above them. Edith and I have been married these five years, but our home is in England, not in India; and sometimes, when I see a shadow come across my wife's fair face, I know that she is thinking of those who sleep below the cruel stones at Yirmi Sou.—Albany Journal.

The Music of Mozart.

The neglect of Mozart in these days is a circumstance to be deeply regretted, as the works of that composer are calculated, above all others, to promote a healthy development of the musical instinct. But the present rage for sensationalism, which may be designated as the triumph of matter over mind, has exercised such a mischievous influence that it has now become the fashion to decry Mozart as altogether too trivial and plain spoken for modern taste. The pianist who who prepares for his task as though he were a pugilist about to enter in a fistic encounter, and commits an aggravated assault on the unfortunate piano, thereby appealing chiefly to the lower instincts of his auditors—who prefer to be astonished rather than edified—is now in favor.

The result is that the true standard of art has been lowered, and the exquisite grace and inspired charm of the author of "Don Giovanni" have been superseded by the noisy and too often incoherent ravings of modern composers of the so called advanced school. Of course every real artist must be thoroughly equipped and equal to every mechanical difficulty to be met with in the works of composers of all schools, but his executive powers must be governed by a becoming reticence when dealing with classical works, which are not written for the mere purpose of displaying the performer's digital agility or powers of endurance. A reverent study of Mozart's piano works is, above all things, calculated to check the effusive personality which is so unpleasant a feature in the case of a large number of modern players, both public and private.—Boston Musical Herald.

A Woman's Peculiarities.

The manners of women in public conveyances vary; but they all get off a street car in the same way. Watch any particular one. She motions to the conductor and slides to the edge of the seat, on which she sits perfectly still until the car comes to a full stop. Then she walks calmly to the platform. On the lower step she hesitates, leans forward, looks up the street, looks down the street, looks across the street, gathers up her skirts, peeps down and back to see that they are not too high for propriety, glances shyly up to see if the impertinent men are staring, takes another look around the horizon and departs. The conductor jerks the bell strap with pernicious activity, glares at the woman until she reaches the sidewalk and then hastily scans the faces of the men on the platform. He is looking for sympathy. But he gets none. Every glance is sharpened at the fair creature who has just alighted.—New York Tribune.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

"IN question has often been asked, 'to what does The Century owe its great circulation?' The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that 'it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department.' In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue throughout the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln history and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

THE SIBERIAN PAPERS,

by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." As is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters. A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons. George W. Cable will write "Strange, True Stories of Louisiana." There will be novelettes and short stories by leading writers, occasional articles on war subjects (supplemental to the famous "War Papers" by General Grant and others, which have been appearing in The Century), etc., etc.

The Century costs four dollars a year, and it is published by The Century Co., of New York, who will send a copy of the full prospectus to any one on request.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28th, 1888.

A quieter Christmas Washington never saw. After the pushing and fighting to sell and to buy holiday goods, it came as a blessed relief alike to rich and poor. There was very few big dinner parties, or even family gatherings. In fact, the ideal Christmas dinner of Dickens is no more. The poor relation wants his heals before his own fire, and the bachelor head clerk seeks a restaurant. The great turkey has changed to a canvas back duck, and the fragrent plum pudding and mince pie are relegated into retirement. Even the "rounder's" opportunities to get drunk are comparatively few. The saloons no longer keep open all day Christmas to distribute egg nog. Nearly all closed at noon, and thus additional quiet was secured.

The President and Mrs. Cleveland walked to church through the bright sunshine, and heard the usual Christmas sermon. In the afternoon they drove to Oak View and back, and took dinner alone at the White House.

The only member of the Cabinet not in the city was Secretary Endicott, who ate an old-fashioned New England dinner in his own state. The Whitney family spendt the day at Grasslands. Luckily for the President the White House was closed to visitors during the day, only Secretary Bayard called. But the ghost of the New year reception is in the Presidential vision.

Big, round faced Tom Reed and little Napoleon-faced William McKinley took advantage of the recess to go home, but the rest of the candidates for the Speakership did not stir, but remained to fight it out, with the Congressmen who remain in the city as delighted spectators. These canditates are now concentrating forces against Mr, Reed as being the most dangerous man. They say that Mr. Reed's two complimentary nominations have nothing to do with the case. They allege that he has too many personal enemies in his own party, made by his imperious manner in debate, and that the complimentary nominations were given him grudgingly. On the first ballot the the chances of the leading five candidates will look well.

I say leading five candidates advisedly, for within the last two days not only is there "another Richmond in the field", but there are several of them. Now comes Henry Cabot Lodge of Mass. Who is cursed with youth, but who has made a good impression in Congress. His candidacy is said to be really worked up by the Western men, who know that a vigorous canvass by Mr. Lodge would break Mr Reed's solid New England vote. As a dark horse, Mr. Farquhar, of Buffalo, has hopes that may not be misplaced. He will depend upon the New York influence. Then Thomas M. Bayne of Pennsylvania feels a burning desire to do honor to his State by occupying the Speaker's chair. And the returns are not yet in from the doubtful states.

Senator Hale's Senate census committee is deluged with letters of advice as to the next census. It is proposed to as ascertain the length of survise for all survivors of the late war, not only of the Federal but of the Confederate army. The census of 1880 gave forth 22 volumes. The present bill allows for seven volumes for the next census, and the sum to be appropriated is $6,000,000, exclusive of expense of printing. The last census did not cost as much, bu new subjects will be introduced, and the increased population, it is estimated, will be found to be from sixty four to sixty six millions. It is a pity that the bill cannot provide for a superior class of local enumerators and reasonable accuracy. But an accurate census is an impossibility.

The Johnson annex to the Arlington contains the rooms that will be occupied by General Harrison during inauguration. Parlors have been engaged at Willard's, from which his family and their party will witness the inaugural parade. It is customary for the retiring President to meet his successor at some point and escort him to the Capitol. Mr. Cleveland will probably take General Harrison into the carriage at Willard's. General Harrison is said not to have decided upon the date of his arrival here, but it is expected that he will not arrive until a couple of days before March 4th.

The outcome of the Hayti affair, at least so far as the present is concerned, is received with little interest here, having been so much a foregone conclusion. Still it is productive of genuine pleasure to know that the honor of the United States abroad has been once vindicated. Admiral Luce might not have had so plain sailing, however, in the waters of a great power.

Whooping cough, croup, sore throat, sudden colds, and the lung troubles peculiar to children, are easily controlled by promptly administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy is safe to take, certain in its action, and adapted to all constutions.

BRITON BUDGET.

The new year comes in beautifully bright and mild.

Our school reopened Wednesday with a good attendance.

Neil Exelby, after a few days of limping around upon a staff, from the effects of a badly sprained ankle, is now on duty as usual.

Minnie Ackley spent her vacation at home, and hurried back to attend a wedding in the school district and to act as bridesmaid.

Mr. Rogers has sold out his interest in the harness business here to Mr. Bugby. He continues in the agency for the Singer Sewing Machine and has removed his family to Tecumseh.

The next regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Mrs. Angie Kniffin's, on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 10th, at 2 p. m. A full attendence is desired.

It would seem that the ankle bones of some of our young men are in need of more strength, or that they need to shun the rough places about town. Joe Mellon sprained his ankle on Monday night, how, we have not learned. Moral; Take good heed to your steps, young man.

An overcoat, muffler, and mittens disappeared from the office of the Britton hotel on Monday. They were the property of one of the boarder, and he would be thankful to the person who took them if he would return them at once and give satisfactory reasons for taking them without permission. Stolen garments are but poor wraps for bad principles.

On New Year's day, at 3 p. m. a very pleasant party had gathered at the country mansion of Mr. John Boyd, on the Ridge Road, three miles northeast of Britton. Mr. Boyd's son and wife and wife's mother were there from Detroit and a goodly company of Macon and Ridgeway friends. It was a very fitting occasion for the celebration of the bonds of matrimony and Mr. Wm. J. Andrews, of Ridgeway, accompanied by his affianced lady, Miss Martha J. Linton, of Macon, came upon the floor a little after 3 o'clock, to be declared husband and wife. Rev. E. W. Borden was there to officiate and the two young people joining their hands, did then and there solemnly declare that they took each other in holy wedlock. The minister then pronounced them husband and wife. After hearty greetings had passed, refreshments were served in a most sumptuous manner and the groom and his bride hasted to meet the train at Britton, that was to bear them to the City of the Straits. It was a beautiful day, the company all happy and cheerful, the house spacious, well furnished, heated by furnace and well ventilated. It was a most enjoyable time and a delightful beginning of the year 1889. May the lights and joys of the occasion beam upon and abide with the happy pair who were joined in marriage.

Tuesday, though a dark Christmas day was a merry one at the home of Mrs. Eliza Kniffin, when her children and grand children came to her home in their usual Christmas re-union. There were absent, Mr. Lyman Soule and family, except his eldest son who is attending school in Ridgeway he being one of the company, nearly sixty in all.

The pastor and family, Norman Ackley and family and Rev. A. L. Hubbs, pastor of Adams' Christian church, of this number, seventeen.

After partaking of an excellent dinner with much merriment in the character of the occasion that brought the families together, then all repaired to the large parlor and Mrs. Sullivan Smith presided at the organ, and all joined in singing a good old hymn, after which the pastor was invited to make remarks. He spoke of the time past, when representing this family had not yet entered Michigan, then of the present, how pleasant to thus come together in a family reunion.

Then followed a literary exercise consisting of recitations and songs mostly by the little ones which was indeed interesting and amusing.

After which in order were passed popcorn, peanuts and candy, when too soon came the hour and all must part, each to a home; ere a meeting of this character can be enjoyed by this family as their usage is one year must pass, when an interchange of Christmas gifts will take place.

"THOSE LITTLE DETAILS."

Meditations on a trip through Iowa. for the Bureau of Dairy Information by G. H. Monrad.

How that corn is growing! you might even say: "You can 'see' it growing;" yes, the corn crop looks well where-ever I have been, and in traveling by the beautiful farms, of Iowa my mind was drawn to a fact, which—like love—is old and yet ever new; wherever I saw a field of exceptionally fine corn it showed distinct traces of careful treatment, and I could see that everything was done in the right time and in the right manner; on the other hand, wherever there was a poor field of corn, weeds and a general "hang dog" look pervaded the whole place, and that old fact rose to my mind. It is, after all, the attention to the little details that make the difference between a successful and an unsuccessful man, be he a farmer or manufacturor. If this be true about farming, how much more is it true about dairy farming. In no other industry depends the success so much on "those little details."

There is a boy driving home his cows by the aid of a dog and whip. Does he think of the effect on the milk which the over heating excitement may have?—Not he.—There is the manure pool, or the torpid, stinking ditch-water left for the cows to drink. Does the farmer think of the effect it may have on the quality of the butter?—Not he. Does the average farmer think of the benefit derived by cooling his milk night and morning before starting for the creamery? Does he think of the benefit which a few blankets thrown over his milk or cream cans would bestow on himself through the creamery-man?—Not he. As long as the milk is accepted he seems to be satisfied, and drives home pleased, and is blind to what any observant man can see by standing a few hours watching the receiving of milk at a butter-factory (creamery.)

It is just as easy to discriminate there as when looking on the cornfields above mentioned; and in both cases the neglectful farmer will lay the blame on anything and anybody but himself. The soil is bad, the weather is bad, everything but himself is wrong, and yet his next door neighbor practically demonstrates that with the same soil, the same weather, he grows corn yielding 3 or 4 times the crop.

Here is a boy driving up waiting his turn to have the milk weighed, and while I—as I am fond of doing—question him about the number of cows they milk, etc., etc., I observe a little stream of milk slowly trickling from the wagon. "Why, my boy, your can is leaking." "Yes; father said he would mend it the other day, but forgot it. I guess we must get a new can."

There is 'a little detail" costing the farmer at least a gallon of milk a day.

It was no supprise to me that those eight cows only gave 84 pounds of milk in 24 hours.

There is a man with a wagon full of cans. He has driven 5 miles in the sweltering sun. When I put my hands on the cans they were burning hot, and when I observed the milk in the weigh-can I was not surprised to see that it had not been strained properly, and to smell a slight sourness. The receiver said nothing, the milk went into the tank through the separator, and the farmer drove off, little dreaming that if the butter "went off" just 3 or 4 days too early, the neglect of straining the milk carefully and of covering the cans in the wagon was to blame. And if you mention this, what is the reply? "Pshaw, our creamery gets as high a price for their butter as anybody."

There is another team coming up, good horses, in good condition, the harness neat and in full repair; cans clean outside as well as inside, blankets covering them all, and when the farmer is questioned there is not much guessing in his replies. "25 cows! 685 lbs. of milk yesterday! Yes, I cool the milk, stirring it now and then, do not keep the evening's milk separate, though it might be better, hope to do better next year." No sour smell in his milk, and no flies in his milk—or on him.

Farmers, can't you read the writing on the wall? When you find your neighbor has better corn, and his cows give nearly 3 times as much milk, can't you see the lesson? If the creamery man growls at your milk, even though it be not bad enough to send back, can't you look at your neighbor whose milk is never complained of, and see that he is neater in his dress, that his hands are cleaner? Follow his example and pay attention to those poor, little, despised "details."

It your skin is yellow, or if you are troubled with pimples and boils, cleanse your blood with Laxador, the golden specific. Price only 25 cents.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

We have come for the purpose of bringing to the notice of any person who may have a desire to turn an honest penny, one of the most simple and useful improvements of the day. In olden times it was advised, "If the tool was dull, add to the more strength," but we say, go and grind.

Hundreds of thousands of Dollars are annually lost by farmers on account the imperfect grinding of their Mowing Machine Knives.

When the sections are ground on the same bevel, two will last as long as three when ground on all kinds of bevels, and your machine will pull with one quarter less power. With this holder, a boy can do a better job than an expert can do without it.

This device is simple and durable, and can be adjusted to any grindstone or emery wheel. It does with ease what heretofore an expert has found it difficult to do, viz: to grind the same bevel on each section.

This Invention is For Sale

Will give territory in wholesaling the machines, or will pay cash for good orders.

MACON GRANGE.

A short time since Macon Grange decided to enter into contest upon the following plan: The members were divided into four classes, the elder half of the ladies to form one class and the younger half another class, the gentlemen to be divided in the same manner. The class giving the best entertainment, according to judgement rendered by a jury properly selected, to be treated with a supper social, as the guests of the other three classes. By the drawing of numbers, the old ladies were obliged to give the first. It came off last Friday eve. Dec. 21, and although having but one week to prepare, it was a decided success. The program was good, consisting of songs, readings, essays and recitations, followed by a school-room scene of fifty years ago. This very amusing farce was well rendered and was greeted with applause from first to last. The sharp move by the members of the class in securing the services of Miss Mary C. Allis, lecturer of the County Grange, to assist them is worthy of mention. The night was fine and the attendance good, everything going off pleasantly. It certainly behooves the other classes to be up and doing if they wish to stand any chance of winning in this friendly contest.

NORTHERN LENAWEE FARMERS' CLUB.

The next meeting of the N. L. F. Club will be held at the residence of J. F. N. Bowen on the evening of Friday, Jan. 11th 1889, with the following program.

Inst. Music.—Mrs. Witherell and Seth Simmons.
Essay—Miss Helen Sheldon.
Song—Chas Keyser.
Recitation—Miss Lillie Brown.
Song—Mrs. Allen Wells.
Sel. Read.—J. F. N. Bowen.
Question for ladies, "How can we dress with more economy." Led by Mrs. O. P. Remington and Mrs. Smith Munger.
Resolved, That the farm statistics as reported to the Supervisors are more beneficial to speculators than to the farmers.

To Whom it May Concern.

The undersigned have leased for a term of years, the Sash and Door factory lately occupied by the Tecumseh Mfg. & Co., and will conduct a lumber and coal business, and as demanded manufacture best grades of mill and factory work. Carefully prepared estimates will be furnished those contemplating building. Soliciting a fair share of the public favors, we are,

I think Ely's Cream Balm is the best remedy for catarrh I ever saw. I never took anything that relieved me so quickly, and I have not felt so well for a long time. I used to be troubled with severe headaches two or three times a week, but since using the Balm have only had one, and that was very light compared with the former ones.—J. A. Alcorn, Ag't U. P. R. I find Ely's Cream Balm good for catarrh of long standing.—M. N. Lasley, 1934 West Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

You must write it 1889 now.

S. W. Bordine went to Bowling Green Monday.

B. J. Coller, of Detroit, spent New Years in Tecumseh.

We hope all our patrons passed a happy New Year's day.

Dell Worthington and family spent the holidays at Hillsdale.

Ellsworth Arnold, of Cleveland, O., was in town last Saturday.

Frank Godam, of Sturgis, was in town the first of the week.

Chas. Bobee, of Niles, is visiting his brother Wm. in this village.

Misses Eva and Ina Daglish were at home to spend Christmas.

Miss Ida Lamb is passing the holiday vacation at her home in Romeo.

Prof. W. J. Cupples of Spring Lake visited his Tecumseh friends last week.

Wm. B. Thompson and family, of Adrian, spent Sunday at Mr. Ingersoll's.

Leonard Coller and family, of Coldwater, spent New Year's day with C. F. Coller.

The newly elected county officials took possession of their offices New Year's day.

A large company of skaters tested the ice on the Brownville pond Tuesday afternoon.

Harlow Smith returned from Detroit Saturday, where has been attending a sick brother.

Miss Ida Taylor, who is now teaching school at Jackson, came home to spend the holidays.

Harkless Chapin, of St. Ignace, Al. Whitney, of Frankfort, and Wm. Record, of Cleveland, O., are visiting Millard Marks.

C. H. Blood has been laid up with an attack of rheumatism for nearly four weeks, but we are glad to learn that he is now on the gain.

Jim Aten's term as deputy sheriff expired last Monday. No one would mistrust from his actions that he had laid aside his official garments.

Will Anderson's delivery horse concluded to exercise a little last Saturday, and ran away. The driver, Mart Crossman, escaped with a broken thumb.

Fred Hendershot and Misses Metta Adams, Mamie Osborne, Clara Waldron and Nellie Conklin were at home from the Normal during the holiday vacation.

Geo. Spafford returned yesterday from a week's visit at Lansing. He put in his time to good advantage, and "never enjoyed himself so much in his life."

W. J. Herbison sold four hogs last week to C. A. Slayton whose aggregate weight was 1730 pounds. The largest one tipped the scales at 690 pounds. Next.

W. B. Hoag is taking a rest this week. He now takes care of both the central and east branch school buildings, and during the session of school, he does'nt have much time to fool away.

Burt Baker, Fred Tiffany, Roy De Wolfe, Lelna Stewart and Mark Ellsworth attended the party given by the Aggasiz society at Adrian Monday night. We suppose, of course, they were accompanied by their lady friends.

A Macon farmer missed 20 bushels of grain a few days ago. Deputy sheriff Aten took the matter in hand and succeeded in tracing the bags. The man who purloined the grain owned up the corn and settled all costs promptly. It was a very neat piece of detective work.

Lew Olmstead and son are spending the holidays with his daughter, Mrs. M. L. Root. Mr. Olmstead is now running a repair shop at a new town in Oscoda Co. He has plenty of business and is doing well. He has to stage it fifty miles from Beaver Lake to reach home.

D. B. Garlinghouse spent New Years with his father, David Garlinghouse, at Napoleon. David Garlinghouse lived in this county fifty years ago, and is now about 83 years of age, but he is still in good health and enjoys a visit occasionally among his old friends

Pulaski King, Esq., of La Porte, Ind., came out to spend New Years with his nephews, Geo. and Charley Spafford. He went to Addison Tuesday and returned yesterday morning to spend the day with George. Mr. King is enjoying excellent health and his Tecumseh acquaintances were right glad to see him.

The Detroit Evening News of Dec. 27, says: "A. W. Slayton, of Tecumseh, the bass wood lumber king, has now so big a business around Michigan that he estimates that he will have to travel 12,000 miles during 1889 to look after it. He has 60 mills which are cutting basswood in 29 counties, and his freight bills run in the neighborhood of $10,000 a year.

The new year came in like a lamb. Will it go out like a lion?

The legislative mill at Lansing is rapidly getting down to work.

A. K. Waldron and wife have returned from their Lansing visit.

Mrs. Judge Stacy returned today from a week's visit at Elgin, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scofield returned yesterday from a short visit to Cairo.

Joe Turner, of Milan, was among the visitors at Tecumseh on New Year's day.

Miss Fannie Kelley, of Holloway spent Friday and Saturday with Hi. Westcott and family.

Alonzo Bean and wife of Jonesville, were sojourning with their Tecumseh friends a few days last week.

Abner Wilson has been shipping off a lot of his surplus cabbage and sauer kraut during the past week.

Mr and Mrs. Timothy Mills returned yesterday from Leslie, where he has been visiting his brother.

John H. Vedder and wife, of Elkhart, Ind., were the guests of Albert Vedder's family over New Years.

Congressman-elect John C. Tarsney of Kansas City was visiting his old Lenawee county friends last work.

The clerk of the weather seems to be in his happiest mood so far this year. May he persevere in well doing to the end.

We call attention to the new card of Hastings & Chaplin to be found elsewhere. Give the boys a call and try their work.

Clarence Westcott and sister, Mrs. Streator, of Paw Paw, spent a few days this week with Hiram Westcott and family.

The Tecumseh Library Association have in preparation an entertainment to be given in the near future. Full particulars will be given later.

Fred Deuel has traded the engine in his steamboat to George Conger for a larger one, and which will undoubtedly give better satisfaction. Fred. will have the fastest boat on the lake next summer.

The winter term of the Tecumseh schools will begin next Monday. The fall term has been a very successful one and the prospects are bright for a winter term of unusual profit and prosperity.

Imbibers of bug-juice, tangle-leg, etc., were able to obtain their regular daily nip Tuesday as the saloon owned by Jacob Cheever remained open nearly all day, and in the evening. It being a legal holiday the other saloons were closed.

"The Great Inspiration," subject of sermon at the Universalist church next Sunday morning, Jan. 6, at 10:30. Following sermon, communion. In the evening at 7 o'clock the second discourse of a series on the life of Jesus. Subject, "What did Christ Come For." Public invited.

New Years day was more generally observed in Tecumseh that ever before. The business houses were nearly all closed during the entire day. The weather was delightful and everyone made the most of the holiday and 1889 was ushered in with mirth, feasting and general enjoyment.

Miss Parker of the west branch school has resigned her position, and Miss Wirtz, of Clayton, this county, is engaged to take the vacant place. Miss Wirtz has had three years of very successful experience as teacher and is regarded by county secretary E. G. Walker as one of the best teachers in the county.

We have received the sixth annual report of the Bureau of Labor of Michigan. It contains a vast amount of useful information and industrial statistics, which will be of much value in shaping labor legislation in the future. We shall have more to say of the report after examining it.

Mr. and Mrs. David Van Tine of this village, have journeyed together through this life of joys and sorrows for 50 years. To day completes the half century of married life, and they have the esteem of their numerous friends and acquaintances, with whom the HERALD unites in wishing them many more years of connubial happiness. It would have given many of our old residents much pleasure to have joined with them in celebrating the event, but the illness of Mrs. Van Tine unfortunately prevented. That she may rapidly regain her health is the wish of all.

Spencer Lester was descended upon Tuesday night by his Baptist brethren in full force and given a general surprise. Spence has held the position of chorister in the Baptist church for a number of years, and his efforts have been appreciated as they certainly should be. In the course of the evening Rev. F. Adkins presented in behalf of the church an elegant goat skin robe, and I. D. T. Hall followed with a bran new single harness. It is needless to say the recipient of these gifts was entirely overcome, but expressed his gratitude for the kind remembrance in which they hold him. Considerable amusement was had during the presentation ceremony, and all enjoyed a pleasant evening.

Let us close up all old accounts and begin the new year with a clean new page.
S. P. HOSMER.

Holiday trade is about over now. All of our merchants claim that their trade during the holiday season was never better than during the December just closed.

There will be a Grange meeting in Buck's Hall, Tipton, Friday evening Jan. 4th, 1889. An address by Jason Woodman of Paw Paw, Mich., lecturer of State Grange, and others.

Harry Mercer, the Michigan Passenger Agent of the Milwaukee & St. Paul line, paid the HERALD a friendly visit this forenoon. He is traveling about the State in the interests of his company.

The Journal of United Labor is the best labor paper now published in this country. It is the official organ of the Knights and is very ably conducted. The subscription price is only one dollar a year. Subscriptions taken at this office.

In lieu of a special club list this year we have made arrangements with a responsible subscription agency by which we can take subscriptions for any paper or magazine published at lowest club rates in connection with the HERALD.

The Herald will go to press hereafter Thursday morning instead of Thursday evening. Correspondents will please send their letters one day earlier than heretofore and people wishing locals will hand in their items on Wednesday. The forms will be closed Wednesday night.

We stopped to-day while on the way to dinner to examine the Gopher tool holder sold by Mr J. R. Hamilton. It is certainly a very handy contrivance and should be in the possession of every farmer. The price is only $5 00 and we are surprised that it can be furnished at so low a price. Read the card in another column.

The Toledo Bee of Dec. 31st. was a mammoth edition of twenty pages, filled with all the current news, giving a full resume of Toledo's business during the year 1888, and the business prospects for the future. It was a splendid achievement of newspaper enterprise. Toledo has good reason to be proud of her "Busy Bee."

Elmer Lockwood of Owosso, is spending a few weeks with his sister, Mrs. Jas. Mitchell, and is prepared to enlarge pictures in Crayon. Some of his work will be found at Montague's Novelty Store. Any one wishing the work done will do well to leave orders next week. Prices to please all callers.

We acknowledge the receipt of a copy of the Detroit Journal Year Book. It is a pamphlet of 164 pages with handsomely engraved cover and filled to the brim with practical information and useful statistics. It is the neatest and meatiest publication of the kind ever issued in Michigan. A copy will be sent to any address post paid on receipt of thirty cents.

The annual meeting of the Tecumseh Celery Co., was held Jan. 1st., when the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

President—Wm. DeMott.
Vice Pres.—O. P. Bills.
Sec. & Treas.—S. W. Anderson.
Manager—E. J. Hollister.
Directors—R. B. House, John Gilchrist, A. W. Slayton.

The company has done a fine trade during the past year and its prospects are very flattering.

A telegram received here Monday morning announced that Mrs. Jas. Cairns was seriously ill and not expected to live. Before the next day another dispatch came containing the sad intelligence of her death. Together with her husband she was stopping in the northern part of Texas with Mr. Cairn's brother. The remains were brought over from Adrian last evening and the funeral services are held at the residence in Raisin this afternoon.

FARMERS' UNION.

At a meeting of the Farmers' Union held at Mrs. McLain's, Dec. 28th, there was a very good attendance. The discussion on the question, Resolved, that special farming is more beneficial than general farming, was decided in favor of the negative. The next meeting was appointed at Beri Van Ness', for Jan. 11th. Program:—

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The literary program presented by the students of the seminary Friday eve., Dec. 21, was received pleasantly by the audience. The blackboards had been decorated with a large crayon map of Michigan, numerous historic names and dates and that popular school song, Michigan my Michigan, which the entire school sang as an opening exercise. Large pictures of Croswell, Chandler and Alger adorned the walls. The audience room was well filled and much of the standing room taken. Della Parker gave a geography lesson pointing out the numerous objects of interest on the map. This exercise served to make the others more intelligible.

The territorial history was next told by Ralph Dean. Bert Chase then took up the story and told the history of Michigan as a state. Mabel Tooker next recited a poem, "The Rainbow" in a very interesting manner. Lottie Selleck followed with an essay on The Educational System of Michigan, after which Master Will Durand told "What constitutes a State." The Agriculture of the State was the subject of Homer Burr's essay, the young gentleman reading his production in a very pleasant manner. Michigan's Forests were treated by Lon Teachout. A song, "My Native Land" by the choir enlivened the program. Eva Rorie followed with an essay on "The Mineral Resources of Michigan." The last essay of the evening was read by Frank Judson, his subject being "The Commerce of Michigan." Two recitations from Will Carlton were rendered by Alice Westgate and Myrtle Kelly. A Christmas anthem by the choir was a very appropriate close to the evening's exercises.

It has been the effort of the teachers to build up a feeling of pride with reference to their native state among the students. To this end they have instituted the study of the geography resources, history and civil government of Michigan. A lively interest is being awakened in these subjects and the program of Friday evening showed that this kind of teaching bears good fruit.

A MODEL MAGAZINE.

The Christmas Wide Awake is so bright and beautiful that Santa Claus may be suspected to have written and illustrated it himself; at any rate, some of the private doings of Santa's household have got into the magazine. "Goody Santa Claus," by Katharine Lee Bates, with its dozen jolly pictures, is a regular fireside chronicle of "Father Christmas" and his folks. Margaret Sidney opens her new Peppers serial in this number. "The Peppers Midway," the irrepressible irresistible "Phronsie" coming to meet us in the opening sentence. This story will run through the year. J. T. Trowbridge in his serial, "The Adventures of David Vane and David Crane," opens the door upon a typical New England farmhouse family, where every member is a distinct character. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps (Mrs. Herbert Ward) contributes one of her best short stories. "The Toddlethwaite Prize." John Strange Winter, the author of "Bootel's Baby," has a good story with a sweet lesson, entitled "Yum-Yum: A Pug." Mrs. General Fremont has a remarkable account, "How the Good News Came Out of the West." Mary E. Wilkins is represented by one of her fantastic stories "The Silver Hen." Mrs. M. F. Butts has a native story, called "Mussentouchit." Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen opens the magazine with a splendid ballad of the north, "Igne the Boy-King," with a drawing by Howard Pile. Mrs. Frances A. Humphery furnishes a charming paper from Scotland, about "Pet Majorie," written among the child's Kinsfolk: the portrait of this famous little girl who Sir Walter Scott loved so dearly, and whom Dr. J. Brown has immortalized, will make the Christmas Wide Awake prized by thousands. Emilie Poulsson has a dainty poem, "Little Tree and Little Maid." Mrs. Whiton-Stone contributes a beautiful Christmas sonnet. Miss Amanda B. Harris tells the touching story of a captive eagle. Mrs. Wm Claflin gives the first of "Daisy's Letters to Patty." Mrs. Sallie Joy White opens her series, "Cooking in the Public Schools, with a chapter entitled "Master Allen's Prophecy." Prof. Starr's geological Series, A Long Line of Hills," opens with "The Labor of a Giant." Mrs. Goddard Orpen's series, "The Stories of the Famous Precious Stones," gives an account of "The Regent." There are many other interesting features, the wonderful "Celestial Bear," and the new department of crisp miscellany, "Men and Things."

Only $2 40 a year. D. Lathrop Company, Boston, Mass.

Fast Trains.

Do you think of taking a Western trip or of going West, Northwest or Southwest to locate? If so, write to Harry Mercer, Traveling Passenger Agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, 90 Griswold Street, Detroit, Mich., for maps and other printed matter. Name the place or section of country you desire visiting and you will be furnished the lowest rates of fare, by the best route running fast trains.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

At a meeting of the Farmers' Social Club held at I. H. Schreder's, Dec. 11, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the farmers of the Social Club are opposed to the present law authorizing and compelling the supervisors of the townships to take farm statistics as an unjust and useless expense and ought to be repealed.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, Jan. 8th, at R. B. Gillespie's.

A LIFE LESSON.

There! little girl; don't cry!
They have broken your doll, I know;
And your toy soldiers,
And your playthings, too,
Are things of the long ago;
But childish troubles will soon pass by.
There! little girl; don't cry!

There! little girl; don't cry!
They have broken your slate, I know;
And the glad, wild ways
Of your schoolgirl days
Are things of the long ago;
But life and love will soon come by.
There! little girl; don't cry!

There! little girl; don't cry!
They have broken your heart, I know;
And the rainbow gleams
Of your youthful dreams
Are things of the long ago;
But heaven holds all for which you sigh.
There! little girl; don't cry!

JACK PRICE, DECK HAND.

I suppose not one in a thousand will care to read a deck hand's story. People call us coarse and vulgar. Granted; but our work makes us so. There are ladies, I fancy, who will shudder at the thought of such a story, and gentlemen who will dip into it carefully, expecting to find a string of oaths. Judge for yourselves whether this tale of Jack Price, my partner, is fit for refined ears.

No need to tell you of a deck hand's life. A man that beats about in the cold and rain, handling sleety ropes or balancing himself on the gunwale of a coal barge with twenty feet of swift water under him, is not apt to be a pretty, kid gloved, soft voiced fellow. If his face is red it is because midwinter winds on the Ohio are not good for the complexion. He deals with rough work and is rough himself; but his heart is just about as apt to be right as that of a senator or a judge.

We started from Pittsburg on the George Hammond in July, Jack and I. There was a big river and we made good time to Louisville, where we shipped on the Charley Roberts, bound for Orleans. To say we found it hot on the lower Mississippi gives no idea of the weather. Half the crew were unfit for duty. One morning there was a whispering among the boys.

"What's up, Jack," said I.

"Steve Robinson's down with swamp fever."

The boys gathered in a knot around the capstan. Before long there was a panic among them. The mate shook his head and looked thoughtful.

"The man must be put ashore!" said the captain.

"No, sir!" cried Jack Price.

"Who are you?"

"Plain Jack Price; but Steve don't go ashore. It's an outrage to think of it."

"Who's to nurse him?"

"Me."

"Do you know what swamp fever is?"

"Do I know anything?"

"Doubtful."

"I'll nurse Steve, I tell you! We've made five trips together, and if he is put ashore here in the swamps, I go with him."

"You it is," said the captain, turning on his heel. "Not another man goes into Steve's stateroom."

For ten days Steve's room was quarantined. Nobody but Jack saw the inside of it. We saw him sometimes, carrying something to the sick man, or sitting on the guards to get a breath of air; but every soul on the boat kept out of his way. We all liked Jack, but the fever might be in his clothes. He began to look pale, but he never grumbled. One day the news came out to us that Steve was dead. A few hours after we buried him on an island in the river in a pine box, and the only thing like a prayer said over him was from Jack: "God help him!"

The fever did not spread, and we all breathed freer. A few evenings after Steve's death I was on watch at the head of the tow, and Jack was with me. We were puffing at tobies to keep off the musquitoes. There was a haze over the water, but the stars were shining, and the broad river was quiet as a lake.

"Jack," said I, "I've got a raging headache."

"No?" said he, as if he asked a question. He took my hand and held it.

"Not fever, is it, Jack?"

"Come and lie down," was his answer.

A dizziness came over me, and without Jack's arm to steady me I would never have reached my bunk. I remember very little after that. I learned afterwards that I was delirious; but how long I cannot tell you. I remember Jack's face near me at times as in a dream—the kindliest face you ever saw, not handsome, maybe; but a face with some of God's goodness in it.

When I got back to reality again I found Jack bending over me. I was in the same stateroom and I could feel from the motion that the boat was under way.

"How long have I been here, Jack?"

"Quite a while, my boy."

"And where are we?"

"Not far from Memphis."

"Going up or down?"

"Going home. Don't talk if it tires you."

"What was the matter with me, Jack?"

"A touch of fever; but you're better now."

"Can't I look out, Jack? It will do me good to see the sun."

He raised me up gently as a woman would have done, and I looked out through the glass door of the stateroom eagerly as a child. Had the sun ever shone so brightly before? The low wooded shores looked like paradise. No mountain stream ever seemed so beautiful to me as the great muddy river.

"Jack," said I, when he laid me down again, "what can I ever do to pay you?"

"Pay me for what?"

"Look at me; I'm thin as a ghost. I must have been sick a long time. You've pulled me through, Jack."

"I've done nothing of the kind," said he, laughing.

I noticed for the first time how very thin and pinched his face was. It seemed as if he had grown old.

"Look at me, Jack; you've been the best friend I ever had."

He made no answer, but took my hand and pressed it. It seemed as if a mist came between us, and I saw big tears standing in Jack's kindly eyes.

"I thought I'd got past this," said he, coughing.

Next day he came in smiling, with a letter and some oranges.

"I went ashore at Memphis," he explained, "and found a letter from Sister Annie. They're looking for me home."

"We'll soon be in Pennsylvania again, Jack."

He looked me full in the face and smiled. His eyes seemed very large and his cheeks were bloodless. It saddened me to look at him.

"I must go now," said he. "I hope you'll enjoy the oranges."

I was mending fast and expected to be out very soon. Jack did not come again that day. Next morning the cook brought me a cup of tea.

"Where is Jack?" I asked.

"Busy."

I thought of him all day, but he did not come.

"Cook," said I, at last, "I want you to tell me the truth about Jack."

"Don't you fret!" he answered.

"But I must know."

"Well, he's not able to be about."

"Where is he?"

"In No. 8. But you can't go near him; he's got the fever! Delirious! Wouldn't knew his own mother!"

"Who's nursing him?"

"I am—what little he gets. We can't make a hospital out of the Charley Roberts."

Cook tried to stop me, but I staggered across the cabin into No. 8. I could hardly recognize Jack as he lay on the bunk, his face was so flushed and his eyes so bloodshot. He had dropped down, too weak to take his clothes off. I took his hand and sat beside him.

"Jack, my boy, what's wrong?"

"Nothing, Sam."

Jack never said much. He was better at doing than saying.

I looked at the poor fellow in despair. I had never nursed a sick person in my life. The captain came in while I sat there.

"We must have a doctor, captain," said I.

"Might as well want a gold mine," he replied.

"But look at Jack, captain. What can we do?"

"I don't know."

"Sam," said Jack, looking at me with a strange expression, "you know my sister Annie?"

"Certainly, Jack."

"I want you to tell her about me."

"You will soon see her, Jack."

"No, Sam; I'm going."

"We're both going home."

"Yes, going home. I'm tired! Tired!"

"Then rest, Jack. I shall be here."

"Take my hand, Sam."

"I have your hand, my boy. Try to sleep."

"Yes," he went on, pointing, "There's Annie at the door. She looks more and more like mother as she grows older. She's glad to see me from the way she smiles."

"Indeed she is, Jack."

"That's Sam's voice; he got over the fever well. I believe I had it, too. Hear old Pont barking at the gate; he's 'most as glad as Annie to see me back. Ah, Sam, it's good to be back in Pennsylvania—God's country! Annie! Annie!"

He fell back in a stupor, with his eyes set. I felt a spasm pass through his frame, after which his hand lay in mine like a lifeless thing. I looked up questioningly at the captain.

"God help him! He is dead."

"O, surely not!"

"Dead!" he repeated.

Only when I bent over him did I believe it. Jack was dead.

"He died working for others," said the captain, and in lieu of better words these must stand for his epitaph.

I can only tell Jack's story in a plain way. I cannot fill your eyes with tears as mine are filled, as there is no art behind my words. You read of good men—unselfish and heroic men that poets sing of and historians immortalize—but here was one that nobody ever heard of. Who was there to read a funeral sermon over him when we buried him in a lonely place on the river bank next day? Who prayed over the rough pine box? Not a prayer, not a hymn at the funeral; only some tears that came of genuine grief. We left him there on the river bank, with a piece of drift wood to mark his grave, which the next flood would sweep away. I found a little flower growing there—a violet, I think—which I brought away for Annie.

Jack was as homely a man as ever you saw, a big, raw boned fellow, with a twinkle of the eye that made one laugh. Had you been hunting for a man of polish and education you would not have picked him out. His head had not been cultivated at the expense of his heart. He used strong language sometimes when a rope got tangled, or the pumps worked hard, or the coffee didn't suit him. I am not trying to picture him as perfect; I want you to know him as he was. His voice in a sickroom was as gentle as a child's; he had a big, tender heart, kindlier than most women have, and a hand that served a friend until ready to drop from weariness. I remember him as he bent over me while I lay helpless with fever, a kindly light beaming in his face that beautified it. I learned then how unselfish he was, and my heart went out to him, as your's would have gone had you known him. This was Jack at his best.—H. D. Mason in Pittsburg Bulletin.

Three Little Travelers.

Two 9-year-old girls and a 7-year-old boy, with leather belts around their waists, and a note tied to each belt, were passengers on the Southern express on the Pennsylvania railroad. They had traveled all the way from Germany alone. The notes tied to their belts were as follows:

TO ALL CONDUCTORS.—These children, three of them, are bound for Galveston, Texas, where they will find their father. They are on the way from Germany. Their tickets are in their pockets.

None of the children could speak English. Through an interpreter, one of the girls told a Sun reporter that her name was Annie, her sister was Gertrude and her brother was John. Their father was Joseph Kolsky. He left Germany three years ago. Their mother died two months ago, and their father sent money to them to come to this country. The railroad officials telegraphed orders ahead to look out for the children.—New York Sun.

Advance in Medical Science.

The greatest advance in the medical science of our generation is the clearer and more general recognition that the power of medicine to cure diseases is extremely limited. In other words, that the aim of the enlightened physician should be prevention rather than cure. The sanitary science has accomplished wonders, but only as the handmaid of medicine. The discoveries of the past two centuries have taught sanitary reformers where and how to work. It is the unselfish lot of mankind and a generous sense of duty that have stimulated many of those researches that are now bearing such golden fruit, and which, while limiting the work of the doctor and curtailing his income, make life longer and pleasanter.—Edinburgh Review.

The 5-year-old son of John W. Purcell, of Rochester, threw stones at some snapping turtles in a pond, when they attacked him, fastening themselves upon his legs and injuring him severely.

A Xenia (O.) man stole crape from the door of a friend.

ESTATE OF RICHARD ADAMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 7th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Richard Adams, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Norman H. Ackley, alleging among other things, the death of said Richard Adams, and that some of the heirs at law of said deceased are residents of Great Britain, a foreign country, and praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner the executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person, and notice of the pendency of and the day appointed for the hearing of such application having this day been given to the Consul of such foreign nation in the City of New York as required by the statute in such case made and provided; a letter press copy of such notice is now on file in this court.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 14th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate
(A True Copy.)

WHAT IS IT?

TRADE KIDNEY F.E.C. MARK REMEDY

An interesting letter for Ladies:

Hastings Centre, Oswego Co., N. Y., August 26, 1886.

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Dear Sirs—Pardon me the liberty of addressing strangers, but you are indeed benefactors of mankind. Your medicine is a boon and blessing to man and more especially women. It renews the very life principle in the system and takes away the terrible scourge of woman and in the place of weakness brings strength. It is indeed doing wonders for the afflicted and no one need to suffer from the terrible drain on the system arising from a disordered state of the kidneys, or from female weakness, that will try this, for it is sure. Hoping you will not consider this letter impertinent, I remain,

MARY H. BEEMAN.

That dreaded backache can be Cured

Rochester, N. Y., August 2, 1886.

F. E. C. Medicine Co.—Dear Sir—Allow me to recommend your medicine to anyone suffering from backache and kidney trouble. It has cured me entirely, and I am quite sure will do the same for anyone who will give it a fair trial.

Yours truly, MRS. A. W. KELLEY.
59 Courtland st., N. Y.

K. B. KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common Pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

CHANCERY NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN: The Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee: In Chancery.

William K. Stamp, Complainant,
vs.
Parmela Stamp, Defendant.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in Chancery.

At chambers in the city of Adrian in said county on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1888.

It satisfactorily appearing to this court by affidavit on file in said cause, that the defendant, Parmela Stamp, is not a resident of this state, but resides in the township of York, in the county of Sandusky in the state of Ohio, one of the United States of America.

Therefore on motion of Lamb & Pratt, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Parmela Stamp, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed with the register of said court and a copy thereof to be served on said complainant's solicitors within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill and notice of this order, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by the said non-resident defendant.

And it further ordered that within twenty days after the date hereof, the said complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county of Lenawee, and that such publication be continued therein at least once in each week for six successive weeks, or that he cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant at least twenty days before the time prescribed for her appearance.

Dated November 17, 1888.

Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier.

With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The fore-runner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

Sarsaparilla

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far exceed those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickhaus, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. 'There is nothing so good for the youthful blood' as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

LESSON I, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 6.

Text of the Lesson Mark i. 1-11—Comment Verses 6-8—Golden Text, Mark i. 3—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." We shall now be privileged for six months to study again the earthly life, or rather the unearthly life on this earth, of our Lord Jesus Christ; for although He was a perfect man, yet He was an unearthly man, at home among men, sympathizing with all men, and yet ever speaking of and pointing men to a home from which He had come and to which He was returning. His thirty-three or four years on earth as a man among men was but an event in a life which had no beginning and shall have no end, for He was in the beginning with God, all things were made by Him and for Him, and He shall subdue all things unto Himself. Although it is over eighteen hundred years since He was on earth, yet He is a real man today, unchanged and unchangeable, and as we read of Him in the Gospels, so we are to think of Him, saving, healing, sympathizing, comforting; calling us to follow Him, serve Him, wait and look for Him while we yield our bodies unto Him that He, by His spirit, may live His life over again in each of His followers. In the Old Testament He was foretold as not only the seed of the woman who should bruise the serpent's head, but also as the seed of Abraham in whom all nations should be blessed, the Son of David who should sit on David's throne, the servant of God, doing all His pleasure, the Son of Man subduing all things unto Himself and restoring the dominion lost by Adam, and the Son of God, equal with God and revealing God to man. In Matthew's gospel we learn of Him as Son of David, Son of Abraham, King of the Jews; while in this gospel we see Him rather as the servant spoken of in Isa. xlii, 1, "Behold my servant;" also Isa. xlxix, 6; liii, 11; Ezek. xxxvii, 24, 25; Zech. iii, 8, etc. There is one word in this gospel which peculiarly points Him out as the servant; it is used about eighty times in the New Testament, and half that number of times it is found in this gospel; ten or eleven times it is found in this first chapter and is translated "immediately," "straightway," "forthwith," "anon," but in the Revised Version it is always "straightway." While each gospel has its distinctive features, we also find more or less of each in them all, and this first verse brings before us Jesus, the Saviour, who saves not only from the wrath to come, but also from our sins; Christ, the Messiah, the anointed King of Israel, and the Son of God, equal with God, one with the Father. The beginning of the gospel or glad tidings in my soul was when I received Him as my own Saviour, and blessed be God while there was a beginning there shall be no end.

2. "As it is written in the Prophets." The whole history of His humiliation, sufferings, death, resurrection and future glory is all written in the Prophets, for they all spake of Him, the Holy Spirit speaking through them.

"Behold I send my messenger before Thy face who shall prepare Thy way." This is a quotation from Malachi iii. 1, and refers to John the Baptist as the herald of Jesus Christ. Observe carefully Gabriel's announcement concerning him in Luke i, 15-17, and his father's utterance by the Holy Spirit in Luke i, 76-79.

3. "The voice of one crying in the wilderness." This is a quotation from Isaiah xl, 3, and carries us beyond the first coming of Christ, when He came to suffer, to His second coming, when He shall comfort Jerusalem, pardoning her iniquity and cause all flesh to see the glory of the Lord; when He shall appear in His glory to build up Zion (Ps. cii, 16); when He shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation (Heb. ix, 28); the salvation ready to be revealed at the revelation of Jesus Christ. (I Pet. i, 5, 7, 13.)

4. "The baptism of repentance for, or unto, the remission of sins." Such was the preaching of John, and such was the commission to and the preaching of the apostles (Luke xxiv, 47; Acts iii, 19; v, 31), with this difference, that John pointed to a Saviour about to come, while the apostles pointed to a Saviour who had come, suffered, was crucified, risen, ascended, and would come again to restore all things of which the prophets had spoken (Acts iii, 13-21).

The first essential to present happiness and future glory is the forgiveness of our sins, and that we cannot have without repentance—that is, a true turning from sin to God, or, as our catechism has it, "a change of mind toward God, the effect of the conviction of sin wrought by the Holy Ghost."

5. "There went out unto him all Judea." Great multitudes came to him confessing their sins and desiring baptism, but his estimate of their sincerity and true repentance we may gather from his preaching (Luke iii, 7-18). No outward form or mere say so is worth anything whatever in the matter of repentance, or faith, or service, nothing but real honest heart work is of any avail, and John gave them to understand that unless their lives proved their sincerity they would like chaff come to the unquenchable fire.

6. "Clothed with camel's hair." John was no fashionable preacher, either as to person or style; food and raiment were matters of small importance to him, and as to his preaching he sought not to please men, but God. Gabriel had said that he would come in the spirit and power of Elijah (Luke i, 17), and although he was not Elijah (John i, 21), he was wonderfully like him.

7. "One mightier than I." And John did not consider himself worthy to be privileged to unloose His shoes. Gabriel himself would covet such an honor, and what angel in Heaven would not rejoice to do Him the lowliest service? But the I is so mighty in most of us that John's "mightier than I," whom he so delighted to honor, finds us but poor witnesses. He is "The Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace;" and if we only believed what we profess to believe, that we are joint heirs with Him who is Heir of all things, and are thus exalted through His sufferings, our devotion to Him would be such that a thought of self would not be tolerated. We would say with Paul, "For me to live in Christ and to die is gain; let Him be glorified either by my life or death" (Phil. i, 20, 21).

8. "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Unless we have this baptism we shall never amount to anything in Christ's service.

9. "Jesus was baptized of John in Jordan." Read the more full account of this event in Matt. iii, 13-17; John i, 29-34. Jesus had no sin to confess; He needed no repentance, but He said to John, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."

10. "The Heavens opened, and the Spirit, like a dove, descending upon Him." On just seven different occasions do we read in Scripture of Heaven being opened, and each time it is to shew us Jesus either in humiliation or glory. When He becomes the center of our life on earth, as He is the center of all life in Heaven, then we will have Heaven on earth.

11. "A Voice from Heaven." Three times during His earthly ministry does this voice testify to Him: at His baptism, at His transfiguration, and just before His crucifixion.

Gag-Law for Anarchy

Mrs. Parsons Can Not Speak at All in Chicago.

POLICE STOP ANOTHER MEETING

At Which the Dead Anarchist's Wife Was Billed to Lecture—A Couple of Vigorous Kicks Against the "Suppression of Free Speech" Break into the Battle—A Rather Exciting Time at the Hall.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Mrs. Lucy Parsons issued an elaborate handbill yesterday, which was widely distributed through the city, announcing that she would deliver a lecture in Waverly hall last night. On the reverse side appeared what purported to be the declaration and by-laws of Labor assembly No. 1. The declaration is as follows:

Labor Assembly No. 1 has been organized for the purpose of affording the members and the general public the means of education in the social, political and economic questions of the day; to agitate and discuss all important questions that may come up, and to provide suitable literature for distribution among the people. As an organization we owe our allegiance to no political party, but welcome to our midst earnest reformers of every shade and degree.

The objects of the organization are then stated to be the establishment of a library and reading-room, to provide a fund for the publication and distribution of tracts, leaflets, etc., and to encourage and promote public speaking among the members.

Upon receipt of a handbill the chief of police notified the proprietor of Waverly hall that he must not open the hall for the proposed meeting, and last night policemen were stationed at the entrances, who denied admittance to all who appeared.

Chief of Police Hubbard said to a representative of the United Press last night:

Mrs. Parsons can advertise herself all she pleases, but we will not help her do it. We had private information that she intended to deliver a violent Anarchist harangue. Then we would have been compelled to arrest her, and you can be assured that it would have been magnified in every way in the argument of their injunction suit. The attempted lecture was simply for effect. It is well known that Mrs. Parsons can't refrain from talking of Anarchy, and we will not experiment with her further. She simply can't speak in Chicago.

When the crowd began to assemble at the hall to hear the lecture Lieut. Wilson ordered them to disperse. This they refused to do, and there was a general growling. In the midst of it a printer named Martin Lacher, who lives at 413 North Paulina street, addressed the crowd. He said they might as well live in Siberia and be done with it. But the day would come and it was not far distant when they could be granted free speech. He was proceeding with his protest when Officer Nordrum ordered him to go home. This he refused to do and he was threatened with arrest. He defied the officer to take him and he was promptly hustled off to the Central station, followed by a crowd of his friends.

Among these was Robert Burns, a molder, living in Jefferson. He desired to bail out Lacher. The police told him that the man would be booked in the morning, and he would then have an opportunity of going on his bond. This incensed Burns, and he stamped around the hall denouncing the arrest as an outrage at a furious rate. He was told to desist or he would be locked up. He continued, and Officer McDonald arrested him. Mrs. Parsons was present during the trouble in front of the hall. She was not especially voluble. She said the action of the officers was in every way reprehensible. It was an outrage upon American citizens to thus curb free speech.

MRS. PARSONS STILL SANGUINARY.

She Addresses Chicago Socialists and Time Is Called on Her.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—About 400 people, or as many as could crowd into Waverly hall, attended a meeting of the Socialistic Labor party, called for the transaction of business and the promotion of socialistic doctrines yesterday. Mrs. Lucy Parsons was present and made her speech in the same hall which they closed against her a week ago. Inspector Bonfield's men were in the hall in citizen dress, but did not interfere in any respect with the proceedings. A resolution was adopted unanimously imploring the aid of the press and citizens generally "to the end that the humblest citizen as well as the politician may enjoy all the rights guaranteed by the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of the United States."

"Tommy" Morgan, a local leader of the Socialists, made a very conservative speech containing many statements to which Mrs. Parsons took exception. She said she could not sit quietly and hear it stated that those who are dead and silent in their tombs had anything to do with the throwing of the Haymarket bomb, though in the war against tyrants all things are justifiable. She predicted that before peace could be had in a society like that in this country rivers of blood will have to run. When she got to this point the chairman interrupted, and said the time was up.

A Keeper of Insane Becomes Insane.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Notwithstanding the carefully studied efforts of the commissioners of charities and corrections and their subordinates to keep the fact from public knowledge it has leaked out that Dr. Alexander B. McDonald, general superintendent of the insane asylum, on Ward's island, has become insane. It is hoped that the affliction is only temporary, and that the once brilliant mind of the great specialist will be restored to its normal condition, but the prospect at the present time is not encouraging.

The Des Moines River Lands.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 27.—Two bills designed to quiet the titles of the settlers upon the Des Moines river lands have been passed, one by the senate and the other by the house. Senator Wilson, of Iowa, is confident that the house bill will pass the senate with an amendment providing that the interests of assignees as well as of the original pre-emptors shall be considered. He thinks this would be just, because many of the original pre-emptors sold or assigned their lands years before the title of the land company attached.

Two Ladies Meet Horrible Deaths.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Mrs. Henry Martin and Miss Kate Powers, two ladies living in one of the suburbs of this city, while driving across the Rock Island railroad track at Forty-seventh street yesterday afternoon, were struck by a locomotive and instantly killed, their bodies being horribly mutilated before the train could be stopped. The gates at the crossing had been removed for repairs.

Cut in Two by a Circular Saw.

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 29.—W. J. Borrer, aged 22, while engaged in his father's saw mill at Rock Chapel Thursday slipped and fell on a large circular saw, and his body was almost cut in two, causing death a few hours later.

Thomas Sowerby, a Grand Rapids huntsman, was accidentally shot by a companion while in pursuit of game. He will probably die.

A newly married Waconsta couple, each of whom are 19 years of age, went over to St. Johns on their wedding trip and foolishly blew out the gas. The loud odor apprised the hotel people of the true state of affairs and the couple were rescued from an untimely death, although then nearly suffocated.

The question whether or not marriage is a failure, depends largely on how you view the problem. Mrs. Carrie Stratingh, a Grand Rapids lady, evidently takes the negative side of the conundrum, as she obtained a divorce the other morning and was married the same day.

A Troy baby had been doctored for catarrh for several months, but the attending physicial seemed to afford but little relief. Finally the mother discovered a shoe button in its nose, which, being removed, the child speedily recovered from its "catarrh." Great is the medical skill of some doctors.

A Fire at Chelsea cleaned out several old business building which makes room for better and neater looking ones.

The Grand Rapids Soldiers' home was found in prime condition by a government inspector, and so will draw $100 for each of the 400 inmates from the national treasury.

Calhoun county's sheriff offers $50 for an interview with the fellow who's been feeding poison to Battle Creek canines.

In this age of early graves and easily procured divorces, fifty years of wedded life isn't overly common, but Mr. and Mrs. Abner Knapp, of Lowell, celebrated the sixty-ninth anniversary of their marriage on Christmas, those present representing five generations.

Smyptoms of Heart Disease

Diseased hearts are as common as diseased lungs, kidneys or stomach, but far less understood. The symptoms are shortness of breath, when weepings, etc., oppression in the chest, faint, weak or hungry spells, dreaming, pain or tenderness in the side, swelling feet, dropsy, etc. The unnatural circulation of the blood in the lungs, stomach, kidneys, liver and brain causes other symptoms. The only reliable remedy for the heart yet discovered is Dr. Mile's New Cure. Try it and be convinced. Sold by Baker & Hall.

The HERALD will be furnished cheaper than ever for 1889 clubbed with other papers.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

SPEER'S

GRAPE WINES

ALSO

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal churches for communion. Excellent for females, weakly persons and the aged.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This celebrated wine is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal hospitals and boards of health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particular beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that effect the weaker sex.

TONIC AND STRENGTHENING PROPERTIES

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Oporto Grape preserved in its natural fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the exciter of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret.

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry.

Is a wine of superior character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

Is a pure distillation of the grape, and stands unrivalled in this country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

ANOTHER RIVER HORROR.

The Steamer John H. Hanna Burned and Thirty Lives Lost.

PLAQUEMINE, La., Dec. 26.—The steamer John H. Hanna, loaded with cotton, from Ouachita, burned here late Monday night. The boat and cargo are a total loss. The disaster was one of the most awful that ever occurred in southern waters. The loss of life was heavy, nearly thirty persons perishing in the flames and in the river. At the time the fire was discovered the crew were at their posts. Capt. Jolles was at the wheel, and in the pilot house with him was Bob Smith, a famous Mississippi river pilot, who was one of the men on the Robert E. Lee when she turned to the water's edge some years ago. Second Engineer Merriman was in the engine-room on duty, and Capt. J. S. Holmes, one of the finest steamboat men on the river, was in command of the steamer. The boat had left Monroe Sunday morning, well laden with cotton. She picked up freight all along, and when she got out of the Ouachita and into the Mississippi she had over 2,300 bales of cotton.

Among those that were lost are: Capt. J. S. Holmes, master of boat; Sam Powell, chief clerk; Bob Smith, a pilot from Smithland, La.; Mike O'Neil, night watchman; Joe Crane, first cook; Jack Duff, second cook; Joe Horney, cabin boy; Jim Watson, second baker; Jno Crofton, the carpenter.

Among those that are badly burned about the face, hands, and body are: Dan Carroll, steward; Jim O'Neill, deck-hand; Jim Gibson, sailor; Lewis Webb, roustabout; Henry Barber, roustabout, and a number of others.

Mr. J. W. Handley, chief engineer of the boat, says that the fire started in the cotton, just aft the boilers, at a little before 12 o'clock Monday night. The second engineer was on watch and immediately blew an alarm, but so fast did the flames spread, that in three minutes the entire boat was ablaze. He jumped overboard from the shore end and reached the bank. Turning round he saw Capt. Holmes struggling in the water, and made every effort to rescue him. The mud was very deep near the shore and Capt. Holmes could not extricate himself quickly enough, and the flames soon became too hot to render his rescue possible.

SIXTY THOUSAND SHOTS A WEEK.

Dr. Carver Completes a Remarkable Feat in Marksmanship.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 31.—Dr. Carver's right hand was powerless when he took up his rifle at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, and he had not strength enough to throw the lever of his Winchester down. The doctor applied the electric battery, but the full strength of it had no effect on him. Dr. James was called in, and he advised Carver to quit, but he refused to stop, and said: "If you can only get this hand to work I'll go ahead if it kills me." After receiving an injection of morphine into his swollen arm, Dr. Carver commenced shooting at 10 o'clock. As the time was not up until 10 o'clock Sunday morning, and he had only 7,000 shots to make up the doctor was confident he would break his record, and he did so, for at 2:35 a. m. yesterday he fired at and hit the last of the 60,000 balls and retired a victor, but with a most completely used up body.

Trial of the Vesuvius.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 29.—The dynamite cruiser Vesuvius left Philadelphia Thursday morning to make a second test of her speed. She returned yesterday afternoon. The expert placed aboard of her by the government reports that over a course where the water was too shallow to give a fair test of her highest speed she made Thursday 19.59 knots per hour, and yesterday over the same course 19.47 knots, with one of the air pumps on the port engine out of order. The Messrs. Cramp, her builders, ask another trial in deep water, and have no doubt that she will prove the fastest vessel afloat.

THE VESUVIUS.

A DAKOTA TOWN BURNED.

Two-Thirds Gone Up in Smoke and Many Families Homeless.

BOTTINEAU, D. T., Dec. 31.—Fire was discovered in McArthur Bros.'s drug store, in the business center of the town, at an early hour yesterday and was soon beyond control. There being no apparatus other than buckets with which to fight the flames, those who were able rescued a portion of their effects, but many of the business men were forced to stand by and see their possessions consumed. Fully two-thirds of the town was destroyed before the fire burned itself out. The total loss will approximate $75,000. Many families are homeless and without the means to build.

Fatal Hotel Fire.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 28.—The Starbot Lake hotel at this place was burned Friday morning. Joshua Fraser, a well known author and mineralogist was suffocated. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. The other inmates of the hotel were aroused in time to make their escape. Mr. Fraser was formerly a minister of the Presbyterian church but was expelled for irregularities. For the past two years he has been engaged as a mineralogist and his publications "Shanty Life," and "Three Months Among the Moose," have been largely read.

Brutal Treatment of a Girl.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 28.—A revolting case of brutality is reported at Reed City, Mich. Mrs. Swarthout, a photographer, has been arrested for maltreating her neice. She is charged with having tied the girl's legs with a stout cord and then putting in a stick and turning the cord until the child would become almost unconscious with pain. She would also cord her tongue in the same manner until the skin burst. Mrs. Swarthout has been bound over to the next term of court, and in default of $1,000 bail languishes in jail.

Furniture Dealers in Trouble.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 28.—Judgments have been entered against Weinman & Co., furniture dealers, 926 Market street, by Michael Bash, for $39,719.59 and $4,131. The properties of the firm 925, 927 and 1,008 Market street, and 920 Filbert street will be sold by the sheriff Wednesday next.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 28.—C. P. Stevens & Co., furniture dealers, assigned Friday morning to George H. White. The assets, $40,000, it is thought will exceed the liabilities.

Governor Oglesby's Daughter Married.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 28.—Miss Olive Oglesby, daughter of Governor Oglesby, was united in marriage at 8 p. m. Thursday to Chester Allyn Snyder, a prosperous cattleman of Hannibal, Mo. The bridal pair left for Chicago on the midnight train for an eastern tour of two weeks, after which they will go to California to spend the winter.

An Eden for Outlaws.

A Characteristic Incident from Missouri State.

A RESCUE PARTY CRACKS A JAIL

And Releases Two Condemned Bald-Knobbers—Together with Five Train Wreckers—The Sheriff Sleeps the Sleep of the Just—Dave Walker and Son Prefer Hanging to Flight—Skillful Counterfeiter Captured at Chicago.

OZARK, Mo., Dec. 30.—John and Wiley Matthews, two of the four condemned Bald Knobbers, and W. P. Haltenstein, Frank Johnson, William Redford, Thomas Rooney and William Bassen, five train robbers, escaped from the jail here Friday night, being rescued by a party of persons unknown, but supposed to be friends of Bald Knob outlawry. The rescuing party numbered about twenty-five. They cut through the west wall, and, once in the jail, proceeded quietly to open the cells. Crowbars were used, and in a short time the doors of the cells containing the four condemned men were swung open. In the cell with Wiley Matthews were the five prisoners held for train robbery. They pleaded for liberty, and were allowed to escape. The Matthews, uncle and nephew, followed the train robbers and the rescuers, but old Dave Walker and his son Bill refused to go, preferring to remain and be hanged rather than take to the woods. When the sheriff entered the jail Saturday morning he found the pair sitting in their cell, the door open and a big breach in the jail wall ten feet away. A posse was at once organized and, accompanied by bloodhounds, took the trail. The fugitives fled into the Ozark mountains, and as they know every foot of ground it will be hard to capture them.

The Bald-Knobbers were convicted of the murder of Charles Green and William Edens near Chadwick, in March, 1887. Green and Edens had been talking bitterly about the terrorism of the organization. The band determined to whip them and attacked the Edens house. They broke in the door and were received with a volley that wounded two men. The band then opened a deadly fire, killing Edens and Green and wounding two men. John Matthews made a confession at the trial.

OZARK, Mo., Jan. 1.—John Matthews, one of the escaped Bald-Knobbers, was captured Sunday night a few miles out of the city and returned to the jail. Deputy Marshal James Rhodes met him in the road and, recognizing him, ordered him to throw up his hands and escorted him back to the city. Matthews claims that the rescuing party were all strangers. William Bedford, one of the train robbers who got away with the Bald-Knobbers, surrendered Monday, saying that he had had nothing to eat since his escape.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

Its Maker Caught and a Complete Outfit Confiscated.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Saturday William G. Hards, of this city, was arrested by Capt. Porter, of the United States secret service, charged with counterfeiting, and placed under $5,000 bonds to appear before the United States commissioner on Wednesday next. The circumstances leading to the discovery of the counterfeiting are as follows: One afternoon, last July, a street car conductor was standing in front of 807 North Clark street when a silver dollar fell at his feet. He picked it up and had it in his hand just long enough to discover that it was very not, as if it was just taken out of the fire. At that moment a man came hurriedly out of the house at the above number and snatched the piece of money from him. The man's manner was so excited that the conductor's suspicions were aroused; and he reported the incident to the police. Since that time the house abovementioned has been constantly under the surveillance of the detectives.

The result was that Hards, who was known as a contractor and plasterer, was surprised Saturday at work in the upper story of the house with the most complete outfit of counterfeiter's tools the inspector had ever seen, and turning out coin so nearly perfect every way that the inspector could not tell it from the genuine.

MURDERED BY A BURGLAR.

A Prominent Citizen of Hannibal, Mo., Slaughtered with an Ax.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Dec. 31.—A J. Stillwell, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Hannibal, was murdered in his house early yesterday morning. Mr. Stillwell and his wife returned home about 11 o'clock Saturday night from a party and retired soon afterward. At 2 o'clock Mrs. Stillwell was aroused by her husband's voice calling to her "Fanny, is that you?" This was succeeded by the sound of something being whirled through the air and the footsteps of some one running away. Lighting the gas Mrs. Stillwell discovered her husband lying on his bed in a pool of blood with a ghastly wound in his head.

The neighbors were hastily notified, but on their arrival Mr. Stillwell was dead. Matches were found strewn about the room and the door at the rear of the house was ajar. In the alley were found Mr. Stillwell's pocket-book, $35 in money and the bloody ax with which the murderer had accomplished the deed. It is believed that the murderer was a burglar, who entered the house during Mr. and Mrs. Stillwell's absence and secreted himself until he thought they were sound asleep, and upon being interrupted by Mr. Stillwell killed him to avoid capture.

Stole Four Thousand Dollars.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Thomas Vines, only son of a widowed mother, a young Canadian and assistant timekeeper for the Adams & Westlake company, of this city started to the factory Saturday from the office with $4,000 to pay the hands. He has not since been heard of. When the news was broken to his mother the poor woman cried: "My God! say it is not true. My Tommie, that I watched as long as I could as he went down the street at 6:30 Saturday morning, a thief! Oh, it will kill me. And his sister Bessie, who was so proud of him and taught him and got him a position, she will never get over it! My Tommy a thief! Oh, God, that he was dead before me now, and not a stain left behind on his name."

Saloon Keeper Whipped by White-Caps.

PITTSBURG, Pa. Dec. 31.—A Lima, O., special to The Times says: John Morisoner, proprietor of the only saloon at Rawson, has been repeatedly warned by White-Caps to close, but paid no attention to the threats. Saturday night a party of men, masked as White-Caps, visited him, and after demolishing the saloon whipped him until he begged for mercy and swore he would never go into the saloon business again.

The American historical association closed its meeting at the national capital Friday. Charles K. Adams, of Cornell university, was elected president and Professor Herbert Adams secretary. The annual meetings will be held in Washington City.

JUDGE LYNCH'S LAST FOR '88.

Seven Negroes Strung Up for a Most Atrocious Conspiracy.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—A special to The Times-Democrat from Greenville, Miss., says: Seven colored servants of Col. Paxton, near Arcola, were arrested a few days ago for burning the colonel's residence. Two of them confessed to drugging the coffee so as to make the family sleep, and then the conspirators set fire to the house during the night. The confession was to the effect that the woman cook drugged the coffee, but two members of the family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Aldridge, did not drink of it, and when the house was burning they awoke and roused Col. and Mrs. Paxton. Otherwise all would probably have perished. The confession also stated that one of the conspirators stood at each door with an ax or gun to kill any member of the family who should try to escape, but the slowness of the fire alarmed them and they fled. News received Monday was to the effect that the seven prisoners (five men and two women) who were under arrest and strongly guarded, disappeared Sunday night somewhat mysteriously and were probably lynched.

The sole motive for the crime seems to have been robbery. Some property taken from the house was found in the possession of the prisoners.

HEAVY-WEIGHT FIGHT IN 'FRISCO.

The Australian Negro Champion Knocks McAuliffe Out of Time.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—The contest between Joe McAuliffe, the champion heavyweight of the Pacific coast, and Jackson, the colored champion of Australia, occurred at the gymnasium of the California Athletic club last night. McAuliffe was favorite in the betting two to one. Fully 2,000 persons witnessed the fight. McAuliffe weighed 220 pounds and is 6 feet ¾ of an inch in height, Jackson's weight was a little over 200 and his height 6 feet ¼ inch. For the first nine rounds there was some heavy hitting by both of the fighters and Jackson showed wonderful quickness, and the points were decidedly in his favor. He forced McAuliffe around the ring and gave him some heavy blows, getting a less number and lighter ones in return. After the ninth round the fighting was weak on both sides until the twenty-third round, when Jackson went in with a rush and pounded his adversary ferociously. In the twenty-fourth round the Californian could not come to time and the fight was awarded to Jackson.

THE FLOOR TUMBLED IN.

Serious Disaster and Panic During a Christmas Festival.

CARLISLE, Pa., Jan. 3.—On Saturday night a panic occurred in the Lutheran church in Stoughstown, this county, resulting in the serious injury of a number of persons. The Union Sunday school was celebrating Christmas, and the building was crowded to its utmost capacity. Soon after the exercises began, a loud creaking noise was heard, and an instant later the floor began to sink. The scholars and others present became panic-stricken and made a rush for the windows and doors. The men smashed out the window panes and a number were seriously cut. A number of women and children were trampled upon in their efforts to escape, and the following were injured: Newton Goodheart, cut about face and head and internally injured, condition critical; Nelie Stouffer, internally injured; James Gaer, leg and arm broken; Charles Hall, internally injured and can not live; Lottie Cramer, arm bruised and slightly cut.

An examination of the building was made, and it was found that the sills had broken and that the floor had sunk to the depth of ten feet.

OUR IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Foreign Commerce at New York and Elsewhere—The Carrying Trade.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The forthcoming report by Secretary George Wilson, of the New York produce exchange, will show that the foreign commerce for the port of New York for the year ended June 30, 1888, exceeded that of any other year since 1881. The following figures show the commerce of this port as compared with the aggregate of all other ports of the United States during the fiscal year referred to: Total value of imports, port of New York $510,268,432, all other ports $273,026,668.

Total exports of domestic merchandise: Port of New York, $525,789,244; all other ports, $331,268,364. Excess of foreign imports over domestic exports: At the port of New York, $184,479,188; all other ports, New York included, $66,237,302.

The distribution of the carrying trade of the total imported and exported merchandise and coin and bullion is as follows: In American vessels, $221,577,568; in foreign vessels, $1,238,595,539; in land vehicles, $65,699,693.

Barry's New Order.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—It is authoritatively stated in labor circles that Thomas B. Barry will visit this city in a few days and will take final steps toward the formation of his new Brotherhood of United Labor. Philadelphia will probably be the headquarters of the new order, owing to the many dissatisfied knights, principally railroad men, who live here, and because of its proximity to the coal regions. Barry's organization will be largely officered by former Knights of Labor.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refun the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by C. A. Wright & CO.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh.

J. J. Orr, the druggist, has on hand and will keep the celebrated Indian Pill, manufactured by Dr. R. MacFarland, Genoa, O. TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH M. D.
Office, 315 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

Harpers Bazar!

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar will continue to maintain its reputation as an unequalled family journal. Its art illustrations are of the highest order, its literature is of the choicest kind, and its fashion and Household departments of the most practical and economical character. Its pattern-sheet supplements and fashion plates alone will save its readers ten times the cost of subscription, and its articles on decorative art, social etiquette, house keeping, cookery, etc., make it indispensable to every household. Its bright short stories and timely essays, are among the best published; and not a line is admitted to its columns that could offend the most fastidious taste. Among the attractions of the new volume will be serial stories by Francis Hodgson Burnett, Mrs. Alexander, Wm. Black, and Thomas Hardy, and a series of papers on the nursery management by Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Unless we have a change of temperature the ice crop will be short and thin.

Mr. and Mrs Chas. Underwood were under the Doctor's care for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Abbott moved with their household effects to Clarksville, the first of the week.

The week of prayer is being observed here this week, and will be followed by a series of meetings until further notice.

Ray Luce, our South street dressmaker, returned from a week's visit with her mother at Ann Arbor, Wednesday of last week.

Mrs. Willis Helm is spending the present week with her sister, Mrs. Butrick of Franklin.

Ed. Palmer and Dean Loree visited Flat Rock friends Friday and Saturday.

Agent Frank Allen, a Ridgeway boy, is still mounting the ladder of success. Friday of last week he was promoted to night train dispatcher of the C. J. & M., and left for Toledo to fill his position, on the afternoon train. We with many friends here extend our regards for his success.

Mrs. Phebe Allison returned Saturday from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Solomon Maugus of Litchfield, Mich.

Wendel Bush, after a few days recreation, returned to his home at Brooklyn, N. Y. Friday.

Mrs. Horace Brown of Grand Ledge, Mich., after a visit of several days with her sister, Mrs. Ed. Harrison left for her home Friday.

Lizzie Clack is visiting friends in the village at present.

Bert Lawton of Onsted, is the latest foreign student of our school

Mame DuBois of Raisin, has secured rooms of Mrs. Cheever and began housekeeping in connection with attending school.

Hereafter those having articles to hand in for the HERALD will please bring them on Monday of each week as we have to send to press Tuesdays, the paper being printed Thursday morning.

Waring & Potter's three choice presents given to the three best customers during the holiday season, resulted in the following: James Pocklington received first prize, a choice hanging lamp; F. E. Pocklington second, and Andrew McKay third, each receiving a decorated stand lamp.

There was a very pleasant time enjoyed by all who attended the social held at Mrs. Jesse Potter's on Friday evening. The society adjourned until after the close of the meetings at which time they will hold a social at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson's; full particulars will be given in due time.

The Sunday school board met in the lecture room of the church Thursday evening of last week and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Supt.—G. P. Waring.
Asst. Supt.—H W. Daniels.
Sec.—F. J. Temple.
Treas.—Mary Osgood.
Chorister—
Organists—Flota Smith, Anna Osborn, Lulu Rappleye, Lena Smith.

Prof. H. W. Daniels, after a two weeks vacation, began his school duties Monday with Miss Clara Temple as primary teacher. There is a good attendance and an increasing interest manifested, there being several foreign students in attendance, two from our own township out of the district; three from Raisin; five from Macon; one from Onsted, and one from North Farmington, Oakland county. The teachers would be pleased to receive a call from any interested in the welfare of the school at any time.

Miss Emma Gilbert, assistant supt. and secretary of the Industrial Home at Adrian, will give a talk upon the interest of that institution, at Grange Hall, Macon, this week Friday evening. She will give an opportunity for any present to ask questions upon her subject, expecting the privilege to question them. All who have an interest in that public institution, or wish to criticise in any way, are especially invited to attend. The lecture will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Admission Free.

By Order of Overseer.

Talk about Kansas and Southern California, but listen to the noise from Ridgeway. On January 2d. Richard and W. P. Cadmus took their young cattle out of their pasture on the Macon for the first time since turning out, the pasture was green and as fresh as ever. On Monday, January 7th, we received a large bouquet of Pansy blossoms from Mrs. W. R. Wilson, she gathering them from her flower garden in the lawn; they were as fresh and thrifty as in early spring. The probabilities are that if the young cattle had been in Kansas they would have been blown down in Barber Co. and frozen to death against a barbed wire fence. As for the Pansies, ask Jim Pocklington, he can vouch for their freshness in California.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Miss Blanche Smith left Monday for Hellmuth College, London, Ont., accompanied by her friends, Miss Marie Merigold and Miss Edna Sloane.

Albert Nimocks has sold his house and lot to Andrew McFaul. Mr. N. will sell part of his household goods at auction, Saturday 12th and will leave Clinton with his family next week. He expects to locate in Newton, Kan.

Miss Laura Weiss, of Manchester, visited friends here over Sunday.

Prof. W. C. Hopkins went to Raisin last Saturday.

Mrs. Chas. Johnston, of Detroit, is visiting at her father's E. F. Muir's.

Miss Abbie Chandler, who has been spending a few weeks in Saline, returned Monday.

D. M. Bainbridge has bought the house and lot owned by F. L. Couch,

Mr. John Raby died at his home in Iron Creek, early Sunday morning. He had been out of health for some time. The funeral was held Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Dr. Conklin, of Manchester, visited friends here last Friday.

Charles Parker returned from his eastern trip last Friday night.

Mrs. J. T. Clark and daughters left Tuesday for a few days visit with friends in Blissfield.

Miss Mame Bradner returned from her visit in Grand Rapids last Monday.

The four months' old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scoville died last Sunday after a lingering illness. Mr. Scoville arrived from South Bend, Ind., and Miss Carl Corey from Paw Paw, on Monday. The funeral services were held on Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Stalker officiating.

Ned Newcomb returned from Blissfield the first of the week.

Mr and Mrs. Graham, of Norvell, came down to see their daughter, Mrs. Ordiway, Monday.

C. S. Burroughs and Ed. Van De Mark were on the road last week.

A drama is in preparation by the amateurs of this place that is destined to eclipse any former event of the kind that has ever taken place here. The drama itself is said to be an excellent one and the characters will be selected from the best talent that the town affords.

Married at six o'clock Monday A. M., Jan. 7th., at the Catholic church, by Father Slane, Mr. James Kehoe and Miss Hannah Humphrey.

Miss Vesta Mills and Mr. Crittenden, of Saline, spent Thursday in town.

Wm. Muir and wife visited in Tecumseh last Friday.

Mrs. Dell Ordiway, whose sickness was reported in last week's issue, is a very little better. Many times during the past week her life has been despaired of and then there would be enough improvement in her condition to warrant a slight gleam of hope for her recovery. It is now thought that she may regain her health.

Miss Laura Clark went to Tecumseh last Tuesday.

A meeting of the Chapter was called last Monday evening for work in the fifth and sixth degrees.

Keyes and Kishpaugh have a fine exhibit at the Detroit poultry show. Mr. Kishpaugh went to Detroit Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. David Brooks left this week Thursday for Mt. Summit, Ind., to visit their daughter, Mrs. Frank P. Ice.

Dr. Hunter, of Jackson, has located in Clinton to practice dentistry. Office over Freese's store.

Ray Blanchard and wife, of Adrian, are at Mrs. Sinclair's on a visit.

Geo. Freese now drives a matched team having traded with Chris Schneila.

Regular meeting of Masonic Lodge next Saturday evening, and R. A. M. next Tuesday evening.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind. testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at.

Charles Burleson started for Santa Barbara, Cal., on Monday last. Mrs. B. went there two months ago. She has a brother living there.

Wm. Niblack, of Wheatland, has been visiting friends here.

Byron Crittenden and wife, of Mason, are spending a few days with friends. Mr. C. has sold his place in Mason and thinks of locating in the west.

Mr. Huston declines to preside as president for the literary society and the society will elect another president on Saturday evening next.

The ladies of North Macon have organized a series of socials to be held at their several homes in that vicinity, the proceeds to be used to improve the cemetery grounds. The first will be a box social to be given at the residence of John C. Mills, Tuesday evening, Jan. 15. The ladies are requested to furnish the boxes with eatables for two. The boxes to be sold at auction. We earnestly hope that all people owning lots will take an interest in these socials. Cub Berdan and wife are expected to be present and furnish some choice music. A general invitation is extended.

There is a prospect of extending the telegraph line via. Lake Ridge and York to Milan.

John Easterly's barn burned at 6 o'clock, Saturday morning, including hay, straw, cornstalks, 200 bush. oats, 100 wheat, 3 cows, 45 sheep, 3 horses, harness' buggies, wagons, fanning mill, etc. Damage about $1500, nearly covered by insurance. "The tramp" is suspected, one having been seen one mile east that morning.

"Will" Hendershot and Lottie Draper were married Newyears day.

The Prohibition club meets monthly on the Wednesday evening nearest the full moon. Next meeting at Richard Clarkson's Wednesday evening, Jan. 16th. A literary program, consisting of songs, readings, recitations, and a discussion on the question "What effect will Harrison's" election have on the Liquor traffic? Everybody invited.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Dr. Swartout has sold out his business interests in Britton, and we understand is expecting to leave for other parts. He has sold his stock of groceries to Henry Brown, who proposes to go on with the business in the same place. His drugs and practice he has sold to Dr. Hendershot of Macon, who will enter immediately into the practice of his medical profession, and as he comes well recommended, it is hoped he will give satisfaction as a practicing physician to the whole community. Dr. Swarthout was liked generally, and the people would have been glad to have had him remain, but young men are not always at rest where first they begin business.

Wm. J. Andrews and lady have returned from their wedding tour and expect to commence house-keeping immediately. Mr. Andrews works and occupies his father's farm, a little south-west of Britton.

The Grange State Lecturer—Woodman—was here on Monday afternoon and evening. He gave a lecture in the afternoon and in the evening there was a meeting to consider the propriety of organizing a Grange in Britton; the result of the deliberations not known.

The week of prayer was observed in the Christian church, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wright conducting the services.

Mrs. Will Osgood has been visiting friends in Morenci during the holidays.

DEATH OF DANFORTH KEYES.

An old landmark and a respected citizen of Clinton has been gathered to his fathers. Danforth Keyes, the subject of this humble tribute, was born May 27th, 1816, at Ashford, Conn. He remained at his old home until his majority, as was the custom of young men in that early day and in 1837 he removed to the village of Clinton, a thriving town in the "far west" during the thirties. His business aptitude was manifest, even at that early period of his life, and he obtained a position at once in the dry goods store of Snow & Lockwood. At the end of a year he purchased Mr. Lockwood's interest, and the firm of Snow & Keyes continued in the mercantile business nearly twenty years. In 1858 this firm sold their stock of goods and bought the flouring mill which they continued to manage until 1878. Owing to his genial manner and natural abilities he soon became a social and business leader in the community in which he had cast his lot, and he was honored by his fellow citizens with many offices of trust and responsibility. He filled the office of supervisor of the old town of Tecumseh before Clinton was detached, from 1860 to 1866, and was regarded as one of the best among the township's long list of able and efficient supervisors. He served one term in the State Legislature after the war and made a most honorable record in that body. His quiet unassuming manner, sterling integrity and practical good sense formed the elements which gave him a commanding influence as a legislator. He also served his township for several terms as Justice of the Peace and held that office at the date of his death. In 1853 he was appointed postmaster at Clinton by President Franklin Pierce and held the position for eight years, until the close of President Buchanan's administration in 1861. In October 1885 he was again appointed postmaster by President Cleveland. He acted as school trustee of the union school of Clinton for many years, and during nearly his entire encumbency of that place he acted as Director of the Board.

Mr. Keyes was married Dec. 24th, 1840 to Miss Mary Ann Hamilton by the brother of his bride Hiram Hamilton. His domestic life was a peculiarly happy one and the union was blessed with seven children. Three of them are now at the old home, one resides at Grand Rapids and three have gone before.

During the last year of his life Mr. Keyes was in feeble health and his physical constitution was slowly but surely crumbling away. For the past few months his son C. D. Keyes has had the entire management of the postoffice. He was stricken with a severe attack of illness last summer from which he never recovered. With the approach of cold weather his hold upon life became weaker with each setting of the sun, until Saturday, Jan. 5th, when the immortal soul left its frail tenement of clay, and ascended to the God who gave it.

The funeral obsequies were held at the family residence in Clinton on Monday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. G. E. Peters conducted the services, assisted by the Episcopal choir. The burial took place in the Clinton cemetery, and the exercises at the grave were conducted by the Masonic fraternity, which were very impressive. The deceased was a charter member of the Clinton blue lodge and had always retained his membership in the order. The pall bearers were F. D. Lancaster, A. B. VanDeMark, Peter Kishpaugh, Elisha Woodward, John Hause and Joseph Linden. The following friends from abroad were present at the last sad rites: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keyes, of Grand Rapids, Geo. Keyes and Mrs. Gallory, of Eaton Rapids, Clarence Cotton, of Grand Rapids, and George Snow, of Winona.

By the death of Danforth Keyes Clinton has lost one of her oldest, most respected and most talented citizens. He was a man of domestic habits and of a remarkably retiring disposition. He filled many positions of public trust and discharged his duties with singular fidelity and yet he was summoned by his fellow citizens to fill them all. He never sought official preferment but in his case the office always sought the man. In the family circle he was a model father and husband, kind and indulgent, faithful and true. As a business man he was the soul of integrity and uprightness. As a citizen he was respected by all. He leaves a legacy to his children, in his unblemished character, more valuable than gold. He has fought the good fight, he has kept the faith, he has finished his course, he has entered upon his eternal inheritance on high.

ANOTHER RIVER HORROR.

The Steamer John H. Hanna Burned and Thirty Lives Lost.

PLAQUEMINE, La., Dec. 26.—The steamer John H. Hanna, loaded with cotton, from Ouachita, burned here late Monday night. The boat and cargo are a total loss. The disaster was one of the most awful that ever occurred in southern waters. The loss of life was heavy, nearly thirty persons perishing in the flames and in the river. At the time the fire was discovered the crew were at their posts. Capt. Jolles was at the wheel, and in the pilot house with him was Bob Smith, a famous Mississippi river pilot, who was one of the men on the Robert E. Lee when she burned to the water's edge some years ago. Second Engineer Merriman was in the engine-room on duty, and Capt. J. S. Holmes, one of the finest steamboat men on the river, was in command of the steamer. The boat had left Monroe Sunday morning, well laden with cotton. She picked up freight all along, and when she got out of the Ouachita and into the Mississippi she had over 2,300 bales of cotton.

Among those that were lost are: Capt. J. S. Holmes, master of boat; Sam Powell, chief clerk; Bob Smith, a pilot from Smithland, La.; Mike O'Neil, night watchman; Joe Crane, first cook; Jack Duff, second cook; Joe Horney, cabin boy; Jim Watson, second baker; Jac Crofton, the carpenter.

Among those that are badly burned about the face, hands, and body are: Dan Carroll, steward; Jim O'Neill, deck-hand; Jim Gibbons, sailor; Lewis Webb, roustabout; Henry Barber, roustabout, and a number of others.

Mr. J. W. Handley, chief engineer of the boat, says that the fire started in the cotton, just aft the boilers, at a little before 12 o'clock Monday night. The second engineer was on watch and immediately blew an alarm, but so fast did the flames spread, that in three minutes the entire boat was ablaze. He jumped overboard from the shore end and reached the bank. Turning round he saw Capt. Holmes struggling in the water, and made every effort to rescue him. The mud was very deep near the shore and Capt. Holmes could not extricate himself quickly enough, and the flames soon became too hot to render his rescue possible.

SIXTY THOUSAND SHOTS A WEEK.

Dr. Carver Completes a Remarkable Feat in Markmanship.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 31.—Dr. Carver's right hand was powerless when he took up his rifle at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, and he had not strength enough to throw the lever of his Winchester down. The doctor applied the electric battery, but the full strength of it had no effect on him. Dr. James was called in, and he advised Carver to quit, but he refused to stop, and said: "If you can only get this hand to work I'll go ahead if it kills me." After receiving an injection of morphine into his swollen arm Dr. Carver commenced shooting at 10 o'clock. As the time was not up until 10 o'clock Sunday morning, and he had only 7,000 shots to make up the doctor was confident he would break his record, and he did so, for at 2:35 a. m. yesterday he fired at and hit the last of the 60,000 balls and retired a victor, but with a most completely used up body.

THE VESUVIUS.

her speed. She returned yesterday afternoon. The expert placed aboard of her by the government reports that over a course where the water was too shallow to give a fair test of her highest speed she made Thursday 19.59 knots per hour, and yesterday over the same course 19.47 knots, with one of the air pumps on the port engine out of order. The Messrs. Cramp, her builders, ask another trial in deep water, and have no doubt that she will prove the fastest vessel afloat.

A DAKOTA TOWN BURNED.

Two-Thirds Gone Up in Smoke and Many Families Homeless.

BOTTINEAU, D. T., Dec. 31.—Fire was discovered in McArthur Bros's drug store, in the business center of the town, at an early hour yesterday and was soon beyond control. There being no apparatus other than buckets with which to fight the flames, those who were able rescued a portion of their effects, but many of the business men were forced to stand by and see their possessions consumed. Fully two-thirds of the town was destroyed before the fire burned itself out. The total loss will approximate $75,000. Many families are homeless and without the means to build.

Fatal Hotel Fire.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 28.—The Starbot Lake hotel at this place was burned Friday morning. Joshua Fraser, a well known author and mineralogist was suffocated. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. The other inmates of the hotel were aroused in time to make their escape. Mr. Fraser was formerly a minister of the Presbyterian church but was expelled for irregularities. For the past two years he has been engaged as a mineralogist and his publications "Shanty Life," and "Three Months Among the Moose," have been largely read.

Brutal Treatment of a Girl.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 28.—A revolting case of brutality is reported at Reed City, Mich. Mrs Swarthout, a photographer, has been arrested for maltreating her neice. She is charged with having tied the girl's legs with a stout cord and then putting in a stick and turning the cord until the child would become almost unconscious with pain. She would also cord her tongue in the same manner until the skin burst. Mrs. Swarthout has been bound over to the next term of court, and in default of $1,000 bail languishes in jail.

Furniture Dealers in Trouble.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 28.—Judgments have been entered against Weinman & Co., furniture dealers, 926 Market street, by Michael Bash, for $39,779.59 and $4,131. The properties of the firm 925, 927 and 1,008 Market street, and 926 Filbert street will be sold by the sheriff Wednesday next.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 28.—C. P. Stevens & Co., furniture dealers, assigned Friday morning to George H. White. The assets, $40,000, it is thought will exceed the liabilities.

Governor Oglesby's Daughter Married.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 28.—Miss Olive Oglesby, daughter of Governor Oglesby, was united in marriage at 8 p. m. Thursday to Chester Allyn Snyder, a prosperous cattleman of Hannibal, Mo. The bridal pair left for Chicago on the midnight train for an eastern tour of two weeks, after which they will go to California to spend the winter.

An Eden for Outlaws.

A Characteristic Incident from Missouri State.

A RESCUE PARTY CRACKS A JAIL

And Releases Two Condemned Bald-Knobbers—Together with Five Train Wreckers—The Sheriff Sleeps the Sleep of the Just—Dave Walker and Son Prefer Hanging to Flight—Skillful Counterfeiter Captured at Chicago.

OZARK, Mo., Dec. 30.—John and Wiley Matthews, two of the four condemned Bald Knobbers, and W. P. Halbenseben, Frank Johnson William Redford, Thomas Rooney, and William Sassan, five train robbers, escaped from the jail here Friday night, being rescued by a party of persons unknown, but supposed to be friends of Bald Knob outlawry. The rescuing party numbered about twenty-five. They cut through the west wall, and, once in the jail, proceeded quietly to open the cells. Crowbars were used, and in a short time the doors of the cells containing the four condemned men were swung open. In the cell with Wiley Matthews were the five prisoners held for train robbery. They pleaded for liberty, and were allowed to escape. The Matthews, uncle and nephew, followed the train robbers and the rescuers, but old Dave Walker and his son Bill refused to go, preferring to remain and be hanged rather than take to the woods. When the sheriff entered the jail Saturday morning he found the pair sitting in their cell, the door open and a big breach in the jail wall ten feet away. A posse was at once organized and, accompanied by bloodhounds, took the trail. The fugitives fled into the Ozark mountains, and as they know every foot of ground it will be hard to capture them.

The Bald-Knobbers were convicted of the murder of Charles Green and William Edens near Chadwick, in March, 1887. Green and Edens had been talking bitterly about the terrorism of the organization. The band determined to whip them and attacked the Edens house. They broke in the door and were received with a volley that wounded two men. The band then opened a deadly fire, killing Edens and Green and wounding two men. John Matthews made a confession at the trial.

OZARK, Mo., Jan. 1.—John Matthews, one of the escaped Bald-Knobbers, was captured Sunday night a few miles out of the city and returned to the jail. Deputy Marshal James Rhodes met him in the road and, recognizing him, ordered him to throw up his hands and escorted him back to the city. Matthews claims that the rescuing party were all strangers. William Bedford, one of the train robbers who got away with the Bald-Knobbers, surrendered Monday, saying that he had had nothing to eat since his escape.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

Its Maker Caught and a Complete Outfit Confiscated.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Saturday William G. Hards, of this city, was arrested by Capt. Porter, of the United States secret service, charged with counterfeiting, and placed under $2,000 bonds to appear before the United States commissioner on Wednesday next. The circumstances leading to the discovery of the counterfeiting are as follows: One afternoon, last July, a street car conductor was standing in front of 80 North Clark street when a silver dollar fell at his feet. He picked it up and had it in his hand just long enough to discover that it was very hot, as if it was just taken out of the fire. At that moment a man came hurriedly out of the house at the above number and snatched the piece of money from him. The man's manner was so excited that the conductor's suspicions were aroused, and he reported the incident to the police. Since that time the house abovementioned has been constantly under the surveillance of the detectives.

The result was that Hards, who was known as a contractor and plasterer, was surprised Saturday at work in the upper story of the house with the most complete outfit of counterfeiter's tools the inspector had ever seen, and turning out coin so nearly perfect every way that the inspector could not tell it from the genuine.

MURDERED BY A BURGLAR.

A Prominent Citizens of Hannibal, Mo., Slaughtered with an Ax.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Dec. 31.—A J. Stillwell, one of the wealthiest and most prominet citizens of Hannibal, was murdered in his house early yesterday morning. Mr. Stillwell and his wife returned home about 11 o'clock Saturday night from a party and retired soon afterward. At 2 o'clock Mrs. Stillwell was aroused by her husband's voice calling to her "Fanny, is that you?" This was succeeded by the sound of something being whirled through the air and the footsteps of some one running away. Lighting the gas Mrs. Stillwell discovered her husband lying on his bed in a pool of blood with a ghastly wound in his head.

The neighbors were hastily notified, but on their arrival Mr. Stillwell was dead. Matches were found strewn about the room and the door at the rear of the house was ajar. In the alley were found Mr. Stillwell's pocket-book, $35 in money and the bloody ax with which the murderer had accomplished the deed. It is believed that the murderer was a burglar, who entered the house during Mr. and Mrs. Stillwell's absence and secreted himself until he thought they were sound asleep, and upon being interrupted by Mr. Stillwell killed him to avoid capture.

Stole Four Thousand Dollars.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Thomas Vines, only son of a widowed mother, a young Canadian and assistant timekeeper for the Adams & Westlake company, of this city started to the factory Saturday from the office with $4,000 to pay the hands. He has not since been heard of. When the news was broken to his mother the poor woman cried: "My God! say it is not true. My Tommie, that I watched as long as I could as he went down the street at 6:30 Saturday morning, a thief! Oh, it will kill me. And his sister Bessie, who was so proud of him and taught him and got him a position, she will never get over it! My Tommy a thief! Oh, God, that he was dead before me now, and not a stain left behind on his name."

Saloon Keeper Whipped by White-Caps.

PITTSBURG, Pa. Dec. 31.—A Lima, O., special to The Times says: John Morisoner, proprietor of the only saloon at Rawson, has been repeatedly warned by White-Caps to close, but paid no attention to the threats. Saturday night a party of men, masked as White-Caps, visited him, and after demolishing the saloon whipped him until he begged for mercy and swore he would never go into the saloon business again.

The American historical association closed its meeting at the national capital Friday. Charles K. Adams, of Cornell university, was elected president and Professor Herbert Adams secretary. The annual meetings will be held in Washington City.

JUDGE LYNCH'S LAST FOR '88.

Seven Negroes Strung Up for a Most Atrocious Conspiracy.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—A special to The Times-Democrat from Greenville, Miss., says: Seven colored servants of Col. Paxton, near Arcola, were arrested a few days ago for burning the colonel's residence. Two of them confessed to drugging the coffee so as to make the family sleep, and then the conspirators set fire to the house during the night. The confession was to the effect that the woman cook drugged the coffee, but two members of the family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Aldridge, did not drink of it, and when the house was burning they awoke and roused Col. and Mrs. Paxton. Otherwise all would probably have perished. The confession also stated that one of the conspirators stood at each door with an ax or gun to kill any member of the family who should try to escape, but the slowness of the fire alarmed them and they fled. News received Monday was to the effect that the seven prisoners (five men and two women) who were under arrest and strongly guarded, disappeared Sunday night somewhat mysteriously and were probably lynched.

The sole motive for the crime seems to have been robbery. Some property taken from the house was found in the possession of the prisoners.

HEAVY-WEIGHT FIGHT IN 'FRISCO.

The Australian Negro Champion Knocks McAuliffe Out of Time.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—The contest between Joe McAuliffe, the champion heavyweight of the Pacific coast, and Jackson, the colored champion of Australia, occurred at the gymnasium of the California Athletic club last night. McAuliffe was favorite in the betting two to one. Fully 2,000 persons witnessed the fight. McAuliffe weighed 200 pounds and is 6 feet ¾ of an inch in height, Jackson's weight was a little over 200 and his height 6 feet ¼ inch. For the first nine rounds there was some heavy hitting by both of the fighters and Jackson showed wonderful quickness, and the points were decidedly in his favor. He forced McAuliffe around the ring and gave him some heavy blows, getting a less number and lighter ones in return. After the ninth round the fighting was weak on both sides until the twenty-third round, when Jackson went in with a rush and pounded his adversary ferociously. In the twenty-fourth round the Californian could not come to time and the fight was awarded to Jackson.

THE FLOOR TUMBLED IN.

Serious Disaster and Panic During a Christmas Festival.

CARLISLE, Pa., Jan. 2.—On Saturday night a panic occurred in the Lutheran church in Stoughstown, this county, resulting in the serious injury of a number of persons. The Union Sunday school was celebrating Christmas, and the building was crowded to its utmost capacity. Soon after the exercises began, a loud creaking noise was heard, and an instant later the floor began to sink. The scholars and others present became panic-stricken and made a rush for the windows and doors. The men smashed out the window panes and a number were seriously cut. A number of women and children were trampled upon in their efforts to escape, and the following were injured: Newton Goodheart, cut about face and head and internally injured, condition critical; Nellie Stouffer, internally injured; James Gaer, leg and arm broken; Charles Hall, internally injured and can not live; Lottie Cramer, arm bruised and slightly cut.

An examination of the building was made, and it was found that the sills had broken and that the floor had sunk to the depth of ten feet.

OUR IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Foreign Commerce at New York and Elsewhere—The Carrying Trade.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The forthcoming report by Secretary George Wilson, of the New York produce exchange, will show that the foreign commerce for the port of New York for the year ended June 30, 1888, exceeded that of any other year since 1881. The following figures show the commerce of this port as compared with the aggregate of all other ports of the United States during the fiscal year referred to: Total value of imports, port of New York $510,268,432, all other ports $253,026,668.

Total exports of domestic merchandise: Port of New York, $325,789,244; all other ports, $591,568,364. Excess of foreign imports over domestic exports: At the port of New York, $184,479,188; all other ports, New York included, $66,257,492.

The distribution of the carrying trade of the total imported and exported merchandise and coin and bullion is as follows: In American vessels, $221,577,568; in foreign vessels, $1,328,595,559; in land vehicles, $65,699,663.

Barry's New Order.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—It is authoritatively stated in labor circles that Thomas B. Barry will visit this city in a few days and will take final steps toward the formation of his new Brotherhood of United Labor. Philadelphia will probably be the headquarters of the new order, owing to the many dissatisfied knights, principally railroad men, who live here, and because of its proximity to the coal regions. Barry's organization will be largely officered by former Knights of Labor.

Harpers Bazar!

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar will continue to maintain its reputation as an unequalled family journal. Its art illustrations are of the highest order, its literature is of the choicest kind, and its fashion and Household departments of the most practical and economical character. Its pattern-sheet supplements and fashion plates alone will give its readers ten times the cost of subscription, and its articles on decorative art, social etiquette, house-keeping, cookery, etc., make it indispensable to every household. Its bright short stories and timely essays, are among the best published; and not a line is admitted to its columns that could offend the most fastidious taste. Among the attractions of the new volume will be serial stories by Francis Hodgson Burnett, Mrs. Alexander, Wm. Black, and Thomas Hardy, and a series of papers on the nursery management by Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Unless we have a change of temperature the ice crop will be short and thin.

Mr. and Mrs Chas. Underwood were under the Doctor's care for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Abbott moved with their household effects to Clarksville, the first of the week.

The week of prayer is being observed here this week, and will be followed by a series of meetings until further notice.

Ray Luce, our South street dressmaker, returned from a week's visit with her mother at Ann Arbor, Wednesday of last week.

Mrs. Willis Helm is spending the present week with her sister, Mrs. Butrick of Franklin.

Ed. Palmer and Dean Loree visited Flat Rock friends Friday and Saturday.

Agent Frank Allen, a Ridgeway boy, is still mounting the ladder of success. Friday of last week he was promoted to night train dispatcher of the C. J. & M., and left for Toledo to fill his position, on the afternoon train. We with many friends here extend our regards for his success.

Mrs. Phebe Allison returned Saturday from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Solomon Maugus of Litchfield, Mich.

Wendel Bush, after a few days recreation, returned to his home at Brooklyn, N. Y. Friday.

Mrs. Horace Brown of Grand Ledge, Mich., after a visit of several days with her sister, Mrs. Ed. Harrison left for her home Friday.

Mame DuBois of Raisin, has secured rooms of Mrs. Cheever and began housekeeping in connection with attending school.

Hereafter those having articles to hand in for the HERALD will please bring them on Monday of each week as we have to send to press Tuesdays, the paper being printed Thursday morning.

Waring & Potter's three choice presents given to the three best customers during the holiday season, resulted in the following: James Pocklington received first prize, a choice hanging lamp; F. E. Pocklington second, and Andrew McKay third, each receiving a decorated stand lamp.

There was a very pleasant time enjoyed by all who attended the social held at Mrs. Jesse Potter's on Friday evening. The society adjourned until after the close of the meetings at which time they will hold a social at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson's; full particulars will be given in due time.

The Sunday school board met in the lecture room of the church Thursday evening of last week and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Supt.—G. P. Waring.
Asst. Supt.—H W. Daniels.
Sec.—F. J. Temple.
Treas.—Mary Osgood.
Chorister—
Organists—Flota Smith, Anna Osborn, Lulu Rappleye, Lena Smith.

Prof. H. W. Daniels, after a two weeks vacation, began his school duties Monday with Miss Clara Temple as primary teacher. There is a good attendance and an increasing interest manifested, there being several foreign students in attendance, two from our own township out of the district; three from Raisin; five from Macon; one from Onsted, and one from North Farmington, Oakland county. The teachers would be pleased to receive a call from any interested in the welfare of the school at any time.

Miss Emma Gilbert, assistant supt. and secretary of the Industrial Home at Adrian, will give a talk upon the interest of that institution, at Grange Hall, Macon, this week Friday evening. She will give an opportunity for any present to ask questions upon her subject, expecting the privilege to question them. All who have an interest in that public institution, or wish to criticise in any way, are especially invited to attend. The lecture will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Admission Free.

By Order of Overseer.

Talk about Kansas and Southern California, but listen to the noise from Ridgeway. On January 2d. Richard and W. P. Calkins took their young cattle out of their pasture on the Macon for the first time since turning out, the pasture was green and as fresh as ever. On Monday, January 7th, we received a large bouquet of Pansy blossoms from Mrs. W. R. Wilson, she gathering them from her flower garden in the lawn; they were as fresh and thrifty as in early spring. The probabilities are that if the young cattle had been in Kansas they would have been blown down in Barber Co. and frozen to death against a barbed wire fence. As for the Pansies, ask Jim Pocklington, he can vouch for their freshness in California.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Miss Blanche Smith left Monday for Hellmuth College, London, Ont., accompanied by her friends, Miss Marie Merigold and Miss Edna Sloane.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Dr. Swart out has sold out his business interests in Britton, and we understand is expecting to leave for other parts. He has sold his stock of groceries to Henry Brown, who proposes to go on with the business in the same place. His drugs and practice he has sold to Dr. Hendershot of Macon, who will enter immediately into the practice of his medical profession, and as he comes well recommended, it is hoped he will give satisfaction as a practicing physician to the whole community. Dr. Swarthout was liked generally, and the people would have been glad to have had him remain, but young men are not always at rest where first they begin business.

Wm. J. Andrews and lady have returned from their wedding tour and expect to commence house-keeping immediately. Mr. Andrews works and occupies his father's farm, a little south-west of Britton.

The Grange State Lecturer—Woodman—was here on Monday afternoon and evening. He gave a lecture in the afternoon and in the evening there was a meeting to consider the propriety of organizing a Grange in Britton; the result of the deliberations not known.

The week of prayer was observed in the Christian church, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wright conducting the services.

Mrs. Will Osgood has been visiting friends in Morenci during the holidays.

DEATH OF DANFORTH KEYES.

An old landmark and a respected citizen of Clinton has been gathered to his fathers. Danforth Keyes, the subject of this humble tribute, was born May 27th, 1816, at Ashford, Conn. He remained at his old home until his majority, as was the custom of young men in that early day and in 1837 he removed to the village of Clinton, a thriving town in the "far west" during the thirties. His business aptitude was manifest, even at that early period of his life, and he obtained a position at once in the dry goods store of Snow & Lockwood. At the end of a year he purchased Mr. Lockwood's interest, and the firm of Snow & Keyes continued in the mercantile business nearly twenty years. In 1858 this firm sold their stock of goods and bought the flouring mill which they continued to manage until 1878. Owing to his genial manner and natural abilities he soon became a social and business leader in the community in which he had cast his lot, and he was honored by his fellow citizens with many offices of trust and responsibility. He filled the office of supervisor of the old town of Tecumseh before Clinton was detached, from 1860 to 1866, and was regarded as one of the best among the township's long list of able and efficient supervisors. He served one term in the State Legislature after the war and made a most honorable record in that body. His quiet unassuming manner, sterling integrity and practical good sense formed the elements which gave him a commanding influence as a legislator. He also served his township for several terms as Justice of the Peace and held that office at the date of his death. In 1853 he was appointed postmaster at Clinton by President Franklin Pierce and held the position for eight years, until the close of President Buchanan's administration in 1861. In October 1885 he was again appointed postmaster by President Cleveland. He acted as school trustee of the union school of Clinton for many years, and during nearly his entire encumbency of that place he acted as Director of the Board.

Mr. Keyes was married Dec. 24th, 1840 to Miss Mary Ann Hamilton by the brother of his bride Hiram Hamilton. His domestic life was a peculiarly happy one and the union was blessed with seven children. Three of them are now at the old home, one resides at Grand Rapids and three have gone before.

During the last year of his life Mr. Keyes was in feeble health and his physical constitution was slowly but surely crumbling away. For the past few months his son C. D. Keyes has had the entire management of the postoffice. He was stricken with a severe attack of illness last summer from which he never recovered. With the approach of cold weather his hold upon life became weaker with each setting of the sun, until Saturday, Jan. 5th, when the immortal soul left its frail tenement of clay, and ascended to the God who gave it.

The funeral obsequies were held at the family residence in Clinton on Monday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. G. E. Peters conducted the services; assisted by the Episcopal choir. The burial took place in the Clinton cemetery, and the exercises at the grave were conducted by the Masonic fraternity, which were very impressive.

The deceased was a charter member of the Clinton blue lodge and had always retained his membership in the order. The pall bearers were F. D. Lancaster, A. B. VanDeMark, Peter Kishpaugh, Elisha Woodward, John Hause and Joseph Linden. The following friends from abroad were present at the last sad rites: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keyes, of Grand Rapids, Geo. Keyes and Mrs. Gallory, of Eaton Rapids, Clarence Cotton, of Grand Rapids, and George Snow, of Winona.

By the death of Danforth Keyes Clinton has lost one of her oldest, most respected and most talented citizens. He was a man of domestic habits and of a remarkably retiring disposition. He filled many positions of public trust and discharged his duties with singular fidelity and yet he was summoned by his fellow citizens to fill them all. He never sought official preferment but in his case the office always sought the man. In the family circle he was a model father and husband, kind and indulgent, faithful and true. As a business man he was the soul of integrity and uprightness. As a citizen he was respected by all. He leaves a legacy to his children, in his unblemished character, more valuable than gold. He has fought the good fight, he has kept the faith, he has finished his course, he has entered upon his eternal inheritance on high.

PREST. CLEVELAND AND GEN. HARRISON.

President Cleveland and President-elect Harrison have, since the election, been dignified and friendly. It will be remembered that a short time after the election the beautiful mistress of the White House, Mrs. Cleveland, wrote a letter to Mrs. Harrison, and gave the future mistress of the executive mansion a pressing invitation that when she, with her husband, came to Washington, she spend the days preceding the inauguration as her guest. After it was a certainty that Mr. Harrison had been elected, President Cleveland wrote a letter to his successful opponent, extending to him congratulations on the result of the election which would make him the President's successor. This naturally and properly brought forth a pleasant reply from the future President. Since that time a very pleasant correspondence has been carried on between the two distinguished men. Some of Mr. Harrison's letters have been in the nature of inquiries regarding the daily routine of the office, together with many other things which Gen. Harrison would naturally desire to be informed upon.

Mrs. Harrison has also been in weekly correspondence with Mrs. Cleveland with reference to many household affairs, which a woman of Mrs. Harrison's domestic thoughtfulness and care would deem important to know. It is said by those who seem to speak from knowledge of past changes of White House occupants, that more friendly relationship with the outgoing and incoming families never existed.

The two secretaries, though they have never met personally, except for a few minutes at the Hoosier capital a year ago last fall, have exchanged letters, Col. Lamont having written at some length to his successor, Mr. Halford, upon the subject of the minor details of the office. Upon the whole there has been a great deal of mail matter passed to and fro within the past month from the White House and the unpretentious Delaware street residence of Gen. Harrison at Indianapolis.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BRAVE WORDS WELL SPOKEN.

At the banquet given by the Boston tariff reform league last week, Speaker Carlisle sent a letter of regret in which he said:

"Under the circumstances, all I can do is to send you the assurance of my warmest sympathy with every effort that may be made to advance the people's cause in the struggle now going on between the friends of industrial freedom and the beneficiaries of industrial slavery. This struggle has just commenced in this country, and those who delude themselves with the hope that it will be abandoned before the triumph of right over wrong, are simply augmenting the weight of the blow that will inevitably fall upon them in the future. This is not a threat, but a friendly warning. The history of all movements for necessary social or political reforms shows that they grow more radical by opposition and delay, and it would be wise and patriotic on the part of our opponents to recognize the inevitable and accede to reasonable demands now, rather than be forced to accept harder terms hereafter. So far the sentiment in favor of a reduction of taxation and the removal of commercial restrictions has been conservative, and if it does not continue to be so, the responsibility will rest solely on those who unreasonably oppose it. They alone can stop the agitation, or confine it within reasonable grounds, by proper concessions to the demands of the people. The result of the contest in which we are engaged is not in the least doubtful; and, unless the evils of which we complain are removed, which seems not at all probable, the agitation should go right on with increased vigor and force, until the public judgment and conscience refuse to longer justify and condone them. Nothing has yet occurred to weaken our faith in the justice of our cause, or to abate our confidence in its ultimate success. A single defeat, even if it had been sustained on the real merits of the controversary, ought not to discourage us. No just cause is lost so long as it has a single earnest advocate among the people. More than five and a half millions of intelligent, patriotic Americans have attested their fidelity to the cause of revenue reform under circumstances well calculated to test the sincerity of their opinions, and they will neither desert its standard nor make peace with the enemy until at least substantial justice is done."

PROTECTION.

A Manufacturer and Farmer Who Knows All About It sends a Petition to Congress.

Hon. John H. Thomas, of Springfield, Ohio, is one of the leading manufacturers in this country, and his customers are farmers. He is also the owner of a large farm. Putting this and that together, and analyzing the protection theory, he concludes farmers ought to have a bounty to make their lot equal to the protected manufacturers. Here is his petition:

To the Honorable, the Congress of the United States:

The undersigned is engaged in growing wheat; an industry of great importance, and value in the United States; but he finds wheat raising to be poorly remunerative, because of frequent failure of crops from causes over which he has no control; from the low price at which it must be sold, and from the heavy taxation to which he is subject in support of other interests. He finds that many industries in this country, not nearly so important and valuable to the prosperity of the country as wheat raising, receive an increased price for their goods, because of a tax levied by the tariff, in the way of protection against competing goods from foreign countries, while the farmer is put off with a mere paper duty on foreign wheat, which does him no good whatever. The duty on wheat does not protect him even in his home market, and not at all on the surplus; and as his surplus fixes the home market price, the tariff duty on wheat is of no substantial value to the wheat raiser, who raises his wheat by our higher priced labor, and is compelled to sell it at prices fixed by markets where the wheat raised by the cheapest labor competes.

He also finds that the wheat growers of this country are compelled to pay several hundred millions of dollars annually in increased price on goods purchased by them of industries protected against foreign cheaper labor.

If the manufacturer cannot compete with foreign cheap labor without government assistance, it ought not to be required of the farmer. On the other hand, if the farmer must continue to compete with cheap foreign labor, without any assistance from the government, then why should not the manufacturers do the same?

If the farmer must continue to pay increased prices to manufacturers, by reason of protection extended to them, why should not the manufacturers contribute to help the farmers to secure some sort of increased price for his wheat, over the price that is fixed for him by wheat raised with the cheapest foreign labor.

It seems to me that some proper equalization of this matter is due from the congress of the United States to the wheat raisers of the country. In order therefore, that the wheat raiser may be put on nearly an equality with other interests, I ask that a fund be provided, from which to pay the growers of wheat a bounty of 20 cents a bushel on what they raise, to compensate them for the burdens imposed for the benefit of manufacturers, and to compensate them for the higher priced labor for which they are forced to raise their wheat. And as a proper way to raise this fund, I suggest that a tax be levied on the manufacturers of protected goods, the price of whose goods are increased by protection. Or, if a fund cannot be raised in this way, then, that some other method be devised to raise such a fund. As I understand it, it would require a fund of about ninety millions of dollars annually, which sum is not one fourth as much as the increased price the farmers now pay on home-made goods, by reason of protection under which the manufacturers are enabled to increase their price to unfair profits. Or if your honorable body fails to recognise the justice of paying this bounty, I suggest that then the duties on manufactured goods be reduced at least one-half.

I know it is said that the tariff, by encouraging manufactories furnishes a home and a better market to farmers for wheat, and they get their compensation in this way. But so far as this argument is concerned, it is historically true that the higher the tariff duties are, the less proportion of a home market is afforded to the farmers. It is also true that the home market in no way increases the price on his wheat over what he gets abroad. Further than this, the wheat growers have a home market now for all the people will eat, and they will keep it whether duties are high or low. No foreigners can or will supply it as he can, and he therefore owes nothing to the manufacturers of the country for a better price in the home market.

He is also informed and believes it to be true, that all the protected industries in the country hardly furnish a home market for 5 per cent of his wheat.

If your honorable body should feel disposed to grant the bounty asked for, it is suggested that accompanying the allowance of this bounty, a reduction of the average duties on manufactured goods should be made, to bring it down to 40 per cent. He further suggests hat a bounty of 20 cents a bushel on wheat, and an average duty on manufactured goods of 40 per cent. should be allowed to stand for two years; at the end of two years, the bounty on wheat be reduced to fifteen cents a bushel, and the average duty on manufactured goods be reduced to 30 per cent. That this arrangement should also stand for two years; and then the bounty on wheat be reduced to 10 cents a bushel, and the average duty on manufactured goods be reduced to 20 per cent.; and that thereafter the bounty on wheat to remain at about one-half of whatever the average duty on manufactured goods should be.

It is the opinion of the undersigned, that some such arrangement as this, would be simply extending plain and fair justice to the wheat growers of the country, who are now suffering under the burdens imposed for the benefit of others who derive unfair advantages under our present tariff. All the farmer asks is to be treated as well as other vocations, and this he has a right to demand. Yours truly,

J. H. THOMAS.

A Modern Miracle.

Mrs J. W. Wentworth, of Elkhart, Ind., was long subject to pain in the side, shortness of breath, weakness, pain in the side, slight cough, swelling of the ankles and other symptoms of serious heart disease. She was expected to die at any time. Doctors in New York, Toledo, etc., failed to help her. But two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart cured her three years ago and she has remained well ever since. Heart disease can be cured. Sold by Baker & Hall.

The West Virginia Congressmen.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 27.—The Times' Charleston (W. Va.) special says: Governor Wilson yesterday issued commissions of election to John O. Pendleton (Dem.), congressman-elect from the First district, and W. L. Wilson (Dem.), congressman-elect from the Second district. No protest was presented. Commissions were not issued to the congressmen from the Third and Fourth districts, and Governor Wilson says he will not issue commissions to them until he can do according to law.

Remarkable Shooting Match.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 26.—A most remarkable shooting match took place here Tuesday between Capt. A. H. Bogardus, of Elkhardt, Ind., and Al Bandle, of this city. It was at 100 live birds, Hurlingham rules, except in the case of Bandle, whose gun was a nine and one-half pound, ten guage gun. The score was Bandle, 100, Bogardus, 95. Bogard is used a seven and one-half pound gun, twelve bore.

The Population of Tecumseh.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamps naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Powers Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Dynamite Bomb in a Tenement.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A section of iron pipe, six inches long and two and one-half inches in diameter, containing three heavy dynamite cartridges and with a fuse attached, was found under a stairway on the tenement 311 East Thirty-eighth street Friday. The police are trying to find out who placed it there.

A Wife Murderer Hanged.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 28.—The Journal's Winnipeg special says: Webb Brandon, the wife murderer, was hanged Friday morning. He displayed great fortitude on the scaffold. The parting between Brandon and his three children was affecting in the extreme. Brandon killed his wife while drunk.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in lining membranes of the nos and eustachin tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proven this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permentally cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sad Plight of a Deserter.

FORT ASSINABOINE, M. T., Jan. 5.—A dispatch received at the headquarters of the Twentieth Infantry stated that a deserter from this post had wandered into an Indian camp fifteen miles north of Belknap in a frozen and dying condition. An ambulance was immediately dispatched from here and upon arriving at the camp the unfortunate man was found to be Private George Schilling, of company K, who deserted from this post Saturday, Dec. 21. According to his statement he expected to reach a settlement in Canada on the day following his departure, but on account of a blinding storm that prevailed that night he lost his way and wandered aimlessly about without food or shelter for five days. Slight hopes are entertained of saving his life, by the amputation of both lower limbs above the knees.

Mahone's Opponents in Council.

PETERSBURG, Va., Jan. 5.—An anti-Mahone conference was held here Thursday night. Col. Huston, Col. J. D. Bray, ex-Governor Cameron, Gen. V. D. Groner, Hon. Harry Libbey and State Senator Newton were present. The question as to whether or not a delegation should be sent to Indianapolis was taken up and discussed and the conference concluded that it would not be timely or dignified to brin any pressure to bear upon the president-elect at this time. In place of sending a delegation, therefore, it was decided to prepare a "plain and unvarnished" statement for Gen. Harrison's consideration. It was also decided to issue an address antagonistic to Gen. Mahone's leadership in the state.

Has Been Tapped Fifty-four Times.

MONTICELLO, Ill., Jan. 5.—The most remarkable case ever known to the physicians here is that of J. Meredith, of this city, who is suffering with abdominal dropsy. Dr. W. B. Caldwell has tapped him fifty-four times during the past twelve months, removing one and a half to two gallons of water at each operation. On one occasion four gallons of water were removed. An operation is now performed on him every week. Dr. Caldwell estimates that during the year he has removed two barrels of water from the patient. Mr. Meredith is able to go about the streets in a short time after the operation is performed. He is 75 years old.

A Small-Pox Scare in New York.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 5.—Reports which are received at the office of the state board of health show that the small-pox scourge is spreading. Mary Maloney, sister of Thomas Maloney, who died from the disease in Troy, has succumbed to its influence. Word was also received from Lyons, to the effect that in that town there are three cases, with every prospect of more. Instructions have been sent to the officials of Auburn state prison to have all in that institution vaccinated.

FOR CHILDREN OF ALL AGES.

St. Nicholas for 1889.

PEOPLE who have the idea that St. Nicholas Magazine is only for little children should look over the prospectus of that magazine for 1889, and they will discover that it is for children of all ages, "from five to eighty-five," as some one recently said of it. Indeed, while St. Nicholas is designed for girls and boys, it might almost be called a "family magazine," for the grown-up members of a household will find much to interest them in every number.

The editor, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, calls the next volume an "all-round-the-world year," because it is to contain so many illustrated papers about the world in general—not dry geographical papers, but stories and sketches and tales of travel and adventure by land and sea—and all illustrated by the best artists. The features will include a serial story, "How We Made the Farthest North," by Gen. A. W. Greely, the well-known commander of the Greely Expedition; a serial about Canada, by Mrs. Catherwood, who is writing a serial story for The Century this year: "Indians of the Amazon," by Mrs. Frank R. Stockton. There are many papers about Europe, including a Christmas story of life in Norway, by H. H. Boyesen; articles on Holland and the Dutch, by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge; "The Queen's Navy," by Lieut. F. Harrison Smith, R. N., with illustrations of many of England's finest war ships; "The Winchester School," illustrated by Joseph Pennell; "English Railway Trains," by Wm. H. Rideing, etc., etc. The French papers include "Ferdinand de Lesseps and his two Ship Canals," and there are several interesting contributions on German, Italian and Russian subjects.

Under "Asia," comes "Boys and Girls in China," by Yan Phou Lee (a recent graduate of Yale); "Home Life in the East," by Mrs. Holman Hunt, and a number of papers about Japan. Under "Africa" there is a sketch of Henry M. Stanley, by Noah Brooks, and several stories about Egypt. Australia is not forgotten, nor the islands of the sea, and there are even to be stories of under the sea.

Of course the bulk of the contents will relate to American subjects, as usual. Mrs. Burnett, the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," contributes a story of New York called "Little Saint Elizabeth;" there will be papers describing how the government offices are conducted, papers about athletics, amateur photography, etc. The full prospectus will be sent to any one who wishes to see by the publishers, The Century Co., of New York.

The Graphic recently said of St. Nicholas, the family without it is only half blessed."

HOW CAN PARENTS

do so as to see their children have a hard strain at a cough and simply say "oh! it is only a little cold," and keep giving them cheap and dangerous medicines, until they are down with lung fever or consumption, when they can be so easily relieved by BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP? GENERAL DEBILITY.

To cure these diseases means to restore the action of the liver and other organs, and to kill the poison in the blood. A remedy containing Mandrake, Culver's Root, Burdock and Cascara Sagrada, acting especially on the liver, stomach, kidneys and sweat glands, is the proper one.

HIBBARD'S RHEUMATIC SYRUP

restores action, kills malaria and purifies the blood.

CONSTIPATION.

THE process of digestion, assimilation and removal needs the healthy action of the liver, pancreas and glands which supply the bile and other fluids, in order to stimulate them to proper action.

Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup

combines all the best medicines, as Mandrake, Culver's Root and Cascara Sagrada, with tonics to restore all secretions and supply the needed action. After taking a few bottles nature completes the cure.

IT NEVER FAILS.

Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup

UNRIVALED in merit. It is a Safe Family Medicine because it contains no poison or opiates. Children, invalids and delicate persons will find it the best medicine and tonic they can use. No home should be without it. Always in season, Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter.

If you cannot procure it of your druggist send direct to us. Price $1.00; 6 bottles $5.00. Pamphlets 25c.

TESTIMONIALS WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE.

For over twenty years I have been a great sufferer from the effects of a diseased stomach, and for three years past have been unable to do any business—hardly able to move about. Two years ago my case was pronounced by the best medical skill incurable. I visited different water cures and tried different climates, but to no good. Last June I began using Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and at once began to feel better. I have used thirteen bottles, and am a well man.

"While thus engaged on work so fine,
Where skill and patience must combine,
How oft the thought must pain the heart,
That after all your care and art,
The handsome work that charms the eye
Ere long must soiled and ruined lie."

"Oh, no; you make a great mistake,
As no such thought our rest can break;
For should there come a soil or stain,
No ruin follows in their train;
However deep or dark they show,
The IVORY SOAP can make them go,
And all the brilliancy restore
And perfect beauty as before."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

RETROSPECTION

Sighing, she rose, and o'er her shapely head
Stretching her long white arms to th' empty air,
She leaned against the window. She was fair
As any old time goddess to whom men
Bowed low the knee in Argolis.

She said:

"All this, I know, is sweet and true—but then—
Alas! 'tis all so old to me, and when
Men say they love me, one who, long ago,
Swore that he loved, then left me comes again
Before mine eyes, and smiles from high disdain
To see them stare [illegible]
Tell me no more. I cannot wear the pain
Of living a mere idiot, for I'm so
Tired of things [illegible]
Tell me of things [illegible] than this;
Of [illegible]
Of [illegible]
Are shooting [illegible] days, you know
All that is [illegible]

[illegible] Then, oh, how,
Impassioned where [illegible] I strive to break
The old, cold [illegible] for her dear sake
[illegible] all that life
[illegible] But presently the knife
[illegible]
Cold misery I turned. And then the tall,
The slender [illegible] softly said:
"Leave me to [illegible] I pray thee all
For love to me may never be might but shame,
And now the only memory that may
Bring joy to me is that of yesterday!"

Edward Heron Allen in Leslie's Newspaper.

BEEKUN BOB.

He was picking up coal near the M., H. and O. (Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon) railway when I first saw him a poor, forlorn little fellow, with "buttermilk eyes," a yellow skin and hair of a faded drab color.

I have only to look down on the carpet near my feet at a little pile of iron ore, specimens collected while sojourning at Ishpeming, Mich., at that time, to vividly recall the little hero (for such he was) to my imagination, although no thought like this I am sure ever occurred to his untrained mind, and I doubt if he would have known the meaning of the word, and even his parents, stolid Swedes, for which that [illegible] of the mining country is noted, [illegible] of thinking him one, even [illegible] came.

I do not [illegible] to have heard the age of the [illegible] faced boy, but in height and size he appeared about 10 years old. His face had a worn, wasted, old look, and his small claw like hands shriveled as though with age. He seemed less than ordinary in intelligence and spoke only in monosyllables, and so frequently to himself that my attention was drawn to him.

Rambling through the mining country in search of specimens, though in midwinter, it was thus I came across him.

There was something peculiar about him; he did not seem quite right in the "upper story," and I fell to watching him, with a strange interest, as he picked up, one by one, so carefully each piece of coal that had fallen from the coal cars and which the railroad authorities allowed the poor to gather, and placed every piece with a certain mathematical precision in his old, battered coal bucket.

"Who is that boy?" I asked of a tall, well grown lad standing near me, evidently an employe about the yards.

"That?" rather contemptuously pointing a grimy forefinger in the direction of the little coal gatherer:

"Yes."

"Oh, that's 'Beekun Bob,'" and he laughed heartily.

"Beacon Bob?" I repeated. "Why do you call him that? Spell his name, please."

"B-e-e-k-u-n—B-o-b," he rapidly spelled out.

"We uns calls him that 'cause he allers stands at the old mine shaft with a lighted stick every night, a waitin' for his dad and the missus."

"The missus?" I echoed.

"Yas, that's his marm; she wurks in the mine, long side of his dad."

"A woman work in the mine?" I asked incredulously.

"Oh, yas, lots of 'em do. That's nuthin'."

I sighed.

"Why does he hold a light?"

"'Cause you see as how the ole mine's 'bandoned, taint safe, and the big hole is right near their house; he's feer'd they'll fall in some night comin' home."

"Lookee, you kin see it from here."

He pointed off towards the direction of Lake Angeline, where a dark spot in the red earth was plainly visible, with bits of boards and planks sticking right and left around it, and near it a small, weather beaten frame house.

"So he lives there?"

"Yas."

"Do his parents compel him to hold the lighted torch, or stick, every night?"

"Naw, he jest tuk it onto hissolf. They don't keer one way er tother."

"Has he brothers or sisters?"

"Nary one."

Some one called the stalwart, well meaning lad, and thanking him for his information as he hastened away, I approached "Beekun Bob."

He did not see me, nor appear to hear my footsteps. I came close to him and touched him gently on the shoulder.

"Bob?"

He looked up at me in a dazed sort of way, his small features, or the expression of them, rather, nearly obscured by the profusion of hematite dust spread on them. His hands and clothing, as well as my own, were smirched with it.

He took a long, deep breath and involuntarily placed one hand to his side, his forehead contracting as though in pain.

I saw at once that the boy was ill or overworked, and the patient way that he toiled touched me.

The day was a very cold one, and the child's hands were cramped and blue, and his toes protruded through his German socks and rubbers.

"Haven't you all you can carry?" I asked, looking towards the heaped bucket.

He nodded in the affirmative, but still continued to add more.

"Come, let me help you up the hill," and I placed my hand upon the handle of the bucket.

"Umm, umm;" he grasped the handle, and such a look of doubt, and indignation I never want to see on a child's face again. Lifting the bucket, and with difficulty he placed it resolutely behind him and stood before it grim and stern and half defying. I smiled in spite of myself. He evidently thought I wanted the coal, and had learned his lesson from being wronged in this way before. Not another word could I get out of him, and so a little saddened I moved away, throwing him a coin as I went, for I felt he would be better have more than his fellow beings.

That night was a bitterly cold one, but wearied with the day's toil, I slept soundly and comfortably in my warm bed.

The sun was shining brightly when I awoke, and from my window at the Nelson house, I watched the busy running population thronging to their daily toil.

How picturesque the old town looked, with its hematite dust painting everything red. And where water had been recently thrown near the roadside amid the iron, there seemed to be pools of blood.

Here and there the sparkle of the iron ore would gleam forth, glinting like diamonds in the sun, and vying in brilliancy with the pearls in the snow.

Away off yonder over the white hills, so rugged and grand, a number of wood choppers, hung in different directions, [illegible] flannel shirts, blue woolen caps, buckskin breeches and gray German socks and rubbers, with the bright axe over [illegible] pipe in their mouth, and near them the sledges, to which one or more dogs were hitched, to draw the fruits of their labor home at evening.

Before them in the distance loomed the tall [illegible] pines, like giant sentinels, adding to the rare picturesqueness of the scene.

The air was so cold and clear and bright, you could cut it with a knife.

This was the last day of the old year. I knew that to-morrow would usher in the day of the season for Ishpeming, its unique and wonderful dog races, which created nearly as much stir as the "Derby" or "Latonia" in greater cities, and, much as I desired to see this northern custom, I hoped the new year would find me "at home" in Chicago.

Breakfast over I hastily prepared to "go below" or "down the road," as expressed in that upper country.

My foot was on the first step of the omnibus to take me to the train, when, chancing to look up, I saw the tall, well grown lad of the Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon yards, standing near and regarding me questioningly.

I paused and nodded. He came up to me at once.

"Say, missus," squirting the tobacco juice from his mouth

"Well?"

"You know Beekun Bob?"

"Yes; what of him?"

"Wall, he's dead."

"Dead!"

What was he to me that I should grow ill and faint? The omnibus driver became impatient.

"You'll have to hurry up there or we won't catch the train," he said.

I stepped into the 'bus.

"Get in," I said to the boy; "I will make it all right with the driver."

He clambered up and took a seat by my side.

"Now tell me all about it," I said. "How did he die and when?"

"You see, he wuz a-holdin' of that ar' stick I told you 'bout, awaitin' for his dad and the missus, which they didn't cum home 'til this mornin', cause the mine they wurked in caved in on em, and they couldn't git out to onct."

He paused to take breath

"What then?" I asked.

"Wall, jest nuthin', only when they did cum, all safe an' sound, but a little smothered like, they found that ar' chap, 'Beekun Bob,' standin' stark an' stiff, frozen, you know, with his eyes wide open, the stick burned down into his hands, and he dead as a door nail."

I grew faint and dizzy again.

"Poor little Bob, what a hero! I will go and [illegible] his parents," I said.

I thought how terribly stricken and heart [illegible] they must feel.

"I'll [illegible] pull the check string, we will get out here."

The young fellow did as I requested.

"Taint no use. He isn't thar," he said.

"Where is he?"

"Over to the hospital."

I paid the driver and told him to call for me again at the hotel to take the next train.

He looked at me wonderingly and drove on. We went to the hospital.

Yes, there he lay, dressed for the grave. The little pinched face bore the impress of the agony worn into it by the hours of suffering and patient waiting. The shriveled hands, so burned and scarred, were swathed in bandages.

"His parents?" I asked.

"Oh," said the hospital M. D., "they sent for us, and when they found out we could not restore him to life, they told us to take him away; dead boy no good to us" (a fact), and we bury him, and so save them the trouble and expense."

Heartless?—Well—no. I hardly think so. They were very poor, and very practical, and it was "all the same" to "Beekun Bob," the hero.—Mrs. S. C. Hazlett in Detroit Free Press.

A Four Footed Thief.

On the Baldwin farm, about two miles north of Fillmore, Mrs. Baldwin went out to look after her poultry. On opening the chicken coop she was horrified to find all of her fowls slaughtered and an enormous wild cat occupying the premises. Instead of fainting and letting the intruder escape, she concluded that he also might take a joke; whereupon she quickly closed the door and called to her son's wife, who lived near by. The latter came with her husband's rifle; then setting the door a little ajar the two ladies in turn dispatched half a dozen swift messengers in the direction of his catship, which was a final settlement of the whole affair. But Mrs. Baldwin thinks that his scalp and pelt are rather meager compensation for her dozen and a half of chickens.—Salt Lake News.

Never Out After Dark.

The gas furnished the city of San Antonio is of a very inferior quality, and consequently the streets are very poorly lighted, but the street lamps are allowed to burn after daylight. A stranger asked a prominent druggist:

"Why do the gas lights burn all night in this town?"

"Because dese gash lights vas so small dot dey vas afraid to go out ven it vas dark."—Texas Siftings.

The Original Yankees.

The regular down east Yankee pronunciation, according to a writer in Notes and Queries, must have come from Essex. The same twang is observed in the speech there as in New England, such words as due, true or through being pronounced blew, trew and threw with a double e.

An Ancient Church Bell.

The Methodists of Lumpkin, Ga., have a new church bell, the old one being cracked and worn out. It's time the old bell had a rest, for it was cast in 1600, and has in its time summoned to worship men of varying creeds in the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and America.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

The question has often been asked, "to what does The Century owe its great circulation?" The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that "it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department." In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue throughout the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln history and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

THE SIBERIAN PAPERS,

by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." As is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters. A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons. George W. Cable will write "Strange, True Stories of Louisiana." There will be novelettes and short stories by leading writers, occasional articles on war subjects (supplemental to the famous "War Papers" by General Grant and others, which have been appearing in The Century), etc., etc.

The Century costs four dollars a year, and it is published by The Century Co., of New York, who will send a copy of the full prospectus to any one on request.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

OVER CHAIRMAN OF THE SENATE.

Lieut. Gov. Robertson Declares He Will Take the Chair and the Democrats Are Determined That He Shall Not—Gov. Beard, of Wisconsin, Inaugurated in Great Shape—Indianapolis Clergymen and the Inaugural Ball—"Murchison" Discovered.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 8.—The Democratic senators in caucus last night determined not to allow Lieutenant Governor Robertson to preside at the organization of the senate on Thursday and to use force, if necessary, to prevent him from taking the chair. They also made arrangements to keep him from presiding over the joint meeting of the legislature on Monday to count the vote for governor and lieutenant governor, and to put the speaker of the house in the chair at that time.

Robertson declares that he will insist upon his rights and the Republican Senators will back him. A repetition of the scenes of violence that marked the session two years ago is probable.

It is generally understood that the Democrats will put forward Senator J. F. Cox, of Morgan county, as their candidate for presiding officer of the senate. It is anticipated the senate may remain deadlocked on this question during the four days and continue practically unorganized until the installation of Lieutenant Governor Chace. This contest is at present the uppermost political theme here, as both sides are determined, and Col. Robertson's friends declare he will take his seat.

Candidates for speaker of the house are Mason J. Niblack, of Vincennes; Gabriel J. Schmuck, of Marion county, and James E. Willard, of Lawrence county. Niblack is a son of Judge W. E. Niblack, for many years of the supreme court of Indiana, and one of the most popular Democrats in Indiana. It is generally conceded that Niblack is in the lead, with Representative Schmuck pressing him. The hotels are full of members of the assembly.

The newly elected judges of the supreme court were inducted into office yesterday morning. The new judges are Walter Olds, John G. Berkshire, and Philas D. Coffee, all Republicans. The hold-over judges are Byron K. Elliott, Republican, and James Mitchell, Democrat. Thus the supreme tribunal of Indiana is Republican in politics for the second time in the history of the state. Judge Byron K. Elliott, of this city, will probably be chief justice.

WISCONSIN'S GOVERNOR.

Board Takes Hold of the State Business and Rusk Steps Out.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 8.—The inauguration of Governor Hoard yesterday was a grand affair. There was a large force of militia in town to assist in making the day more memorable and it made a dazzling appearance. Governor Rusk, with an escort of military and various committees, were at the station to meet Governor Hoard's special train and a salute of seventeen guns was fired as it arrived. The procession was then formed and escorted the two governors to the capitol, where there were thousands of people waiting and cheering both gentlemen.

W. D. HOARD.

The inauguration ceremonies took place in the assembly chamber, where the party was taken and Mayor Doyon made an introductory speech in which he paid a graceful compliment to the retiring governor, and in an equally graceful manner welcomed the new executive. At the conclusion of this speech the governor-elect stepped forward and made a very brief address, declaring that his purpose was to discharge the duties of the office with an eye single to the welfare of the state.

The oath was then administered, three cheers were given and the new governor proceeded to his office, where the following appointments were announced: Private secretary, Henry Casson, of Viroqua; superintendent of public property, H. C. Adams, of Madison; adjutant-general, George W. Burchard, of Fort Atkinson, rank of brigadier general; quartermaster general, Michael Griffin, of Eau Claire, rank of brigadier general; surgeon general, Henry Palmer, of Janesville, rank of brigadier general. Aides-de-camp—Charles King, of Milwaukee; Isaac H. Wing, of Bayfield; D. W. Curtis, of Fort Atkinson; Theodore W. Golden, of Janesville; Jesse Stone, of Watertown; Frederick Becker, Manitowoc, and Henry Casson, of Viroqua.

Later he was escorted by the militia to the executive residence. The inaugural ball was a decided success and a gigantic crush. The governor was there with his wife and a reception was held, at which Gen. Lucius Fairchild made the introductions.

DIDN'T CONDEMN THE BALL.

Indianapolis Clergymen Take No Action on the Inaugural Hop.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 8.—At the regular meeting of the Indianapolis Ministerial association yesterday a resolution was adopted appointing a committee of seven, representing all denominations, to prepare an address expressing cordial Christian regard for the presedent-elect. In a paper read by Dr. Lucas, allusion was made to the inaugural ball, the doctor saying that those who favor the ball ought not to say that those who oppose it are puritanical, neither ought those who oppose it to say that the other is seeking popularity with the world; charity should characterize us in all things. In discussing the paper Rev. Dr. Jenckes treated the matter of the ball in a rather light and jocular manner. The subject was then dropped and the association proceeded to other business.

Gen. Harrison spent the morning in his library at work on his message. His social callers included parties from New York, Chicago, Boston, and other cities, who stopped over while passing through. The presidential electors of Illinois and Ohio have sent word that immediately upon casting their votes next Monday at Springfield and Columbus they will leave for Indianapolis, arriving here Wednesday morning, where they will be met by the Indiana electors, and as one body the chosen representatives of the three great states will march out to Gen. Harrison's house and pay their respects.

The Author of the Murchison Letter.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 8.—It is announced on authority of those who have been in the secret from the first that the author of the Murchison letter is George Osgoodby, of Pomona, where his father, an English man by birth, resides. Osgoodby is 34 years old, and a native of New York. Murchison is a family name connected with the Osgoodbys by marriage.

"Rustie" Harrison at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Mr. R. R. Harrison, son of the president-elect, was in this city yesterday. He said he would not talk of politics, especially of his father's policy or cabinet. He was visited by several of the leading Republicans here. "I would not have been of very great assistance to my father during the campaign if I had talked much," said he, "and I can't break my system now." He said he was on his way to Omaha to meet his wife and to transact some private business.

RUSSELL HARRISON.

THEY ARE AT IT AGAIN.

The National Lawmakers Resume Business at the Old Stand.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 3.—The reassembling of congress, after the holiday recess, was a quiet affair, and the members simply began where they left off and proceeded to business at once. In the senate there was a quorum, but the house was very thin, only seventy-five members answering the roll call. In the senate Dolph presented a memorial of the national board of trade favoring ample appropriations for internal improvements and coast defense. Chandler presented a petition of Republican citizens of South Carolina asking relief from the state law that by a process of registration deprives them of their votes. A memorial was also presented asking that the next census contain a record of the surviving veterans of the war of the rebellion. The tariff bill was then taken up and one amendment adopted—reducing the duty on chains less than three-eighths of an inch in diameter from 3 to 2½ cents per pound. A long debate ensued on Vest's motion to reduce the duty on cotton threads, etc., from 10 cents per pound to 35 per cent. ad valorem, and pending the debate the senate adjourned.

The house passed a bill giving employes of the engraving and printing bureau thirty days leave per year instead of fifteen; also a bill providing that no agent or attorney shall receive more than $3 for securing increase of pensions; also a bill requiring the delivery of special delivery letters whether postage is prepaid or not, the same to be collected from the receiver of the letter. The river and harbor bill was taken up, and numerous attempts of members to get the appropriations for works in their states increased were defeated, Cheadle finally raising the point of no quorum against one of them, and the house adjurned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 4.—The principal business in the senate Thursday was the consideration of the tariff bill. Vest's motion to reduce the duty on cotton threads, yarns, etc., to 35 per cent. ad valorem was rejected, as was another by him to make cotton thread 40 per cent. ad valorem instead of 7 cents a dozen spools. A number of other amendments of similar character were rejected, and at 5 p. m. the senate adjourned.

The house committee on rules reported to to that body a resolution, the purpose of which was to dispense with the call of states and territories on the first and third Monday of each month, and thereby to diminish the power of the filibusters. The previous question was demanded by Reed, and on this question Randall, one of the rules committee, voted no. The first vote showed no quorum, the result of filibustering, and the house, at 3:05 p. m., adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 5.—The tariff bill occupied the attention of the senate most of yesterday, but it was laid aside without much progress after a long political debate. The senate rules were amended to give the privilege of the floor to the president-elect and vice president-elect. A brief executive session was then held, and the senate adjourned.

The house passed the Nicaragua bill with amendments providing: that the United States shall not be committed to any liability of the company, which statement shall be printed on every bond; that no stock shall be issued until at least 10 per cent. is paid for in money and that no bonds shall be issued in excess of capital until the latter paid in shall amount to $5,000,000; that congress shall have the right to amend, alter or repeal the act and regulate the rates of toll. The vote on the bill was 174 yeas to 34 nays. The bill now goes back to the senate. The resolution abolishing the call of states for business under suspension of the rules on two Mondays in each month was then taken up, but after a debate the opponents of the measure declined to vote and left the house without a quorum and adjournment was taken.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 7.—In the senate Saturday Sherman called up a joint resolution defining the position of the United States regarding the control by any European power of any water-way constructed across Central America, and wanted it acted upon at once. There was some opposition, and Gray offered an amendment modifying the language, but the whole matter went over. The tariff bill was then resumed, and a number of amendments offered, but no action taken, and at 4:45 the senate adjourned.

Filibuster had charge of the house again, on the proposition to abolish the call of states on "suspension" Monday. Springer succeeded in getting a resolution passed instructing the sergeant-at-arms to notify absent members to be present Monday. A resolution was passed authorizing the war and naval office to loan bunting to decorate the city on March 4, and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 8.—As soon as the routine morning business was disposed of in the senate yesterday that body went into secret session on Edmunds' Panama canal resolution and the debate occupied the whole day until 5:49 p. m. The only action taken after the doors were opened was to fix Jan. 22 instead of 21 for the final vote on the tariff bill.

Roll-calls, under the lead of the filibusters who oppose the resolution abolishing the call of states on "suspension" Mondays, occupied the whole day in the house, which adjourned at 5 p. m. without a particle of progress in legislation.

Passenger Agents To Be Dismissed.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 5.—It is announced here that the Erie Railway company, in order to reduce expenses, have notified fourteen of their traveling passenger agents and division passenger agents located in the west, that their services will no longer be required after Feb. 1.

Rev. Knight Accepts.

Dairy Column.

Edited by the Bureau of Dairy Information
CHICAGO, ILL.

For the encouragement of improved methods of Dairying. Information upon all matters relating to the manufacture of butter and cheese and handling of milk will be given in answer to questions mailed to the Bureau at above address.

THE ARITHMETIC OF THE DAIRY.

The public tests of dairy cows within the last year have shown that the 1,000 pound cow is the one that makes the best return for her food, and all things considered is the best one for the dairyman whose object is milk, butter and cheese. If beef is his object then shift the scene around and make beef the essential quality sought, and milk, an incidental; because no practical showing has yet been made other than theoretical figuring, that the best milk production, and cheapest beef-making, can be wrapped up in the hide of one cow, or that she has the power of giving a bull calf that has great beef qualities, and next a heifer calf that will fulfill great expectations as a butter and cheese cow. The figures of low yield, and small butter production are the best answer to this double requirement of a cow. A sample of the two classes is furnished by a late test of the two types. Cow No. 1 made a pound of butter from each twelve pounds of milk. Cow No. 2 required 38 pounds of milk to make a pound of butter. Cow No. 1 gave a milk with 17½ per cent of solids, of which half was butter-fat; and cow No. 2 only showed a milk with 12½ per cent solids and only 3½ per cent of it was butter fat. The excess in solids was in sugar, that has no market value. It seems by these, and thousands of tests confirm them, that a man may have a dairy of great performance in milk yield, which if used from butter and cheese would bankrupt him. His only way out would be to get into a factory where he can pool his milk, pound for pound, with his neighbors. The arithmetic of the dairy shows the idea of a special cheese cow is also a delusion. Not one cow in ten thousand puts more cheese into her milk than butter, so if she is a half-pound butter cow she is also a half-pound cheese cow.—No better. Another problem in this arithmetic is, feeding a cow will not change the character of the milk. If she is a born butter cow the feeding will simply, while increasing the milk, increase all the solids in equal proportion, and she will still be the same cow. A cow is born with an individual temperament as regards her dairy performance. That is her individuality. No feeding can make her give richer milk, only more, and hence a greater amount of solids. So the figures for the dairyman to study are: a pail of milk may have two pounds of butter in it or only one, or even half a pound. He may feed the cow so that she may give him twice that butter, but he must get it by first getting twice as much milk. Once more this arithmetic says the cream gauge will not tell the story correctly. The cream of the cow must either be churned as best it can, or it must be per cented with the oil test. The final arithmetic is to find out—not guess. Did the dairy pay this way? What did its surplus leave the farmer for his labor?

How to Select Dairy Cows.

In a letter to the Sheboygan County News, Mr. A. X. Hyatt goes for a certain lecturer on the above subject, and as we rather sympathize with Mr. H's idea on the subject, we reprint them, adding only that not only should the bull be of good milking family, but also a pure bred one. We should also prefer to give the calves new milk for a longer period as being safer.

Now Mr. Editor, when I commenced dairying I think I must have bought one hundred cows before I got fifteen that suited me. I bought fifteen of a man in Lima, and in one year had sold them all but two. I should not expect much better luck if I should start out to buy again, with all my experience. A ticket in a lottery is about as certain to bring you a prize, as to go among dairymen or strangers to buy cows. If we find a cow for sale, with all the marks of a good cow, we are not certain, but when we test her we shall find a very poor one. Why? She could belie all these indications by having been spoiled by rough treatment and poor milking. A heifer from the best line of milkers in the world can be ruined in one year by improper treatment. I speak of what I know, and give testimony of what I have seen. Do you want to know how I select dairy cows? I raise them. After the first three or four weeks of feeding milk (skimmed after the first week) I feed them whey and porridge. I had eighteen "come in" for the first time, this year, that I raised two years ago, and I can say in all sincerity, I would hardly know which to pick out for the best one, or the poorest. What breeds? "Hyatt's breed," on the Darwinian theory, "the survival of the fittest." The Durham from an importation of 1817 is most prominent. Some of the best cows I have ever owned have been full of the despised "native" blood. 'Tis the cow that fills the pail that you should buy when she's for sale. Not go and buy a cow for "blood," regardless whether poor or good. I would say in closing, to all young dairymen, look sharp that you select your males from a family of milkers, for two or three generations, that you raise your heifer calves from the very best cows, and you continue on that line for a series of years, and you will not be troubled to get good cows, provided they are fed generously, milked properly and humanely. I have not written half I would like to say on this subject, but will close this hastily written article.

A. X. HYATT.

A HUDSON FAILURE.

We regret to record another calamity that has overtaken a Hudson business establishment. Stephen A. Eaton and John Phillips have taken possession of the furniture and undertaking establishment of R. J. Eaton and are disposing of the stock at very low prices to satisfy chattel mortgages which they hold against it. Mr. Eaton's explanation of his embarrassment is that he bought extensively for the holiday trade, expecting his notes would tide him over until he realized on the goods, but his credit, he claims, was injured by anonymous letters sent to the commercial agencies and dealers declined to accept his paper. This required him to overdraw largely at the bank, and a foreclosure to satisfy the amount overdrawn, followed.—Hudson Gazette.

We know some Tecumseh business men who have also been seriously hampered in their business by false reports to the commercial agencies. In fact, the commercial agencies as they are managed at present are a good deal of a humbug. If the local reporter is an honest, honerable man, his reports are fair and approximately correct, but if, as too often happens, he is a man who has political friends to reward and political enemies to punish, his reports are well nigh worthless. Sometimes they are even worse than worthless for they are absolutely false and misleading.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of Mr. Wm. Whelan was held at the old residence in Franklin Township, Lenawee county, December 5th 1888. Rev. J. M Getchell, of Tecumseh, officiating, assisted by Revs. Pierce (Methodist) and Putnam (Congregationalist) of Franklin.

Mr. Whelan came to the above named township in 1833 and settled on section 15 having purchased 50 acres of land. He resided in the one place until the day of his death, for over half a century. Last summer he was injured internally by an accident which threw him and his wife out of a buggy, and the injuries received then hastened the day of his departure.

He was born in Verona township, Oneida county, N. Y., Aug. 6th., 1806, being Aug. 6, 1888, 82 years of age. He was married to Miss Emily Joslyn, Jan. 1, 1828 in Clarkson, Monroe Co. who survives him with her four children. Three daughters went before him, Lettie, Jane and Eliza. The last was the wife of George Allen who passed on in May 1888. Sara, the wife of Fisk Beebe; Nancy, the wife of Francis Erskin; Emeline, wife of Wm. A. Wisner, and Rosetta the wife of Lorenzo Billington, all live in the vicinity of the old homestead where they were born. Mr. and Mrs. B. with their family reside on the old farm.

Mr. Whelan early in life began to make his own living, was always an industrious man, loved his home, wife and children. Their comfort, welfare and happiness was his interest and joy. Was never pretentious in word or deed. Unassuming always, yet by this wielded an influence that made him loved and revered in the home and honored and esteemed by all who knew him best. In character aimed to be manly, every day upright, keeping fidelity and integrity at all hazards and never stooping to be low minded, underhanded or ignoble. He has left a love and memory with his own and humanity that will never perish or forever fade away. Verified this, that:

"To live in hearts we leave behind
Is not to die."

The Open Court, of December 27, contains an earnest and thoughtful criticism, from the orthodox Christian standpoint, of the work and tenets of The Open Court, by Dr. Gustav Carus, Superintendent General of the State Church of Eastern Prussia. The criticism is able and erudite. In the editorial reply to the criticism,—a justification of the position of The Open Court,—will be found a further exposition of the principles of Monism.

The new professional card of Ex-Judge Geddes will be found in our business directory. Judge Geddes has filled the office of Judge of Probate for nearly nine years and he retires from that position with a record second to none of his predecessors. He will now resume the practice of law, and will devote his attention chiefly to the settlement of estates for which his past experience so fully qualifies him. The Judge does not believe in 'rusting out,' and we predict that he will build up a large practice in his special line.

One can imagine the enormity of the Stevens & Rice Minstrel Company when they come to figure on their enormous expenses. They carry a car load of scenery and baggage and have as attractions, the Great Geyer, the highest salaried single performer on the stage; the Bethoven Quartett of Boston, Mass., composed of Geo. F. Broderick, (late of the National Opera Co.) A. W. Brown (late of the Pike's Opera Co.) F. Culum, (late of Duff's Opera Co.) C. F. Webber (late of Thomas Opera Co.) the Marion Bros., musical artists; Will H. Stevens, late Star of the Stevens Dramatic—The Excentric.

At the recent meeting of the State Teacher's Association held in Lansing the State Superintendent of Public Instruction promised the Lenawee teachers in attendance, that he would be at the next regular meeting of their association to be held at Adrian the third Saturday of this month, Jan. 19th. He very much regretted that he was unable to attend the last meeting, and instructed the local committee to advertise him for the coming meeting. Mr. Pattingill also promised to come to the meeting. A good program has been prepared and every thing points to a successful meeting. Let the teachers turn out and fill the house.

Will Sutton, of East Saginaw is in town.

Mrs. Burt Tate is visiting friends at Ypsilanti.

C. A. Keil, of Toledo, was in town the first of the week.

Joe Wooden moved his household goods to Battle Creek Tuesday.

The minstrel show of the season will arrive next Monday. Jan 14th.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Adams were visiting Tecumseh friends the first of the week.

George Adamson went to Ann Arbor Monday to get treatment for his eyes.

M. P. Brown's business is booming right a long, notwithstanding the holidays are over. Read his new card elsewhere.

Mrs. M. A. Freeman respectfully urges all who owe her on account to call and settle at once, The old year accounts must be balanced soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Ide celebrated their 30th anniversary by a family gathering Friday, Jan. 4. It was a very happy occasion.

Remember the Literary entertainment to be given Jan 18th at the opera house. It ought to be a success both socially and financially.

Our patrons will please bear in mind that locals must be handed in on Wednesday to insure insertion the same week. The HERALD will go to press in decent season hereafter.

Pennington's corners is talking of building an extension line, and connecting with the T. & M. telegraph line. They are getting tired of being without quick communication with the busy world.

The C. T. Co. have issued new message blanks and the prominent line thereon runs as follows: "Rates—Ten words or less, 20c. Two cents each word over ten." The public will please read and reflect.

Any one who wishes to buy a good house and lot in Tecumseh at a remarkably cheap figure can secure a bargain by calling on A. L. Millis. Do not delay or the chance may be gone.

At the regular communion last Sabbath at the Universalist church four members were received, being all of one family. The church has received ten members during the past year, under Bro. Getchell's pastorate.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church and will hold its regular meeting on Wed, Jan, 16th. Business meeting at 4 P. M, Supper will be served from 5½ till 7 by Mrs. Ide's Committee. A welcome will be extended to all.

The residence of Elijah King was the scene of a very pleasant gathering on Jan, 3d, it being Mr. King's 70th birth day. His children and grand children and a few outside friends met together to offer their congratulation and partake of his hospitality. The guests left wishing him many more years of life and health.

The Odd Fellows Lodge installed the following officers Tuesday evening.

The National Theatre Co. opened up at the Opera House last night to a fair house in spite of the severe storm, and their entertainment gave satisfaction. They have decided to remain the entire week. They will produce the great Comedy entitled "Inshavogue" to night the Forresters will appear in their charming vocal act. The prices have been reduced to 10c, 15c, and 20c. Tickets for sale at the usual place.

Frank Bryan is one pig out of pocket, as it were. Last Friday Mr. Howard butchered five large hogs and Frank took over two pigs weighing about 120 pounds when dressed, which were properly scalped and hung on the pole and left over night. The next morning one of Frank's pigs was non est, and some unknown individual is so much fresh pork ahead. The man who cabbaged the pig was tracked south as far as the gravel pit where all trace was lost. It is not a very serious loss but Frank would be very glad to interview the finder, after all.

The Art Amateur for January contains two attractive colored studies, one of "Daffodils" in oils, and the other a portrait of a charming young woman, cleverly executed in water colors. The designs in black and white include a very striking double page of birds (magpies and fly catchers), a lamp vase decoration (jack-in-the pulpit), decorations for a plate (orchids), a fish-plate and a Royal Worcester vase, a design for an embroidered chair-back and one a polecloth, a page of Gothic bands for wood-carving, and two carved mirror frames. The frontispiece is an interesting study of 'Winter in the Woods.' Price 35 cents. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Clement Hardenburg has taken a clerkship in M. F. Mark's drug store.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Hicks of Eaton Rapids, spent the holidays with their daughter, Mrs. Horatio Keyser.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Edwards and their daughter Erma, of Hillsdale, spent Christmas at Horatio Keyser's.

Clarence Cotton, son of A. B. Cotton, is now filling a position on the Daily Democrat of Grand Rapids, and is well pleased with his position.

V. J. Woodard will open his toboggan slide tomorrow—Friday—evening if the weather remains favorable. He hopes to see a good crowd present.

The G. A. R. Installation took place last Friday evening. There was a large attendance and several Grand Army men were present from Adrian to witness the exercises. We have already published a list of the officers.

The regular meeting of the Young Peoples' Society of the M. E church will be held Monday evening to which all are cordially invited. Rev. Joslyn will give a lecture. Admission 10cts.; children 5cts. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the carpet fund.

Dr. H. L. Stewart has now closed his celery shipments for the season of 1888, and the total amount foots up to 115 tons. A pretty good showing for one dealer. Dr. Stewart is the pioneer in the business here, and we glad to know that he is prospering.

L. C. Blood of Lansing, in remitting his subscription for the coming year says: "I am a little late this year but you must lay the blame to Geo. Spafford who visited us so hard, that I found no time for other trifles. May the shadow of the old HERALD never grow less."

Billy Sellery, the Great Geyer, Kilmar Mc Phu, Tom Ball, Will H. Stevens, Chas. R. Rooney, The Nichols Twins, Marion Bros. The Bethoven Quartette, C. W. Eberts. Harry Savage, H. R. Corey, Eddie Langan, are positively with the Stevens & Rice Minstrel Company—Opera House, Monday, Jan. 14th.

There will be a public meeting at the Opera House in this village on Tuesday evening next, Jan 15th, at 8 o'clock. The subject is to organize a Temperance Reform Club on a non-political non-sectarian basis. Good speakers will be there. All friends of temperance are cordially invited to be present. Let all turn out.

The regular meeting of Macon Grange will be held Friday eve. Jan. 11th. Miss Gilbert, matron of the Industrial school at Adrian, will be present to deliver a lecture on the workings of that institution—let all the members be present. Saturday eve. the young men's contest will come off. Come out and have a good time. The meetings will commence at 6 P.M.

We clip this item from the Washington Post of Jan. 4th: "The following students were yesterday admitted to the bar on motion of W. Willoughby, chairman of the examining committee: Warren Choate, Jno E. Edwards, L. Dewees and H. L. McNair." Bert is "getting there" at a lively rate. He has the qualifications for a first-class lawyer, and we shall expect good reports from him hereafter.

LIBRARY ENTERTAINMENT.

The Library Association will give their entertainment, which has been in course of preparation for some time on Friday evening of next week Jan, 18th at the Opera House. Coffee, sandwiches, ice cream and cake will be served from 6 until 8 o'clock for a small fee. After supper several other attractions will be presented among which will be a pantomime, and a museum, also an auction sale of fancy articles. S. P. Hosmer and Will Hayden will have charge of the museum, which is all that need be said on that point. The arrangements are in the hands of efficient committees, and all who wish to spend an enjoyable evening and help the Library fund will find this a good opportunity to gratify their wishes. We hope to see a large turn out. It will be the first entertainment given by the Association this winter and let us make it a rouser. Further particulars next week. No admission fee will be charged to the hall, but still we advise people not to leave their pocket books at home.

An exchange very pertinently remarks: The people of a town can make it just what they choose. They can make it a stupidly dull town by withholding the money and influence needed to build up local enterprises, or they can make it a live, go-ahead town, populated with an industrious, prudent and intelligent people, and give it a reputation worthy of larger towns. Here is food for thought.

Hon. John C. Tarsney, Congressman-elect in the Kansas City, Mo., district, stopped off at Hudson Tuesday to shake hands with old friends. He made a gallant fight for Tariff Reform in the recent campaign, and achieved a glorious victory. Democrats out his way exclaim, when the defeat of the national ticket is mentioned. "Well, we saved Texas and Tarsney!"—Hudson Gazette.

An old experienced business man speaks of advertising as follows: Advertise by the year. It is cheaper and yields a better return for the money invested. An advertisement should always be before the people in some shape. If it disappears it is soon forgotten, and those that remain have the superiority and advantage over their competitor. There is only one excuse for the discontinuance of an advertisement—that of retiring from business."

The Detroit News printed a paragraph to the effect that the faculty of Adrian college would refuse to graduate a young lady, one of the brightest students in the music department, because she had a wooden leg and therefore cannot practice lessons on the pipe organ, and that her classmates were in consequence very indignant, etc. This calls forth a card from President McElroy who in his usually precise manner, says the News paragraph is utterly false. The faculty, without any opposition, have voted to admit the unfortunate young lady to the honor of graduation.

A very sad accident with fatal result occurred two and a half miles southwest of Canandaigua, on the 27th ult Mr. George Elliott, aged 45 years, and married, was engaged in digging a well on the farm of Frank Kinney. The latter and Mr. Elliott were together, Elliott being at the bottom of the well, which caved in burying the unfortunate man under many feet of earth. Mr. Kinney at once secured help and the work of excavating began The body was reached after several hours of hard work. It was found in an upright position, the victim having stood bravely up against the clods that fell upon him. His death was no doubt due to suffocation. He was a young man of good reputation and his death causes much regret in the neighborhood.—Adrian Press.

Some health rules for cold weather: Wear underclothing. Don't neglect a cold. Go to bed early. Avoid exposure to drafts. Don't cool off suddenly when over heated by exercise. Eat simple and nutritious food, so as to have an ally in the stomach in case of sickness; many people succumb to illness because their digestive organs are traitorous at the critical moment. Take plenty of sleep and thus avoid the feeling of fatigue caused by piling long hours of amusement at night upon a full day's work. Avoid alcoholic stimulants, for alchohol in the system is said by physicians to be a bad element in case of pneumonia. In brief, try to keep fresh and strong, like the weather, and then you can throw off the cold or fever which often rides an exhausted and debilitated man to death.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

School opened Monday with a full attendance.

A number of new scholars have been admitted and classified.

The members of the Rhetoric and English History classes are so numerous, that it is found necessary to make two classes for each study.

As soon as the programme can be arranged satisfactory to all, we are ready for three months of hard study.

Fred McNair has not yet returned from Washington. We expect him with us again next Monday.

I. D. Loree and L. R. Stewart went to Detroit a few days during the vacation.

Miss Etta Coddington in place of spending her vacation in Kalamazoo as she had intended, stayed at home to entertain her friends.

We notice that every one turned over a new leaf in their text book the first day of school; and we hope they did the same with the deportment record the first day of the year.

THE CITY OF THE DEAD.

They do neither plight nor wed
In the city of the dead,
In the city where they sleep away the hours;
But they lie, while o'er them range
Winter blight and summer change,
And a hundred happy whisperings of flowers.
No, they neither wed nor plight,
And the day is like the night,
For their vision is of other kind than ours.

They do neither sing nor sigh
In the time of by and by,
Where the streets have grasses growing cool and long;
But they rest within their bed,
Leaving silence, thoughts unsaid,
Hearing silence better far than song.
No, they neither sing nor sigh,
Though the roses wave and swing,
Though the leaves of autumn march a million strong.

There is only rest and peace
In the city of the dead,
From the failings and the wishings 'neath the sun;
And the slings of those of years
Beat but gently o'er the biers,
Making music to the sleepers, every one.
There is only peace and rest,
But to them it seemeth best,
For they lie at ease, and know that life is done.

SOLVING A MYSTERY

"Mr. Brent, sir."

"Show him in, John."

The servant withdrew and ushered in a tall, dark featured, sharp looking man, who bowed as he entered.

"Be seated, sir," and Mr. Colton pointed to a chair and threw down his paper. "You are Mr. Brent, the detective, I presume—the gentleman I have sent for?"

"I am that gentleman, sir, and completely at your service," and the sharp looking man seated himself.

"I've got some work for you to do, Mr. Brent," began Mr. Colton, the banker, "and, as you bear an excellent reputation for solving mysteries and hunting down criminals, I've no doubt but that you'll be successful in this case."

"I hope so, sir," replied Mr. Brent, in a quiet manner.

"Well, now to tell you what I want solved," and the banker coughed, drew his chair nearer to the detective, and began in a low tone of voice, while Mr. Brent was all attention.

"You must know, Mr. Brent, that for the past two weeks large sums of money have been missing from my safe, which stands in my reading room, up stairs, the window of which room leads out on a small balcony which overhangs our back garden. Day and night the windows of that room have been securely bolted and locked, and so with the door, save when I am in there reading. In the safe that stands there I have had deposited, for the past two weeks, a large amount of money, all gold, sir; and since the night I put it there it has been abstracted—not altogether, Mr. Brent, but $300 or so at a time. I have striven to unveil the mystery, but failed."

"Yes," is all that Mr. Brent remarks, in his quiet way.

"Now, who can be this thief?" Mr. Colton continued. "Who can it be that purloins this money from my safe, which I always find relocked after the money has been taken?"

Mr. Brent is silent; his sharp eyes are bent on the floor; he is in deep thought.

"Who are the occupants of your house, sir?" the detective at length asks.

"Two old and trusted servants, whose honesty lies beyond the shadow of a doubt, and Richard, my son."

"Ah—yes!" is what Mr. Brent says. "Have you visitors often?"

"No, sir," replies the old banker; "that my wife and daughter Alice, since my wife died."

Mr. Brent coughed behind his hand, and then said:

"Could you call up your two servants, sir?"

"Certainly," and the banker put his hand on the bell cord.

Mr. Brent stopped him quickly.

"Excuse me, Mr. Colton," he said, "but call them up on some excuse. Don't let them know our business, sir."

Mr. Colton nodded his head and pulled the bell cord.

The summons was answered by the old man who had shown Mr. Brent in.

"Any letters, John, today?" the banker asked, while the detective eyed the man closely.

"No, sir. None as yet."

"Very well, John. By the bye, send your wife in, won't you, when you go down stairs?"

The old servant bowed his head and withdrew, while Mr. Brent quietly said, looking at the banker:

"That man's honest."

"His wife, an old, gray haired woman, now made her appearance."

"Mrs. Thompson, you'll have mutton today for dinner, won't you?"

"If that's your wish, of course, sir," respectfully answered Mrs. Thompson, and a moment after she left the room, wondering in her own mind why that gentleman with her master stared at her so.

"That's an honest woman," was Mr. Brent's conclusion.

At that instant a young man, perhaps five-and-twenty, entered the room in his slippered feet and passed across the room to a shelf of books, some of which he took down, and then went out of the room and up the staircase.

Mr. Brent had eyed him keenly.

"Who is that young gentleman?" he asked after he had gone.

"That is my son, Richard—quite a studious boy, sir."

Mr. Brent arose from the chair, coughed and picked up his hat, remarking:

"I shall call here early in the evening, Mr. Colton, and stay all night."

"You have some hope of solving this mystery, then?" inquired Mr. Colton.

"Well, yes; I guess I can clear it up a little—at least I'll try. Can't do any more, eh?"

So Mr. Brent, the detective, took his departure, promising to come again in the evening.

* * * * * * *

Ten o'clock at night.

The detective had arrived at the banker's residence an hour before, and both were together in the former's bed chamber, as we draw up the curtains on this, the second scene of our little drama.

There was a night lamp in the room, but it was turned low, and at the side of the table where it stood, were seated Mr. Colton and the detective.

The room of the banker was situated in the rear of the house and opened into the reading room, where the safe stood, from which the banker's gold had so mysteriously disappeared lately.

"Ain't you going to bed, Mr. Colton?" the detective asked.

"I don't think I shall. If I ain't in your way I don't mind sitting up, too. Something tells me that we shall make a discovery to-night."

The front door below opened now, and a man's footstep was heard ascending the staircase and walking across the corridor, then opening a door, entered the room and closed the door.

"That's your son coming in?" Mr. Brent asks in a low voice.

"Yes," the banker responds, in an equally low voice; "he attends lectures in the city university twice a week—ah, Mr. Brent, he is a most studious and learned young man."

Eleven o'clock, and the banker and detective are still waiting for the burglar.

You could hear a pin drop in the house at this time; even the street outside seemed sleeping.

Mr. Colton, the banker, is dozing in his easy chair.

Mr. Brent, the detective, has never closed his eyes, nor has he any notion of doing so.

He sits there in his chair facing the partly open door of the reading room, wherein is the banker's safe, and his eyes—his sharp, owl like eyes—are fixed on that door, and he is on the alert to catch the faintest sound.

For another hour they watch, and 12 strikes at last.

Ten minutes after Mr. Brent's ears catch a strange sound, and he rises quietly to his feet, and as quietly strides across the room and reaches the door of the reading room.

A lamp also burns on the mantel of this room, and it is also turned down quite low, leaving the chamber in semi-darkness.

Mr. Brent hears a sound, and looking through the crack of the door beholds the oak door of the banker's reading room open, and a white robed form enter, with a small night lamp in his hand.

The banker at this instant awakes, and, seeing where the detective is, walks cautiously toward him.

The detective turns, put up his finger to invoke silence, and, the banker coming up, he points to the reading room, where the white robed form is standing.

"It is my son," hoarsely whispers Mr. Colton, his face turning an ashy pale and his limbs trembling.

"Hush—not a word above your breath," commanded Mr. Brent, in a deep whisper, "but watch."

Their eyes were now centered on the form of the banker's son in his night robes, as he set down his lamp on the reading table, and tried the safe with a key he had in his hand.

But the banker had had the lock and turn of the safe altered that day, and the banker's son, after trying for some time to open it, gave a pitiful moan, and arose.

"The wretch," hissed the pale banker, "it is he who has been robbing me. My God, that I should call that villain my son."

The detective's uplifted finger caused him to pause.

The banker's son, arising from his fruitless endeavors to open his father's safe, again took up his lamp and looked around, then walked over to his father's library—it was not locked—and took from thence a small wooden box—brought it to the table—all the time moaning—and then sat down, his back to those whose eyes were on him, and opened the little box.

From out it they saw him take half a dozen gold pieces and lay them, one by one, on the table, count them again and again, and then again pile them up in one high heap in the center of the table, and arising from his seat left them there, and taking up his lamp turned around, and the banker and the detective for the first time that night saw the face of the midnight visitor as he turned around.

"That's no burglar, sir," whispered Mr. Brent in the banker's ear. "That boy of yours is a sleeper, I believe."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that he's walking in his sleep, and while in that condition has opened your safe."

The banker's astonishment was unbounded at this discovery.

The detective was right.

On walked the sleep walker out of the room, across the corridor and into his own room.

The mystery of the disappearing gold was now solved.—Philadelphia Call.

Wellington on Emigration.

A letter written in 1832 by the Duke of Wellington contains a piece of advice which might really be laid to heart by a good many young men and others anxious to improve their fortunes. The duke was writing to a Mr. Foster, a clergyman in Ireland, and persuading him not to emigrate. He insisted on the sacrifices which men must make who emigrate, and goes on to say: "My opinion is, if those who go abroad, and still more those who go to the colonies to economize, would submit to make the same sacrifices as home as they must make abroad and in the colonies, they would find that they could subsist as cheaply, particularly in Ireland, as they could either abroad or in the colonies. The fact is that men cannot bear those sacrifices in the presence of their neighbors and friends which they do not scruple to make before strangers, or in a forest or swamp, or in a desert in America."—Boston Herald

Not Exactly Breathless Impetuosity.

If I were searching for a simile for slowness, more expressive than those of the snail and molasses, I should use the Washington vehicle of street transportation. Not long since I was right on a car line, and could have ridden where I wanted to go for 5 cents, but I was in a hurry and took a cab, for which I paid 50 cents, telling the man of my anxiety to save time. Many times I called to him to drive faster, but each time he replied that he couldn't. Finally in desperation I used unusually strong language in demanding why —— he could not go faster.

"Because," he said calmly, "the car's in the way."

He was following in the track just behind that fine vehicle which I had rejected as slow.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Badly Mistaken Bear.

A Michigan girl, while picking black berries, met a black bear among the briars. She turned to run and tore her dress on a brier so as to expose her patent wire bustle. The bear, mistaking the bustle for a circus cage, struck for the tall timber, leaving the girl to do without logging until a dry goods clerk closed his store at 9 o'clock the next evening.—Peck's Sun.

A Plausible Plea.

"Why, you greedy little fellow," said a frugal mother to her young hopeful, "those wafer crackers were for the Christmas dinner, and you have eaten the whole pound."

"That ain't much, ma," pleaded the young rogue; "they're so thin, you know."—New York Evening Sun.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Diffculties has long been, and still is, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Fauces; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and, even in advanced stages of that disease, relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Glenn, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this to every one afflicted."—Robert Horton, Foreman Headlight, Morrillton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me." Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it, also, invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1257 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

JESUS ON THE SABBATH.

LESSON II, FIRST QUARTER INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 13.

Text of the Lesson, Mark i. 21-34—Commit Verse 34—Golden Text, Luke iv. 15—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helps Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After the baptism of Jesus by John in Jordon, He was led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil and was there forty days; by the sword of the Spirit the enemy was overcome and compelled to flee and angels ministered unto Jesus (vs. 12, 13). Then Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit to Galilee (Lu. iv, 14); and wherever we see Him in all His earthly life He is going about speaking and working in the power of the Holy Spirit (Acts x, 38). There is no way for us to live a Christian life—that is, the life of Christ in these mortal bodies—but by being emptied of self and filled with the same Holy Spirit. Jesus draws unto Him John, Andrew, Simon, Philip and Nathaniel; He attends the marriage at Cana, where He makes the water into wine; He goes to Capernaum for a few days and thence to the passover at Jerusalem, where He cleanses the temple, works miracles and meets Nicodemus; then on His way back to Galilee He meets the woman and people of Samaria, revisits Cana, and with a word heals the son of the nobleman of Capernaum. All this is consecutively recorded in John i, 29, to iv, 54, and seems to come in between verses 13 and 14 of this first chapter of Mark. According to Luke iv, 14-30, He then visits His own town of Nazareth where He had been brought up, and in their synagogue reads from the prophet Isaiah concerning Himself, but is rejected by His townsmen, who in great wrath seek His life. He then makes Capernaum, on the Sea of Galilee, His headquarters (if He could be said to have any on earth); more effectually calls to Him Simon and Andrew, James and John; and in today's lesson we have the record of a busy Sabbath day in that city.

21. "And they went into Capernaum." John the Baptist was at this time in prison, and Jesus was somewhere in the latter part of His first year's ministry. The work of John, though requiring so long a preparation, years in the wilderness, and seemingly so short and unsuccessful, is now nearly over; he has but to tarry a little in prison, and pass from there out to his God and Father. Jesus, the mightier than John, goes forth to His work with these few fishermen as the beginning of His followers, only to be rejected and hated as John was. (Matt. xvii, 12.) But the work goes on, the fishers of men are more busy today than ever before, the number of His elect out of all nations is being completed, the marriage of the Lamb draws nigh, and He shall see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied; then shall we see that neither the work of John, nor the prophets who were before him, nor the work of Jesus Christ or the least of His faithful followers has been in any sense or in the least degree in vain; it is ours to be filled with the spirit and be faithful unto Him, coveting only His approval, seeking only His glory, "and straightway on the Sabbath day He entered into the synagogue and taught." This is the fifth time in this chapter that we find the word "straightway" or "immediately," which reminds us how we are to act as servants of Christ.

22. "He taught them as one that had authority." Not with the wisdom of men, for He had not been to their schools, but with the wisdom of God, for He was and is "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." (I Cor. i, 24.) "The father who sent Him gave Him a commandment, what He should say and what He should speak." (John xii, 49.) His text book was the law, the prophets, and the psalms, and He expounded in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself. He came to fulfill the law and the prophets, for all spake of Him. (Luke xxiv, 27, 44, 45; Matt. v, 17.)

23. "Let us alone." What can we think of those who bear the name of Christ, and yet do not want to hear of being filled with the spirit, dead to the world, seeking lost souls, sending or going to the dark places of the earth with the glad tidings of Jesus; but when urged to be wholly the Lord's, and love and serve Him with the whole heart, giving more time to prayer and Bible study, reply by deeds if not in words, "Let us alone?" Does it not seem as if the unclean spirit was there in some form?

26. "When the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him." Being commanded by Jesus the evil spirit must obey; He casts them out with His word. If you have an evil spirit of unbelief or pride or self esteem or worldliness, you will not get rid of it by trying, but just come to Jesus and He with His word will cast it out. It may tear you and hurt you to lose it, and there may be quite a noise about it, but the temple is the Lord's and it must be wholly His.

27. "With authority commandeth He even the unclean spirits, and they do obey Him." This is, indeed, something new; here is one who is mightier than the devil and his angels, and they must obey Him when He speaks; and they are amazed and perplexed at this apparently humble and unknown man, or known only as the carpenter of Nazareth. Here is more than man, for no man is as strong as the devil, but here is one whom the demons must obey, so He must be more than man. He was foretold as one who would let the oppressed go free, and He does it; but they know Him not. Notwithstanding the testimony of the evil spirit as to who He was, they believe not.

28. "Immediately His fame spread abroad." If every one whose sins have been forgiven was truly thankful to God for such a priceless blessing, does it not seem that they ought to be ready to tell others that they, too, might receive forgiveness, and thus spread abroad the fame of Jesus? What are you doing, dear reader, to make Him known to others? or is it so that He has never done anything for you worth mentioning?

29-31. From the synagogue they go to the home of Simon and Andrew, James and John going with them. It had been a strange morning; never had such an event happened in that synagogue before; the power of God had been seen among them, for Jesus was God manifest in the flesh; and now as they walk to Simon's home, who can tell their feelings in view of these things?

32, 33. "All the city was gathered together at the door." What a company it was, diseased and evil possessed, with their friends who brought them; the suffering and the anxious, all gathered unto Him, for in the short space of a few hours the tidings had gone well abroad that a mighty man who could cast out devils had come among them. If every one among us who has heard of Jesus and been helped by Him would spread abroad His fame does it not seem as if our Sunday schools and churches would be filled to overflowing?

34. "And He healed many. * * * And cast out many devils." Luke says that "He laid His hands on every one of them and healed them." (Luke iv, 40.) There was health in Him for them all, and it was freely given as they needed, without money and without price.

WANTS $50,000 DAMAGES.

Sarah Althea Terry Bridge Suits Against United States Marshal Franks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—It was reported when Sarah Althea Terry was in the Alameda county jail for insulting Justice Field that she gave birth to a dead child. The report is substantiated by a suit brought by Sarah Althea for $50,000 damages against

SARAH ALTHEA TERRY.

United States Marshal Franks. She charges that Franks treated her outrageously when removing her from the court room, and that when pushing her into one of the rooms near the court he jammed her against a sharp corner of a table, and the act killed her unborn child. She alleges she never refused to leave the courtroom with him, and that after he had rudely dragged her into a small room he drew a pistol and threatened to shoot her, when she screamed for help. She estimates her sufferings and the baby's death as worth $50,000. Franks, on his side, has a suit pending against Terry for a similar amount for an assault with a bowie knife and knocking him down. Frank's chief damage consists in the loss of a fine set of false teeth, which a square right-hander from Terry knocked all to pieces.

TIMES THAT TRY MEN'S SOULS.

Bonfield and Schaack Now Want $200,000 from The Chicago Times—And Two Other Men $25,000 Each.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—As the outcome of an article published in The Times Friday morning, in which Capt. Schaack and Detective Loewenstein were accused of withholding stolen property found on prisoners and appropriating the same to their own use, Mr. James J. West, editor, and Mr. Joseph R. Dunlop, city editor, of The Chicago Times, were arrested Friday night. When their case was called up Saturday it was postponed until next Thursday.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Police Inspector Bonfield and Police Capt. Schaack began civil suit Saturday against The Chicago Times, James J. West, managing editor, and Joseph R. Dunlop, city editor, and also against The Socialistic Publishing company, Jens Christiansen and Edmund Deuss, for $100,000 in each case. The basis of the suits against The Times are the articles published in that paper on Friday morning, reflecting on the official and personal integrity of the plaintiffs, for which they had previously had West and Dunlop arrested for criminal libel. The suits against the Socialistic Publishing company are for the republication of the same with editorial comments in The Arbeiter Zeitung, of which Christiansen and Deuss are editor and city editor respectively. The attorneys for the police officials say the suits will be vigorously pushed.

Christianson and Deuss, were also arrested Saturday night on the charge of criminal libel, preferred by Inspector Bonfield and Captain Schaack. The grounds for the arrest are that the Arbeiter Zeitung republished the charges made against the plaintiffs in The Times.

Philip Shaffner and Eli Dauer, of this city, Saturday filed suits against The Times for $25,000 each. The ground of the suits is an article published in The Times on Friday last charging the plaintiffs with keeping a gambling house, and that they gambled for a livelihood. Shaffner is a brother of the well-known lawyer, B. M. Shaffner, who is the attorney for the plaintiffs.

FOUGHT TO THE DEATH.

Four Indians Do Some Deadly Slashing—Further Bloodshed Looked for.

BLACKFEET AGENCY, Jan. 7.—A courier reached here yesterday afternoon from Sweet Grass Hills with news of a four-cornered duel to the death that occurred on Wednesday last between a quartette of Gros Ventres and River Crow Indians. The struggle occurred about sundown on Jan. 2, on the Cottonwood creek in the foot hills, three of the reds being killed outright, and the fourth so seriously slashed that he died on Friday night. The affair has created a great deal of bad feeling between the Indians, and further trouble is feared. Several of the Gros Ventres have gone to Piegan Po and purchased large quanties of ammunition. Agent Allen has taken precautions to prevent any of the Blackfeet leaving this agency, and word will be sent to Agent Lincoln at the Gros Ventre agency to adopt similar measures to prevent a conflict.

THE BURLINGTON STRIKERS.

Pith of the Agreement They Made with the Railway.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—The seal of secrecy was last night removed from the terms of agreement between the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company and the conference committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The terms are in effect that the company will not follow up, blacklist, or in any manner attempt to proscribe those who were concerned in the strike, but, on the contrary, will give to all who have not been guilty of violence, or other improper conduct, letters of introduction, showing their record, and in all proper ways assist them in finding employment. Vice President Stone, of the Burlington stated that the agreement contained all that the men had claimed, and that the company was asked to concede.

Opposition to the Sunday Papers.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 7.—The Presbyterians are in earnest in their opposition to the Sunday papers. The following document, signed by the eleven Presbyterian ministers of the city, was read from all pulpits of that denomination yesterday: "The Presbyterian pastors of Minneapolis, all of whose names are hereunto affixed, believing the use of the Sunday paper to be a distinct violation of divine law, do most earnestly urge and entreat the people of their congregations to abstain from patronizing it as an advertising medium and from either purchasing or reading it."

The Illinois Legislature.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Jan. 8.—Hon. Asa C. Matthews, one of the oldest members of the legislature, is the only Republican candidate for speaker of the house, all others being withdrawn. Cullom's re-election for United States senator seems a foregone conclusion. The city is full of legislators ready for the convening of the assembly.

The Insatiate River.

Disasters Follow Fast on the Broad Mississippi.

ELEVEN MORE VICTIMS GATHERED.

The Paris C. Brown Strikes a Snag and Goes Down—An Ocean Steamer Cut Nearly in Two and the Engineer Killed—A Total Wreck Resulting from the Engineer's Carelessness—Five Men Blown to Eternity—Death in the Shaft.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 7.—The steamer Paris C. Brown, sank Saturday night at Hermitage plantation, and is a total wreck. She was from New Orleans for Cincinnati, the cause of the disaster being the striking of a snag. Details of the accident are very meager. The vessel lies with only the pilot house and a little of the upper deck above water. Eleven persons were drowned, to whom the following is a list: William Mitchell, of Gallipolis, cabin hand; —— Miller, Vicksburg, passenger; William Marshall, Cincinnati, cabin hand; James Harrison, Memphis, pantry man; William Taylor, Cincinnati, night-watchman; John Bolon, Cincinnati, bootblack; Samuel Gray, Cincinnati, fireman; Abraham Mitchell, New Orleans, fireman; a barber, a porter, and a cabin boy, names unknown.

Many barrels and other fragments of cargo have floated down. A large part of the cargo will be a total loss. The boat was owned by Captain A. M. Halliday and C. G. Young, was valued at $24,000, was insured for $14,000 and had about 450 tons of freight aboard, consisting of car wheels, sugar, molasses and sundries, partly covered by insurance. She was built at Cincinnati in 1878 and has made over ninety trips between that city and New Orleans, without accident. The officers were: Capt. C. G. Young; chief clerk, Press Ellison; second clerk, I. M. Young; chief engineer, James Steen; second engineer, Samuel Newkirk; pilots, George Trunnell and Wash Kinley; mates, L. McGeary and Peter Baumgarden.

A BOILER'S DEADLY BURST.

Four Men Killed Instantly and Other Frightful Effects.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 7.—News has been received here of a terrible accident which occurred Saturday at New Hope, Mercer County. Seven farmers of the neighborhood had congregated at William Carter's steam grist mill to obtain their usual supplies of flour. About 1 o'clock William Jerome, Thomas Carter, Joseph E French, Wade Shufflebarger, John Wimmer, Levi Shields and Eli Shields was sitting in the mill talking, when a terrible explosion occurred.

The boiler had burst. The mill was totally wrecked and the following named men killed: Joseph E. French, Thomas Carter, Levi Shields and John Wimmer. Eli Shields was horribly scalded and died yesterday. Wade Shufflebarger was badly burned about the face and body. William Jerome was injured on the head and face, and had his collar bone broken. William Carter was seriously burned and injured internally.

The explosion was of terrific force. The beams were broken into splinters and pieces of the boiler weighing 204 pounds were blown over 300 yards. It is thought that Engineer Shufflebarger allowed the water in the boiler to get too low.

An Ocean Steamer Sunk.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7.—The German Lloyd steamer Main, from Bremen to Baltimore via New York, was in collision Saturday afternoon with the British steamer Montana, of the Atlantic Transportation line, bound out for London, off North Point. The Montana was sunk. Chief Engineer Young, of the Montana, was killed. Mr. Young was killed by a falling boom. The remainder of the Montana's crew clambered aboard the Main before she backed away. The hole in the Montana was big enough to drive a team through and she sank as soon as the Main backed off. She lies in shallow water with her bow in sight.

A Fatal Freight Train Wreck.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 7.—Two freight trains on the Pittsburg & Western railroad collided on a sharp curve eleven miles east of here Saturday night. D. McHenry, engineer of one, was taken out of the wreckage badly mangled and will die. Thomas Jenkins, engineer of the other train, is thought to be fatally injured. He was taken to his home at Newcastle, Pa. William Condon, fireman, escaped with severe bruises. Henry Molz, fireman, was brought to the hospital here, and his chances for recovery are dubious. A misunderstanding as to orders caused the wreck.

Frightful Fall Down a Shaft.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Jan. 7.—While descending the shaft in No. 2 Leisenring coal mine, this county, Saturday, the rope of the cage broke, letting the cage fall a distance of 500 feet, with William Clark, William Farn, and Samuel Shearer, to the bottom of the shaft, killing all three instantly.

Boomers in Bad Luck.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The World has the following special from Kansas City: The following was received by The Kansas City Times Thursday night from Purcell, I. T: Springer City, Oklahoma, a city of 3,000 people, is under martial law. The mayor and city treasurer have gone away and the United States army orders all citizens to leave. Purcell is overrun with fugitives from the promised land.

Valuable Live Stock Burned.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 5.—At Schuyler, Neb., at midnight Thursday night the barn of a farmer, John Craig, was burned and forty-three horses, seventy cattle, twenty hogs, and a large amount of farm machinery, hay and grain consumed. The circumstances point to Craig's hired man, who has disappeared, as the incendiary. He had quarreled with Craig's brother.

Figures as to the Circulation.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan 5.—The treasury department monthly statement for December shows a net increase in the circulation during that month of $303,489. There was a decrease, in round numbers of $1,500,000 in gold coin; $8,250,000 in gold certificates, and $3,500,000 in national bank notes, and an increase of $250,000 of standard silver dollars, $300,000 in subsidiary silver, $8,750,000 in silver certificates and about $4,500,000 in United States notes. The total circulation of the country on Jan. 1 is placed at $1,406,453,942, and $580,946,715 in the treasury.

The Flour Mills Closing Down.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 3.—In accordance with agreement the entered into at the Milwaukee convention of millers, all the flouring mills of this city, save one, the Anchor mill, closed down yesterday. The Anchor mill will shut down as soon as it fills one or two important orders it has on hand. Under the Milwaukee agreement 250 mills in the winter wheat belt will either close down or run on half time during the present month.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

GRAPE WINES

ALSO

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal churches for communion. Excellent for invalids, weakly persons and the aged.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This celebrated wine is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised by Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal hospitals and boards of health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particular beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that effect the weaker sex.

TONIC AND STRENGTHENING PROPERTIES

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Oporto Grape preserved in its natural sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the exciter of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's Socialite Claret.

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry.

Is a wine of superior character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

Is a pure distillation of the grape, and stands unrivaled in this country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

TO THE SEA SERPENT.

Strange and numerous monster of the deep,
Across whose placid warm thou dost sweep
In sinuosities:
Beware, yes, watch, lest thou be caught
By him who hast for decades sought
Monstrosities.

Tis well thou tackiest only smaller craft,
And trifle not with such as Leary's raft,
You must know
Take warning, and when Barnum comes in view,
Become thyself, or he will make of you
A side show.
—From The Queen

OVER THE RAPIDS.

From Bonaventure depot, Montreal, we took the 5 p. m. train to St. Zotique, a pretty little village on the St. Lawrence, a few miles above Coteau.

After doing justice to M. Lalonde's tempting meal, we were let loose in a lovely old fashioned garden, and bidden pluck all the roses we could carry.

In the meantime, our raft was on its way down from Cornwall, and was expected at St. Zotique about 11 o'clock p. m.

But as the hours crept on and no raft appeared, we entreated our host and hostess to retire and leave us to watch. But no! French politeness forbade any such free and easy proceeding as that, so we resigned ourselves to the inevitable and made the night lively with music and college songs. At last, at 2 o'clock in the morning, the signal was heard, and, taking leave of our kind friends, we walked down the long pier, which is over a quarter of a mile in length.

By the dim light of one lantern, we stepped on board a queer craft, filled with men who were to row us to the raft. The dead hour of the night, or rather morning, the darkness, the mysterious figures moving around, the rattle of the chains and creak of the oars in rowlocks, and, above all, the silence, gave a strange feeling. One of the party (the doctor) remarked that he never felt so much like a pirate in his life. A few strokes brought us to the raft, we got on board and then began our strange experience.

One raft is, strictly speaking, a number of smaller ones, or what are called drams, bound together with ropes and chains. Passing through the lakes and rivers, attached to a tug, these drams are fastened together, making one large one; but when nearing the rapids they separate and each one goes through alone. These drams are made of immense logs of oak or pine, as the case may be, laid side by side and bound together with cross pieces about three feet apart. These again are fastened to the logs by withes of some strong wood, the withes are made pliable by machinery, so they are easily twisted and tied around the logs. Each single dram is generally about 50 feet wide, by 200 or 300 feet long. Rowlocks are made, raised about 3 feet from the surface of the dram, 8 at the bow and 8 at the stern, never at the sides. The oars are about 35 feet in length, and are fastened with ropes, as they are easily lost in the rush of the rapids. The drams are built to about the depth of five logs, which of course are all under water except the top layer. It takes about fifteen men one month to build one of these drams. Our raft, which, by the way, was worth $100,000, consisted of nine drams, with about twenty men on each, sixteen rowers, a pilot and assistant, a cook and one [illegible]

The men are paid a'our $2.50 p'ich, except the pilot, who gets $5. The rule is, "no success, no pay."

On our particular dram was a shanty built expressly for us, as the pilot had never had the pleasure of ladies' company on board before. Our shanty was dignified by the name of Windsor hotel. It consisted of two apartments, with a doorway, but no door. In each were two berths, one above the other, as on shipboard. One bedroom did duty as a dining room, the other was the kitchen. Having no door, we hung up a blanket as a portiere.

Just as we had settled ourselves for the rest of the night, and were falling into a pleasant sleep, lulled by the soft wash of the waves, our dreams were rudely dispelled by another kind of lullaby.

The cook, having in mind an early breakfast, proceeded to chop wood for that meal within two yards of our berths, at the same time favoring us with a chanson, accompanied by an obligato of groans as the obdurate wood refused to yield to the blandishments of the ax. The result was this:

O ma-sam! O ma cousine-Sam! cousine angele-sam!

Being in a humor to see the ludicrous side of everything we lay and laughed till we could laugh no more.

About half after 4 in the morning the melodious cook sailed into our room and gazed around for a moment, and then walked off with our pitcher. We were up and dressed about 5 o'clock, being brought to time by the smell of boiling ham. Before leaving the cabin we had been unconscious of any movement of the raft, but on emerging found ourselves Being tugged by the John A. Macdonald. We explored the raft from stem to stern, and found that two of our drams were of oak and seven of pine.

Breakfast over, and finding that it was only 6 o'clock, we prowled around again, and examined the style of cooking. For ourselves we had a stove, but the hands had two large kettles, hung gypsy fashion, from cross sticks, over a large fire. The immense pieces of boiling beef said much for the appetites of the men.

But now in the distance could be heard the roar of the rapids; the men flew to draw up the long ropes that held the drams together, and in another moment each one was entirely separated from the others. The John A. drew in her cable and forged ahead, but keeping near enough to render assistance in case of need. But John A. evidently didn't care to let us have all the fun ourselves, and consequently ran aground the foremost dram, the left paddlewheel sticking up in the air in a most helpless manner. Nearly half an hour was spent before "Johnny" could be induced to disembark. At last he withdrew his embarrassing attentions, and once more our stately procession moved on.

Ahead the long line of curling white foamed—the roar grew louder; faster and faster went the raft. The rowers still labored at the oars, keeping their eyes fixed on the boiling waters ahead, and their ears pricked up for the voice of the pilot, which could be heard above the din of the waters, one moment shouting "en haut!"—meaning to row at the bow—then "a derriere!"—at stern.

Now we approach within a few yards, and at a shout from the pilot the rowers drop their oars and spring back drenched with spray, not a moment too soon. Into the seething mass we rush, the terrible waves dashing up on either hand like strange monsters crouching and springing to devour us.

The shanty leaps in the air. Writhing, straining, wrenching, creaking, the whole raft shudders in agony—the logs tremble and shriek. Up spurts the water between, as though each log were a mighty porpoise. On every hand jut bare, deadly rocks, ready to grind our raft to pieces should the water fail to destroy us.

Our pilot is nearly wild. A few feet too much to one side or the other will cost us our lives. Once we run aground a rock, where we spin around like a top, and the bravest held his breath for a time. But in some way we slide to one side, and are off again, but having reversed our position, having the stern of our dram foremost—rushing—sweeping along, till the last rock is past, and we glide into calm water with a sigh of relief, relaxing our grasp upon whatever noun happened to be nearest us, and drop back into the dolce far niente that characterized the beginning of our trip.

Now a fresh breeze springs up, and we rest in the shade of the shanty, watching the hoisting of the sails. Up they go, not an ungraceful line anywhere, curving themselves out proudly, like some large, beautiful white birds that are being swept before a rude wind, but refusing to acknowledge that they are being driven against their will.

But our luxurious idleness is not destined to last long, as our ears are greeted by a roar like thunder. Looking up to ascertain the cause, we find the sky clear and lovely. But away ahead we see myriads of diamonds flashing and sparkling in the air. We are approaching Cedar rapids, which are much more dangerous and longer than the Coteau, which we had just come through. The same experience repeated, only with a much greater emphasis. After passing the Cedars safely, for which we breath a sigh of thankfulness, we sight the Split Rock rapids. Here again is danger, only a narrow channel being open to us. The immense rock from which the rapids take their name lifts its head and stares the voyagers in the face. In a breathless hurry we sweep past, only failing by some inches to grind against its edges. Now we are through, and here we drop anchor to wait for the boat load of Indians who are to pilot us through the Lachine rapids, which, as every one knows, are the most dangerous of all. Nineteen men are required to lift the anchor and get it in position; but, unfortunately, it is dropped too soon, and a long time is spent in slipping it again. A long line of men arrange themselves on the raft—one boat load goes out, and together they begin to draw the long cable that holds the anchor, swaying this way, then that way, their voices ringing out musically in the fresh air: "O hoy—ye ho! O hoy—ye ho!"

But all things come to an end, and so must this, and the sound of a deep bass voice saying something about "Lachine" awakes us to the fact that our anchor is shipped, our rowers in place, the Indian pilot standing like a bronze statue, and we are advancing with treacherous smoothness, but in reality at the rate of eighteen miles an hour.

The rowers. A moment before they had been laughing and talking carelessly. Now each man has dropped to his knees and is imploring le bon Dieu and all the saints to guard us well.

It was a curious thing to see all these rough men, caring nothing for the observation of our party, baring their heads and lifting their eyes to heaven, believing that their simple act of devotion would bring them safely through all the dangers of rock and whirlpool. But our time allotted to prayer is short. A moment more and every one is in his place; every back bending to the oar, every eye keen and watchful. As before, the pilot shouts, the rowers spring back, and with a crash we strike the mass of foaming water which flings itself out to meet us. Again the "solid ground" seems to "fall beneath our feet." Again our shanty shudders and springs into the air. Again the horrible twisting and grinding of the logs. Airy water sprites dance along just ahead of us, beckoning with glittering fingers. Drawn at a terrific speed by millions of cruel foamy hands, drenched with spray, breathless but triumphant, we clear the last rock, speed safely into smooth waters, and, passing beneath the Victoria bridge, glide calmly onward, and at last reach "the haven where we would be" Montreal. -Detroit Free Press.

Gas, Water and Brine.

One of the most remarkable of the wonderful things of which Pittsburg boasts is the combination well that has been struck at the cracker factory of S. S. Marvin & Co. on Liberty street. It produces at one and the same time cold water, as pure and sweet as the dew that falls from heaven, salt water as briny as old ocean's waves and a flow of gas that when ignited illuminates the entire surroundings. The well was drilled some time ago, Mr. Marvin's idea being to get a supply of pure cold water for use in his bakery in the summer and during flood times, when the city water is not desirable. At 100 feet the fresh water was struck, and at 200 feet the salt water and gas were found. Two casings were inserted, one for the salt water and gas, the other for the fresh water; and now when the engine is started and the gas lighted, spectators behold the wonderful sight of fresh water, salt water and fire all coming out of one well at the same time. Pittsburg Dispatch.

Brooklyn Bridge.

The Brooklyn bridge is no less a marvel than it ever was, but it is now such a commonplace convenience that the people of the metropolis wonder how they ever got along without it. Over 33,000,000 passengers passed over the bridge during the year ending Dec. 1, of whom more than 30,000,000 were railway passengers. Not a single serious accident occurred on the railway. Fifty-eight persons were injured by falling on the stairs or from other causes. Five lost children were found on the bridge. One person committed suicide by shooting, and there were forty-two runaways with slight damages. The bridge is well policed, so that women cross alone at night without the slightest annoyance.—Public Opinion.

Worth Remembering.

One trouble with the ordinary day laborer is that he lacks fine intelligence, the breadth of mind that comes with education, an earnest love of all mankind, an eager ambition to excel in his work, a delicate sense of social distinctions, and an overmastering passion to attain a high ideal. But if these reflections occur to you when he puts coal ashes around your fruit trees for a fertilizer, it is also well to reflect that if he had all these things he probably would not be a day laborer.—Puck.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Burglars captured $159 from the Romeo postoffice on the morning of Dec. 30. The burglar business seems to be lively nowadays.

Since the days when the old-fashioned windmill was the fickle power that ground our grists, the miller has taken all the toll the law allowed (and sometimes he wasn't o'er careful about crossing the dividing line), but some hungry chaps visited Adams' mill at Gaylord early the other morning and helped themselves to $87 worth of change. This seems to have been a case where a generous toll was collected of the miller.

The Detroit doctors, in conclave assembled, have decided that the mental science art of healing is all a humbug. This may not settle case, however.

The "Tom and Jerry" crop seems to be fully ripe, and is being harvested in elegant shape in many places throughout the state.

Even the servants of the Lord aren't safe from the burglar's pranks. While a Grand Rapids priest was saving mass on Sunday, a curious chap found $40 stowed away in his house for safe keeping, and silently stole away. The cash accompanied him.

There has been a great thining out of Flint hen roosts, 100,000 pounds of dead poultry having been shipped from that city the present week. New York city must have considerable of a chicken taste in her mouth now-a-days, albeit 'tis a very large one.

A 5 per cent. tax makes the average Benzie county citizen feel as though he'd like to live in some less expensive clime.

Some time ago St. Joseph and Benton Harbor endeavored to bring about a municipal union whereby the twain should become one city, but after a deal of courtin' the engagement was declared off. Now comes the news that they are to be united by the fraternal ties of a $50,000 electric railway.

There's a chance for the reaker of this item getting $500 by furnishing information as to the whereabouts of Mrs. J. E. Hartsig, a Detroit lady, who left her home some months since and hasn't since been heard from.

An upper peninsula paper has been reading the new legislature some sage advice, among other things telling 'em that 'twould be a master stroke of policy to do their business in sixty days and then go Fome. Wasted advice. Legislatures aren't built that way.

An Emmet county school of pale-faced youngsters is being taught this winter by Leander Burnett, a full blooded Indian. Ugh.

The glad holiday time doesn't always bring peace on earth and good will to men. A couple of Croswell chaps quarreled over the select one of a Christmas tree, and one of 'em now sleeps beneath the sod because of a fatal blow received, while the other boards at the bastile.

A Nirvana man, who believes in being consistent in all things, refuses to feed rye to his chickens, from which it may be inferred that politically and poultryly he's a Prohib.

'Twas announced some three or four years ago that Osceola county's saw timber had all been fed to the circular gormandizer, but 20,000,000 feet are being cut this winter in one little corner of her borders. Beats all how fast timber can grow in some sections.

But one person charged with a criminal offense has been acquitted in Barry county during the past six years that Phillip T. Colgrove has been its prosecuting attorney. When Phil goes for the fellow that cuts up a rusty, he's pretty sure to catch him.

Jackson county's tresurer had to whack up $300,000 bonds before he could handle the public funds.

Nearly $250,000 of wealth was fired into new buildings at Flint the past year.

Joseph Heald, a prominent manufacturer and business man of Grand Rapids, is dead at the age of 65 years. He had accumulated $250,000 since coming to the state in 1852.

A Carleton Center couple went to Lansing recently to see the sights, and began operations by blowing out the gas. When they recovered sufficiently to realize the situation they hastily made tracks for home.

A Jackson family of five persons were seriously poisoned by eating of a holiday turkey that had become somewhat too ancient to be palatable. It required a doctor's bill large enough to have bought several healthy turkeys, to bring 'em out all right.

Frank McDonald, a Flint fellow who was caught in the act of helping himself to valuables in a store of that city, was suddenly convinced that 'twere better to desist when a bullet crashed through the show case at which he was operating. Frank is a bastile boarder, now.

The Rockford doctor who tried a wrestling bout with "the boys" just for a little innocent sport, has since been 'nursing three broken ribs. When he gets well he'll attend to mending other people's bones, instead of breaking his own.

John Bell, a Kalamazoo county pedagogue, has engaged in teaching a district school on Grand Prairie, but isn't having altogether smooth sailing. Two or three weeks ago somebody tried to plant a bullet in his anatomy, and the other day the same scheme was repeated—both balls coming too close to their mark for comfort. As John has no known enemies, he's at a loss to account for the attempted assassination.

A Grand Rapids chap who has been a public charge for some time past, has been found to have a nice wad of money stowed away in his shanty residence. It nearly broke his heart, but public assistance has stopped nevertheless.

A Buchanan business man went to supper the other night without locking his safe, and while he was filling his stomach, another chap was lining his pockets with the merchant's cash, to the tune of $300.

An Ishpeming chap caught on to the fact that a fellow workman had saved up $150, with which to bring his parents over from Ireland, and getting his hands on the money, skipped.

A Saginaw dealer in second-hand relics, is the owner of a trunk that's been banged around for more'n 100 years. But the probabilities are that the modern railway baggage smasher hasn't had many whacks at it, or its brow would have sadly wrinkled long ago.

Governor Luce Inaugurated.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 4.—Governor Luce was inaugurated at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A considerable portion of his annual address is devoted to the temperance question. He says:

CYRUS A. LUCE.

Believing that the sentiment of a large portion of the state is ripe and ready for it I commend to your consideration the passage of a local option law, if one can be devised free from constitutional objections. If our constitution prohibits us from securing an efficient law for localities it does not prohibit a general prohibitory law, and if we are denied other opportunities no doubt in the future this course will be resorted to.

In regard to convict labor he says that he believes that prison labor does not compete with free labor to the extent popularly supposed, and that the state must get compensation to defray the expenses involved in keeping the prisoners.

The legislature adjourned last evening until Tuesday night.

The Indeterminate Sentence System.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 5.—Michigan will try the indeterminate sentence system. A meeting of the prison board with the board of corrections and charities here concluded its work by indorsing the draft of an act providing for this and the parole system, in accordance with the governor's recommendation in his annual message. The act is modeled closely after the Ohio law. The legislature will doubtless approve the measure.

A PLEASANT CORRESPONDENCE

Carried on Between the White House and Gen. Harrison's Residence.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 5.—The mails between the White House and Gen. Harrison's residence in Indianapolis have been quite heavy for several weeks. One of the first acts of the president after the election of Harrison had become a certainty was to write a letter to his successful opponent congratulating him on the result of the election. Close upon this letter went another from Mrs. Cleveland to Mrs. Harrison, in which the mistress of the White House extended a pressing invitation to her successor to be her guest during the days preceding the inauguration. The president's letter brought forth a pleasant reply from Gen. Harrison. Since then a very pleasant correspondence has been carried on between the two distinguished men. Some of Mr. Harrison's letters have been in the nature of inquiries regarding the daily routine of the office, together with other things which Gen. Harrison would naturally desire to be informed upon. Mrs. Harrison has also been in weekly correspondence with Mrs. Cleveland in reference to many household affairs which a woman of Mrs. Harrison's position would deem important to know. It is said by those who apparently speak from knowledge of past changes of White House occupants that more friendly relations between the outgoing and incoming families have never existed.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. —Get a free trial bottle at

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find, a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,

Harpers Bazar!

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar will continue to maintain its reputation as an unequalled family journal. Its art illustrations are of the highest order, its literature is of the choicest kind, and its Fashion and Household departments of the most practical and economical character. Its pattern-sheet supplements and fashion plates alone will save its readers ten times the cost of subscription, and its articles on decorative art, social etiquette, house keeping, cookery, etc., make it indispensable to every household. Its bright short stories and timely essays, are among the best published, and not a line is admitted to its columns that could offend the most fastidious taste. Among the attractions of the new volume will be serial stories by Francis Hodgson Burnett, Mrs. Alexander, Wm. Black, and Thomas Hardy, and a series of papers on the nursery management by Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Mrs. W. C. Rogers spent Monday and Tuesday with her daughter, Mrs. E. S. Tate.

Albert Nimocks disposed of his household goods at auction last Saturday, and left Monday for Jackson. He expects to go from there to Columbus, O., where he will meet his family and from thence to Kansas.

J. T. Cark went to Tecumseh on business, Tuesday.

O. A. Sinclair is now prepared to take his lady friends out riding, having bought a new buggy.

Mrs. Charles Parker and Miss Carl Corey made Tecumseh a short visit, Tuesday.

Charles Johnston came over from Detroit last Saturday night for a few days visit.

A very pleasant meeting of the Blue Ribbon Club was held last Sunday at the town Hall.

Clinton Lodge, No. 175 F. & A. M. met Saturday evening, Jan. 12th, for work in third degree. Visiting delegations were present from Tecumseh and Manchester.

Quite a number went from here to Tecumseh Monday night to the minstrel show.

Mrs. E. R. Smith went to Detroit last Monday, intending to remain several days.

Born, in Chicago, Saturday, Jan 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Silvers, a daughter.

Mrs. Frank Scoville left this week for her home in South Bend, Ind., and Miss Carl Corey for Paw Paw.

E. VanDeMark, David Woodward and George Runyan went to Grand Rapids, Monday, to attend a meeting of the Grand Chapter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Soper of Adrian, were in town Saturday. They left on the noon train for Howell, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Ordiway.

Negotiations are being made with C. D. Keyes by several young gentlemen toward giving a series of dancing lessons. We know of no one here better calculated to give instruction in the art, and we hope Mr. Keyes will consent to impart some of his knowledge to those who desire it.

A fire broke out in Abram Ward's house last Monday by some bedclothes falling against the stovepipe in an upper room. It was soon discovered and prompt assistance was given by the employees in the woolen mill, thus preventing any serious damage.

We hear that Joe Cummins is rapidly regaining his health. He is now able to walk with but one crutch.

On counting the beans at L. K. Davis' jewelry store last Tuesday, it was found that the luckey guessers and the ones entitled to the watch, were Chris. Wallinger and Merrill Estabrook.

Mrs. Dell Ordiway died last Friday evening after an illness of several weeks. The remains were taken to Norvell, Mrs. Ordiway's old home, on Monday, and the funeral held at the residence of her father, James Graham.

On the evenings of January 29th and 30th, "Hazel Kirke" will be played at the Town Hall under the anspices of the young people of St. John's church. Miss Stella Miller of Blissfield, will take the part of "Hazel," and with C. D. Keyes as the "Blind Miller," O. A. Sinclair as "Arthur Carringford," Chas. Ward as the "Irishman," Dwight Hause as "Pittacus Green," Mrs. Chas. Clark as "Dolly Dutton," and the other characters as well represented, we can assure the public that they will be well entertained.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The hard wind that prevailed Wednesday afternoon and evening of last week, did slight damage in the way of blowing off blinds and breaking window glass about here.

Wm. Birdsell, who has been under the doctor's care for several weeks is able to be out again.

The doctors here are ready to perform the operation for any who desire to be vacinated, as there are some cases of small pox within a few miles of here.

The attendance at the evening services last week was very encouraging. There will be meetings every evening except Saturday evening until further notice.

A very pleasant time is reported by those who attended the afternoon meeting of the W. C. T. U. held at the home of Mrs. G. P. Waring last week. Their next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Arner next week Tuesday afternoon and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Mrs. H. J. Williams, after a visit with relatives and friends in Vermont and Connecticut of several weeks, arrived home on Tuesday evening of last week.

Wm. Ford, wife and child, of Tecumseh visited Wm. Larkin and family over Sunday.

Wm. Wells of Addison, formerly of our village, was in the place shaking with old acquaintances Monday, and reports Alfred Mosier doing a flourishing business in his shop at Addison.

Lou Arner, accompanied by Ella Jackson of Tecumseh, spent a part of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Madison Fox, at Dundee.

Miss Emma Gilbert, Secretary of the Industrial Home at Adrian, and Prof. and Mrs. E. A. Wilson of Tecumseh, were the guests of W. R. Wilson and family, Saturday and Sunday.

Prof. E. G. Walker, Secretary of the County Board of School Examiners, was in the village Monday, stopping at the "Smith House," opposite the P. O.

There probably is not a person that will be missed by all in the village and community more than Harry Smith. He has sold his tinsmith tools to Coryell & Williams and left for Clarksville, Saturday, where he expects to spend the winter. Tink has been always found at his post ready and willing to lend a helping hand, especially when a stove had to be moved, a job in which he took pleasure in doing. Being a first-class workman can easily secure work anywhere.

Mrs. Wallace Linn, after several months of suffering with that dreadful disease consumption, quietly passed away Tuesday morning. Mrs. Linn, better known as Jennie Gordeneer was united in marriage to Wallace Linn, May 9th, 1888, at the home of her parents at Inkster, since which time they have made it their home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Linn. Only a few weeks of enjoyment was realized before a gloom of sad ness hovered over their once bright prospects and hopes never to rise, but grow thicker and sadder with the flight of time. She leaves a large circle of friends who feel their loss and sympathize with the bereaved husband and parents, brothers and sisters in their sad affliction. The funeral services were held at the church Thursday afternoon, Rev. J. A. Lowry conducting the services, and the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery west of the village.

A Genuine Closing-out Sale. Jesse Potter, of the firm of Waring & Potter, having something else in view has withdrawn his interest for the purpose of going into business elsewhere; therefore not being a merchant myself, and not desiring to become one, the entire stock, which is practically new, will be closed out at cost, excepting the Grocery line which will be kept up for a short time. This will be a grand chance to buy dry goods, underwear, hats, caps, crockery, gold band ware, hanging and stand lamps, ladies' and gent's furnishings, etc., in large or small quantities at wholesale prices. Anyone desiring such business can have the whole stock and store furniture at a discount, and on easy terms. Mr. Potter will be glad to sell anyone who wishes to buy a house and lot. The undertaking business will be continued as usual.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Miss Eliza Whelan is visiting Frank lin friends.

Miss Inez Allen is out of school nursing a badly scalded foot.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Langdon have returned from the north where they have been residing for about two years past and will once more make their home in Franklin on the old farm. Mrs. Langdon is now at Macon visiting friends.

An aunt and cousin of Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. Hepsy Sharp and Mr. S. Crandell of Concord, made her very happy by their presence from Tuesday to Friday of last week.

The young people inflicted a pleasant surprise on Mr. David Burroughs' folks last Thursday night. Owing to the bad weather of the previous night which was the one at first appointed by the company, was not as large as it would have been. It is a matter of regret that Mr. B's family will soon leave us and we shall miss them sorely.

Miss Emma McCollum is at the University at Ann Arbor studying medicine. May she meet with the success she so much deserves.

Correction. In the HERALD of Jan. 3d, for over seventy scholars in the Center school read over forty. Miss Johnson of Clayton fills Miss Wirts' place.

The Franklin Union Literary and Lyceum met at the home of Ezra Simmons Jan. 4th. The usual exercises were carried out. The question "Resolved, that the happiness of the household depends more on the wife than the husband," was decided in the affirmative. The next meeting of the society will occur at Alanson Updyke's, Jan. 18th. The program we did not obtain. The paper will be edited by Miss Alma Whelan and Rena Allen. The question for debate "Resolved, that every citizen of the United States should vote regardless of race, color or previous servitude.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Warnie Hampton visited at Chas. Hampton's in Fowler, Ind., New Year's week.

Mrs Jas. Allen has not been so well of late.

Edith Spaulding visited her sister, Mrs. Fox of Tecumseh, last week.

The winter term of the Newburgh school began Monday, Jan. 7th.

Miss Johnson has been engaged at the Center school to take the place of Miss Wirtz, who goes to Tecumseh. Miss W. is much esteemed in Franklin and will be regretted.

Horace Brown and bride have begun housekeeping on the farm he has rented of Fay DePuy.

Master Harry Abbott's young friends gathered at his home Saturday night and a merry time was enjoyed.

Joseph Spaulding's horse, "Prince," who has had some throat trouble for several weeks, died a few days ago.

There is rejoicing in the families of both Riley and John Butrick over the advent of little ones, who started in the race of life with five days difference in favor of Johnny's boy.

Ula Burroughs was the happy victim of a "surprise party" last Thursday night. General regret is felt at the near departure of Mr. Burroughs and family, but all wish them success and happiness in their new home.

Geo. DePuy contemplates a trip to Grand Rapids this week.

Geo. Semark and wife have been visiting friends in Toledo.

Mrs. Elmer Wilson has been very sick for a long time. Her friends, and the list includes all her acquaintances, are extremely anxious about her.

Meetings are now being held nightly in the Franklin M. E. church. Rev. Jones, an evangelist from Canada, is assisting the pastor and a good deal of interest has already been awakened.

BRITTON BUDGET.

There was a mistake in our last week's budget. It was H. Brown & Son who bought Dr. Swartout's stock of groceries.

Edmund Cornell is in town shaking hands with his many friends. He is in the employ of the Elgin and Joliet R. R. company as conductor.

A large amount of lumber is being shipped from this station at present.

Their Business Boomag.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at C. A Wright & Co's Drug Store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle wariantied.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 17.

The blizzard of last week at Pittsburg and Reading, Pa., was unprecedented in that latitude. Dakota will have to look to her laurels.

We can never have weather that pleases everybody. This is a bad winter for coal dealers, ice venders, and the proprietors of tobogan slides.

Owen Brown, he last surviving son of John Brown, died last week at Pasedena, Cal., aged 74 years. The whole family are now marching on.

The friends of Julius Caesar Burroughs claim that his chances for the speakership are good. He is Mr. Reed's most dangerous competitor. If the Maine man fails Burroughs will be elected sure.

Neither surrender nor compromise on the tariff question. That is Cleveland's position, and that is the position of the Democratic party. The more radical the trusts make the fight the sooner it will be over.—St. Louis Republic.

The Democratic party alone, says James Parton in the January Forum, can ever rescue the laboring man from a tariff that lets in the competing laborer duty free, while keeping out the cheap coal that could warm him, the cheap wool that could clothe him, the cheap timber that could shelter him.

The offer to Gen. Harrison by Col. Calvin S. Brice of the use of the latter's private car for the trip from Indianapolis to Washington ought to be accepted. It is an act of refined politeness on the part of a gentleman who can be magnanimous in defeat—a greater thing than to be generous in victory. Trim the car with rainbows and send it along.—N. Y. Sun.

"Object lessons" multiply. The Iron and Nail Co., at Oxford, N. J., has closed down, throwing 400 men out of employment. During the campaign a pressure was brought to bear upon the workmen of this mill, to the effect that Harrison's election meant work all winter, but Cleveland's success would ruin the business. The pressure had its influence, but results are all awry.

The mint of money used to buy voters "in blocks" didn't swerve the good republican deacons a hair's breadth, but the thousands to be spent upon a grand ball where people shall dance and dance as light hearts and exuberant spirits shall impel, puts them in an agony of soul that is sorrowful to witness.

The Suspension of the Richmond Whig may be regarded as a token of the final extinction of the old Whig party in Virginia. The Whig was a great power before the war. Since then it has tried Mahonism and High Tariff Democracy, but neither would keep it alive and it has succumed at last. Modern journalism in the south needs to be dis-incumbered of the memories of the past

One great reason why letter postage can not be reduced is the fact that tons of matter are franked by the government and the people who pay postage have to foot the bill. Knock off the freight department of the mails and letters can be carried for a cent. The franking privilege is a national nuisance and the sooner it is done away with the better for the general business community.

There is an immense lot of fun in the wild effort of the anti-Blaine Mugwumps and anti-Blaine Rrpublicans to keep Brother Blaine out of the new Administration; and yet nothing will come of it. At the head of the State Department Blaine is bound to be. Yet there would be a great deal more fun for outside philosophers, especially those of our sort, if Gen. Harrison should take the advice of the Mugwumps and drop Blaine overboard. Then the fur would fly for certain, and the Indiana statesman would find that the great mass of the Republican party would have something to say about the actions of their President. There is no difficulty about running a Republican Administration on the great lines of the Republican party. They are plain and simple, and the wayfaring men, though fools, need nor err therein. But to run one outside of these lines would be a jolly experiment.—N. Y. Sun.

THE SANGUINE HURD.

Though Defeated the Democratic Party is in Better Fighting Condition than Ever.

Hon. Frank Hurd was in Columbus on Wednesday and talked freely to the Cleveland Plain Dealer's representative. Mr. Hurd proposes to remain in Ohio and would continue to make Toledo his headquarters.

"How do you account for the Republican gains in the northwest?" was asked.

"The Tariff was not an issue there because all are free traders. I made a number of speeches through the northwest, and at St. Paul I addressed a free trade club meeting. The president of that club, who also presided at my meeting, was chairman of the committee on resolutions at the state convention. Why, the republican platforms in the northwest demanded tariff reform as strongly as the democrats could express it. I talked with the people and the general feeling was that the issue had been made while the republican party was out of power and that they had been given no opportunity to reduce and revise the tariff. Many said they were opposed to the reduction being made by the leaders from the south and desired their own party to do the revising. They said that if the republican party failed to reduce the tariff during the coming four years they would then be prepared to vote the democratic ticket.

"Do you think the republicans can do anything in the way of tariff revision?"

"No, I think it will be impossible because their majority will be very small, in fact it is possible that they will have no majority at all. However, I think it makes very little difference to the democrats whether the republicans control the house or not. The republican members from the northwest will demand a revision of the tariff, which has been promised their constituents, while the ultra protectionists will not be disposed to yield. I look for nothing to be accomplished in the way of tariff reduction during the next two years at least."

"Do you think the people understand the tariff question much better now than they did before the campaign just passed?"

"Yes, they are much better informed upon it, and the advocates of free trade will grow at a very rapid rate. Although defeated the democratic party emerges from the conflict in better fighting candition than it has been for many years. We were contending for a great principal which has survived the defeat and will surely win. The prospects for a democratic victory in 1892, with the tariff as an issue, are certainly bright.

"When one looks about at the results there are things which warrant careful consideration and point to a future problem which some day will call for a solution. I refer to the colored vote. In Indiana for some time past republicans have been bringing negroes into the state to work for them in various capacities and always see to it that they vote the republican ticket. The states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and New York were carried for the republicans by the colored vote. These people are very prolific, and I think many will be surprised at the increased representation in congress from the south due to the increase in colored population. Of the white people in this country there are two democrats to one republican, and many will murmur at the Caucausian race being ruled by an administration elected by the colored voters, a large majority of whom know nothing whatever about the issues involved.

HOW THE ISSUE STANDS.

Election figures are not at hand officially enough to analyze results thoroughly, but sufficient is known to make the cause of tariff reform all the brighter for the burnishing of the campaign of investigation and discussion. Here in Ohio, where it was claimed the reduction of taxes would injuriously affect many interests, Harrison's majority will be several thousand less than the majority for the state ticket. Harrison was behind here in Lucas county, the place where some selfish republicans undertook to scare and intimidate workingmen.

In Chicago, Congressman Frank Lawler was elected two years ago by a majority of only 16. He was a faithful exponent of tariff reform principles in congress, and made his second campaign upon the platform of which the president's message was the text. He was elected by 5,000 majority this time.

In Connecticut and New Jersey, the largest manufacturing states in the union in proportion to population the democrats were successful. The tariff issue was the sole question discussed in these states.

In Massachusetts the largest democratic gains were made in the principal manufacturing cities, as evinced by these figures, which are gains, not majorities:

Brocton	14
Fall River	912
Haverhill	121
Holyoke	701
Lawrence	457
Lowell	677
Lynn	123
Northampton	149
Taunton	55
Woburn	64
Worcester	1432

New York was all right on the tariff issue, but local fights in the metropolis, and the strained relation existing between the friends of Hill and Cleveland defeated the representative tax reformer in his own state.

The cause emerges from the contest stronger than before and the issue will be sharper in coming conflicts. Tariff reform is right and ultimately will prevail. The revision which the republicans will be forced to make will only be a step toward reform. The democratic party forced the issue, will keep alive the issue, and will win for the country with the issue.—Toledo Bee.

THE SUN, FOR 1889.

And for the Democracy.

THE SUN believes that the campaign for the election of a Democratic Congress in 1890 and a Democratic President in 1892 should begin on or about the fourth of next March. THE SUN will be on hand at the begining and until the end of the most interesting and importaht political conflict since the war, doing its honest utmost, as ever, to secure the triumph of the Democratic party and the permanent supremacy of the principles held by Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden.

The great fact of the year is the return to absolute power of the common enemy of all good Democrats—the political organization for whose overthrow THE SUN fought at the front for fifteen years, the memorable years of Grant and the Fraud Hayes, and Garfield and Arthur.

It is the same old enemy that Democrats now confront, and he will be intrenched in the same strong position. It has been carried once by brave and hopeful fighting. Do you not believe with THE SUN that the thing can be done again? Wait and see!

The hope of the Democracy is in the loyal efforts of a united press, cherishing no memories of past difference in non-essentials, forgetting every thing but the lessons of experience, and that victory is a duty.

Probably you know THE SUN already as a newspaper which gets all the news and prints it in incomparably interesting shape; which chronicles facts as they occur and tells the truth about men and events with absolute fearlessness, making the completest and most entertaining journal published anywhere on earth; and which sells its opinions only to its subscribers and purchasers at two cents a copy—on Sundays four cents. If you do not know THE SUN, send for it, and learn what a wonderful thing it is to be in the sunshine.

Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free, at Baker & Hall.

HE'S LOADED FOR B'AR.

An Ohio Man Who Is Prepared to Receive the White-Caps.

WEST JEFFERSON, Ohio, Jan. 5.—A few nights ago three or four men visited the homes of J. H. Stone and Clark Silvers, living on Glad run, about five miles from here, and rocked the houses, leaving a White-Cap notice. Thursday night they appeared at Silvers' and roused him by throwing bowlders against his house. Silvers had procured a double-barreled shotgun, and had it loaded for them. When they appeared Thursday night Silvers fired both barrels into the crowd at short range. The loads took effect on one or more, judging from the noise made by the men while fleeing from Silvers' place. Friday morning upon examination the ground was found covered with blood. Stone came in town Friday and procured a supply of ammunition, and says he will be prepared to receive the White-Caps in good shape.

Professional Ignorance

Nothing is more common, nor less true, than for physicians to tell patients in the first stages of heart disease that the trouble is only nervous, etc., and of no account. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing as shown by the great number of people who die of heart disease when its existense is not expected. Take warning. Don't neglect the first symptoms, and if you would avoid sudden death, angina pectoris, etc., take Dr. Miles' New Cure before it is to late. Sold at Baker & Hall's drug store.

COUGH! and COUGH!! and COUGH!!!

What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. J. J. ORR, Druggist.

Are You Taking It?

"Are you taking the F. E. C. Kidney Remedy?" is becoming a common inquiry. The F. E. C. is known to be an honest remedy and is doing a world of good. J. J. Orr sells it.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

THE question has often been asked, "to what does The Century owe its great circulation?" The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that "it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department." In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue throughout the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln history and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

THE SIBERIAN PAPERS,

by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." As is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters. A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons. George W. Cable will write "Strange, True Stories of Louisiana." There will be novelettes and short stories by leading writers, occasional articles on war subjects (supplemental to the famous "War Papers" by General Grant and others, which have been appearing in The Century), etc., etc.

The Century costs four dollars a year, and it is published by The Century Co., of New York, who will send a copy of the full prospectus to any one on request.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proven this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. DIXON & SON, 303 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Senator Holbrook's anti trust bill contains a clause prohibiting any person, firm or corporation selling or keeping for sale any article on which the price or transportation charges has been controlled by trust or combination. Great Scott! Senator, aren't you going to let anthracite coal, kerosene oil or whisky be sold in Michigan? Good bill on general principles; but, my, how this suddenness startles some of the boys!—Lansing Republican.

HOW CAN PARENTS

allow their children to cough and strain and cough and painfully say: "Oh! it is only a little cold," and keep giving them cheap and dangerous medicines, until they are down with lung fever or consumption, when they can be so easily relieved by BEGGS' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP? It has no superior, and few equals. J. J. ORR, Druggist.

Learned Professors Say,

The most serious diseases of the heart, says Prof. Da Costa, may occur without any symptoms. Prof. Trousseau, of Paris, states that death from heart disease is usually caused by congestion of the lungs, liver, stomach or kidneys, from imperfect circulation of the blood. Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is the latest and most reliable remedy for this little understood but grave disease. It has cured thousands of cases. Don't fail to try it. Ask for testimonials. Sold at Baker and Hall's Drug Store.

Used one bottle of Mother's Friend before my first confinement. It is a wonderful remedy. Looked and felt so well afterwards friends remarked it. Would not be without Mother's Friend for any consideration.

A POSITIVE CURE

FOR SKIN DISEASES

OF diseases of the skin there are some 12 or 15 classes, in each class from two to four varieties. These are modified according to the particular condition of the blood, for disease of the skin means disease of the blood. These are either the result of stomach, liver or kidney difficulties, and for a cure depend upon a healthy action of these organs.

MY little boy has been troubled with a severe type of Skin Disease with intense itching and burning which constantly grew worse until his face was covered with scabs. Seeing Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup advertised to cure skin and blood diseases, we tried it, and today our child's skin is as clear and smooth as ever. We believe Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is a positive cure for Skin and Blood Diseases. MRS EDMOND PALMER, 88 Summit St., Rochester, N. Y.

Erysipelas, or St. Anthony's Fire

is the result of an impure condition of the blood, and for a cure depends, primarily, upon the condition of the stomach, liver and kidneys, and, secondarily upon the condition of the blood as manufactured by these organs.

SALT RHEUM

I have been troubled with Rheumatism for years, and Salt Rheum has been nearly all over my body. I have used nearly every remedy but found no relief except from Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I could not lie in bed at night. Have taken ten bottles, and am now a well man. It is truly a great blood purifier. NELSON MOORE, Wolcott, N. Y.

HIBBARD'S RHEUMATIC SYRUP,

containing POKE, BURDOCK, MANDRAKE, QUEEN'S ROOT, and others of the best Blood Remedies, very carefully and scientifically compounded, strikes at the root of the evil and eradicates the disease, whether it is Scrofulous, Rheumatic or Syphilitic Taint. It is a never failing remedy.

A Whole Family Cured

ALPENA, Mich., March 1, 1887.

My wife, and babe fourteen months old, and boy five years old, have suffered with Scrofula or King's Evil, it being hereditary. They would at times break out in sores. I have employed the best physicians, without the least benefit. We have used fourteen bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and to my astonishment we are all well. Words cannot describe how highly we value your medicine.

JOHN MUELLER WEISS, JR., Dealer in groceries and provisions.

Six weeks since I was attacked with Erysipelas, my eyes were nearly closed, my head and face terribly inflamed. Two bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup cured me. E. F. KNAPP, Wolcott, N. Y.

BUBBLE PARTIES.

ONE of the most amusing, as well as easily arranged entertainments for the Holidays, is a "Bubble Party." Twenty or more ladies and gentlemen, enough clay pipes so each will have one, three or four bowls of soap-suds, and, say, half a dozen trifles for prizes, are all that is required, the prizes to be awarded to those who blow the largest bubbles, one of the party to act as referee.

The suds should be of IVORY SOAP, as it gives a clean, white and abundant lather, with an entire freedom from oil or grease; and as the materials of which it is made are so clean and pure, it is not at all offensive to the smell or taste, like ordinary soap.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

OLD SAWS IN RHYME.

Actions speak louder than words ever do,
You can't eat your cake and hold on to it, too.

When the cat is away then the little mice play
When there is a will there is always a way

One's deep in the mud as the other in mire;
Don't jump from the frying pan into the fire.

There's no use crying over milk that is spilt;
No excuse is needed by conscience of guilt.

There must be some fire wherever is smoke,
The pitcher goes oft to the well to be broke.

By rogues falling out honest men get their due;
Whoever is the hardest put on the shoe

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy
A thing of much beauty is ever a joy.

A half loaf is better than no bread at all;
And pride always goeth before a sad fall.

THE GREEK CINDERELLA.

The story of "Cinderella" is very old and has passed through many forms. Perhaps it may be surprising to know that the Greeks told this story to their children many centuries ago. Here is the Greek version:

There were once three sisters spinning flax, and they said, "Whosever spindle falls, let us kill her and eat her."

The mother's spindle fell, and they let her alone.

Again they sat down to spin, and again the mother's spindle fell, and again, and yet again. "Ah, well!" said they, "let us eat her now!"

"No!" said the youngest, "do not eat her; eat me, if flesh you will have."

But they would not; and two of them killed their mother and cooked her for eating.

When they had sat down to make a meal of her, they said to the youngest, "Come and eat, too!"

But she refused and sat down on a saddle which the fowls were covering with filth and wept. Then the youngest, whom they called Little Saddleslut, gathered all the bones and buried them, and smoked them every day with incense for forty days, and after the forty days were out she went to take them away and put them in another place. And when she lifted up the stone she was astonished at the rays of light which it sent forth, and raiment was found there like unto the heavens and the stars, the spring with its flowers, the sea with its waves, and many coins of every kind. On Sunday her sisters went to church; then she, too, arose; she washed and attired herself, putting on the garment that was as the heavens with the stars, and went to church, taking with her a few gold pieces in her purse. When she went into the church all the people were amazed and could not gaze upon her by reason of the brightness of her garments. When she left the church the people followed her to see whither she went. Then she filled her hand with money from her bag and cast it in the way. Then the crowd scrambled for the coins, and left her alone. And straightway she went into the house and changed her clothes, and put on her old things, and sat down upon the saddle. Her sisters came home from church and said to her: "Where are you, wretch? Come and let us tell you how there came into the church a maiden more glorious than the sun, who had such garments on as you could not look on, so brightly did they gleam and shine, and she strewed money on the way." Look, see what a lot we have picked up! Why did you not come, too? worse luck to you!"

Next Sunday they went to church again, and she did the same. Then they went another Sunday, and just as she was flinging the money she lost her shoe among the crowd and left it behind her. Now, the king's son was following her, but could not catch her; and he took and found her shoe. Then said he to himself: "Whose ever foot this shoe exactly fits, without being either too large or too small, I will take her for my wife." And he went to all the women he knew and tried it on, but could not manage to fit it. Then her sisters came to her and said: "You go and try it on: perhaps it will fit you."

"Do not make fun of me," she said. However, she went down, and when the prince saw her he knew the shoe was hers, and said to her: "I will take you to wife."

"Do not make fun of me," she answered, "so may your youth be happy!"

"Nay, but I will marry you," said he, and he took her and made her his wife. Then she put on her fairest robes. When a little child was born to her the sisters came to see it. And when she was helpless and alone they put her into a chest and carried her off and threw her into a river, and the river cast her forth upon a desert.

There was a half witted old woman there, and when she saw the chest she thought to cut it up (for firewood) and took it away for that purpose. And when she had broken it up and saw some one alive in it, she got up and made off. So the princess was left alone, and heard the wolves howling, and the swine and the lions, and she sat and wept and prayed to God, "Oh, God, give me a little hole in the ground that I may hide my head in it and not hear the wild beasts," and he gave her one. Again she said, "Oh, God, give me one a little larger, that I may get in up to my waist." And he gave her one. And she besought him again a third time, and he gave her a cabin with all that she wanted in it; and there she dwelt, and whatever she said, her bidding was done forthwith. For instance, when she wanted to eat she would say, "Come, table, with all that is wanted! Come, food! Come, spoons and forks, and all things needful," and straightway they all got ready, and when she finished she would ask, "Are you all there?" and they would answer, "We are."

One day the prince came into the wilderness to hunt, and seeing the cabin he went to find out who was inside; and when he got there he knocked at the door. And she saw him and knew him from afar, and said, "Who is knocking at the door?" "It is I, let me in," said he. "Open, doors!" said she, and in a twinkling the doors opened and he entered. He went up stairs and found her seated on a chair. "Good day to you," said he. "Welcome!" said she, and straightway all that was in the room cried out, "Welcome!" "Come, chair!" she cried, and one came at once. "Sit down," she said to him, and down he sat. And when she asked him the reason of his coming, she bade him stay and dine.

He agreed, and straightway she gave her orders: "Come, table, with all the covers," and forthwith they presented themselves, and he was sore amazed. "Come, basin," she cried, "come, jug, pour water for us to wash! Come, food, in ten courses!" and immediately all that she ordered made its appearance. Afterwards, when the meal was ended, the prince tried to hide a spoon, and put it into his shoe; and when they rose from table, she said, "Table, have you all your covers?"

"Yes, I have."

"Spoons, are you all there?"

"All," they said, except one which said, "I am in the prince's shoe."

Then she cried again, as though she had not heard, "Are you all there, spoons and forks?"

And as soon as the prince heard her he got rid of it on the sly and blushed.

And she said to him "Why did you blush? Don't be afraid. I am your wife."

Then she told him how she got there and how she lived. And they hugged and kissed each other, and she bade the house to move and it did move. And when they came near the town all the world came out to see them. Then the prince gave orders for his wife's sisters to be brought before him and they brought them and he boiled them in pieces. And so thenceforward they lived happily, and may we live more happily still.

Fiction of Today.

For some time past the fashionable tendency has been largely in the direction of a conscious, not to say willful, thinness of narrative material. The old merits of fullness and "body"—virtues apparently hereditary in that lineage of robust minds which can be traced backward without a break from George Eliot to Fielding—have been growing rarer and rarer. In their place the art of making a very little go a very long way has been carefully cultivated by undoubtedly dexterous hands. Fiction has almost reached the point of sheer bravado in some developments of the "society" novel, notably a species grown in American soil, or rather in New York conservatories and forcing beds, and distinguished by an elaborate triviality which no amount of cleverness can render other than vapid. Such a fashion can never in the nature of things be long lived. Those miracles of inexhaustible nothingness, in which the tiniest rivulet of incident just trickles across a continent of dialogue, cannot long be interesting, even as miracles, in an age to which the miraculous does not make a permanently successful appeal.—Fortnightly Review.

Good and Bad Taste.

Don't put your initials or your name over everything you possess, so that people who pick up a fork or look at a pillow sham will read, "John Brown, my property." It's all right to mark things of use in some such a way, but not things of beauty, and if you must so mark them make the letters small and put them on the back of the objects, not the front. The woman who wears her initials in diamonds on a brooch is vulgar. The man who prints his monogram on his china does a useless thing, for nobody is going to run away with his dishes. Don't be too showy and complex. Don't make your napkin rings too emphatic and obtrusive. Put flowers on the table, but place them loosely or in glass, for if you put them in china or any other opaque substance you conceal half their beauty—namely, their stems. Don't entirely cover your wall with pictures, and when you have a picture don't let the sheriff kill it with a big gold frame of bronze or something that will relate to the picture on the wall, and not make it stand out like a big, shiny spot of color and gilt gingerbread.—Decorator and Furnisher.

A Panic Stricken Atlanta Man.

An Atlanta man had a very thrilling experience the other day. He had occasion to go a short distance up the Georgia Pacific road, and was thinking of the late accident of Nitkapack creek, as he looked out of the window on the trees and bushes flitting past. Suddenly, just ahead and coming rapidly toward the train on which he was, the man saw another passenger train come flying around a curve in the road. He jumped from his seat and started for the door. Remembering his overcoat, he turned back and caught the coat from the back of the seat. "Look out for a collision!" he yelled, as he started toward the door. Everybody jumped from their seats and made a wild rush for the door. As the excited man had his hand on the door-knob there was a rushing sound outside, and the approaching train dashed harmlessly by on the Western and Atlantic track, running parallel to the other. The man sank pale and gasping upon a coal box near the door.—Savannah News.

"Nym Crinkle."

In this great metropolis there is no more interesting personality than that of "Nym Crinkle," who is known in private life as Mr. A. C. Wheeler. He is a slender, well made man above the average height. He has nervous hands, an aristocratic head, and eyes full and blue. His gray blonde hair and mustache testifies to his forty years. Mentally, he reminds one of Robert Louis Stevenson. There is the same fascinating facility in picturesque phrasing, the same love of dainty argument, and fine spun analysis in quaint lines of thought. Socially, Nym Crinkle is gentle; his cruelty is all in his pen. Wit, poet and cynical philosopher, he is anything in appearance but a journalist. Instead of growing thinner, his writing gets broader and better as he gets older.—Current Literature.

Black Stockings.

As it is so fashionable for both children and grown folks to wear black stockings, it is well to know how to wash them so they will not fade. Both cotton and woolen should always be washed before they are worn. Lay them all night to soak in cold water. Wash them next day by themselves in two waters, warm, but not hot, the soap being previously rubbed into the water so as to form a lather before the stockings are put in, and mixing with the first water a tablespoonful of gall. Then rinse them, first in lukewarm water, until the dye ceases to come out and the last water is colorless. Stretch them and hang them out immediately in the air to dry as fast as possible.—National Stockman.

To Cure Frost Bites.

A splendid cure for frost bites is a solution of alum and water, strong as can be made. Hold the frosted flesh in the solution till the frost is drawn out. This you will know easily, as the flesh will look wrinkled as one's hands do on wash days. You will feel no more inconvenience from that frost bite.

The following passage occurs in a notice recently posted on the court house door by a constable of Wicomico county, Md.: "I have seesed and took into execution, a'cordin to law and iniquity, the following aforesaid property."

At a western church fair a device for getting up a testimonial to the pastor bore the following legend: "Drop a dollar in the slot and see the pastor smile."

FOR CHILDREN OF ALL AGES.

St. Nicholas for 1889.

PEOPLE who have the idea that St. Nicholas Magazine is only for little children should look over the prospectus of that magazine for 1889, and they will discover that it is for children of all ages, "from five to eighty-five," as some one recently said of it. Indeed, while St. Nicholas is designed for girls and boys, it might almost be called a "family magazine," for the grown-up members of a household will find much to interest them in every number.

The editor, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, calls the next volume an "all-round-the-world year," because it is to contain so many illustrated papers about the world in general—not dry geographical papers, but stories and sketches and tales of travel and adventure by land and sea—and all illustrated by the best artists. The features will include a serial story, "How We Made the Farthest North," by Gen. A. W. Greely, the well-known commander of the Greely Expedition; a serial about Canada, by Mrs. Catherwood, who is writing a serial story for The Century this year; "Indians of the Amazon," by Mrs. Frank R. Stockton. There are many papers about Europe, including a Christmas story of life in Norway, by H. H. Boyesen; articles on Holland and the Dutch, by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge; "The Queen's Navy," by Lieut. F. Harrison Smith, R. N., with illustrations of many of England's finest war ships; "The Winchester School," illustrated by Joseph Pennell; "English Railway Trains," by Wm. H. Rideing, etc., etc. The French papers include "Ferdinand de Lesseps and his two Ship Canals," and there are several interesting contributions on German, Italian and Russian subjects.

Under "Asia," comes "Boys and Girls in China," by Yan Phou Lee (a recent graduate of Yale); "Home Life in the East," by Mrs. Holman Hunt, and a number of papers about Japan. Under "Africa" there is a sketch of Henry M. Stanley, by Noah Brooks, and several stories about Egypt. Australia is not forgotten, nor the islands of the sea, and there are even to be stories of under the sea.

Of course the bulk of the contents will relate to American subjects, as usual. Mrs. Burnett, the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," contributes a story of New York called "Little Saint Elizabeth;" there will be papers describing how the government offices are conducted, papers about athletics, amateur photography, etc. The full prospectus will be sent to any one who wishes to see by the publishers, The Century Co., of New York.

The Graphic recently said of St. Nicholas, "the family without it is only half-blessed."

DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand testifies which it merits, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is reached and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have never used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

WISCONSIN'S SHAME.

Dr. Kate Bushnell Tells of the Infamous Dens of Vice in the Pineries.

The following article is taken from the Chicago News of January the 7th.

A fairly large congregation of ladies assembled Saturday afternoon in Methodist Church block to hear what Dr. Kate Bushnell had to say about the special forms of social vice to be found in the pineries of northern Wisconsin. The subject is one which has occupied a large share of public attention, both because of the enormities charged against those regions and the apparent indifference of the authorities in regard to the matter. Dr. Bushnell is an earnest-looking young woman, whose practical sense and warm sympathy were evident to her hearers from the very beginning of her address.

She was introduced by Mrs. T. B. Carse of the womans' Christian Temperance union, and began by saying that the most difficult task of the social investigator was to lay aside all his prejudices, to study facts, not for the purpose of fortifying himself in preconceived notions, but simply to learn the truth. Mindful of this, she had gone to Wisconsin last May, when duty seemed to demand her services, with a readiness to find that the terrible picture had been overdrawn; that the stories of women imprisoned in dens of iniquity and hunted by dogs when they endeavored to make their escape were frightful exaggerations of the truth. After a month's study of the situation she began to realize that the whole truth had not been told. For four months she traveled about, visiting various localities, interviewing doctors, ministers, and business men, as well as ladies, and, whosoever it was possible, the girls who were or had been inmates of the dens.

She studied the public records to find who were the owners of these places and what was the power that secured them immunity from interference. She boldly makes charges against people and officials of that state that should swiftly bring upon them the vengence of outraged justice if, as she declares, she can at any moment furnish the proof of her allegations. Though the dens are nominally ownod by women, she found that they were really run by a few rich men, who, because of their money, held a respectable position in society. She also learned that Fairchild, former speaker of the house, had borrowed money from one of them, Bill Diamond, who held a mortgage on his property at the time that the former published his denial of these iniquities.

Dr. Bushnell knows that there are stockaded dens where women are imprisoned, for she visited some of them in company with a lady, a minister, and a sheriff, and helped to set some of the inmates at liberty. She has seen the hounds and can testify to their ferocity. She declares that she can prove that girls were arrested at the instigation of a procurer, condemned without evidence to pay fines which they had no money to meet and threatened by the chief of police with jail if they did not leave town at once with the man who was willing to pay their fines. This official who received the money paid for two girls, she asserts, was the chief of police of Green Bay.

Dr. Bushnell says she is certain that the investigation upon which ex-Gov. Rusk's denial of the main facts was said to have been based was never made, James Fielding, the detective, being sent only to Marinette, and that when the keeper of the den there had been made ready to receive him. Col. Casson, the governor's private secretary, assured her that the governor at that very time had many letters in his position testifying to the truth of the stories.

The doctor displayed a sketch of Hugh Doyle's stockaded den near Merrill, Lincoln county, that she had enlarged from a smaller one made near the premises by herself. Its high fences, as she suggested, were well adapted to prevent the escape of inmates and to keep out any officers who might be sent to molest the keepers. She asserts that physicians are implicated in the efforts to shield these fiendish practices, and that business men, to draw money into their towns, have invited keepers to establish dens in their neighborhood.

The charges made by the lady were so startling and so terrible that one would gladly disbelieve them, but her character and her offers of proof make it impossible. When she asserts with emphasis that "Wisconsin is the most infamous state in the union," and declares that a man who had been thro' the most vicious and lawless portions of the far west said to her that its worse locality could not compare in wickedness with that state, we are ready to believe it and to hope that no other land calling itself civilized can rival it in horrors. "Every crime under heaven is committed there without fear," said the lecturer.

At the conclusion of the address the following resolution was drafted by a committee of three appointed by Mrs. Carse, and consisting of Dr. Bushnell, Dr. Fannie Dickinson, and Mrs. C. C. Holt of the protective agency:

"Resolved, That it is the sentiment of this meeting that another occasion has arisen in this country with calls for action as determined and heroic as was the great anti-slavery movement of thirty years ago; and, further that the women of the country are called upon to come to the relief of their sisters who are buried in living graves as are those now being held in the dens of northern Wisconsin. In order to abolish this iniquity and make it impossible ever to find lodgment in our country again we now call upon the women of this whole land to come and help us."

Persons having newspapers, magazines or other good literature to spare are requested to leave the same at the HERALD Office, where the committee will procure the same and transmit them to the lumber camps.

MRS. N. M. SUTTON,
District Superintendent.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Printer's Auxiliary.

A newspaper marked "sample copy" is sent free and no charge can be made for taking it from the office.

Any person who receives or takes a paper from the postoffice, and makes use of t, whether he has ordered it or not, or whether in his name or another's, is held responsible for the pay.

If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice to the publishers at the end of the time if they do not wish to continue taking, otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it on and the subscriber is held responsible until an express notice with arrears is given.

If subscribers move to other places without notifying the publisher, and papers are sent to the former direction they are held responsible.

The courts have decided that subscribers who refuse to take papers from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud; and may be dealt with in the criminal courts.

If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send until payment is made; and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until payment is made in full.

A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reason for its not being taken. Any neglect to do the same makes the postmaster responsible for the payment.

The latest postal laws are such that newspaper publishers can have arrested for fraud any one who takes a paper and refuses to pay for it. Under this law the man who allows his subscription to run for some time unpaid and then orders it discontinued, or orders the postmaster to mark it "refused" and to send a postal card notifying the publisher, lays himself liable to arrest and fine, the same as for theft, etc.

Farmers' Institute at Adrian.

The Farmers' Institute to be held by the County Agricultural Society will come off next week, Jan. 23, 24 and 25. The session will begin on Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 and continue forenoon, afternoon and evening until Friday afternoon. A lengthy program has been prepared and the session will doubtless be well attended and profitable. On Friday afternoon the annual election of the County Agricultural Society will take place. Before the close of each session, when time will allow, the "question box" will be opened and queries made by members will receive attention. Recitations and music will be interspersed. It is expected that papers introducing subjects will be limited not to exceed twenty minutes, so as to give time for discussion. The large room on the first floor of the city hall will be warmed for those who desire to bring lunch. Let the farmers and our city friends turn out, participate in and enjoy the meetings.

We received the official program this morning shortly before going to press. Had it been sent in season we would have gladly published it in full.

Epoch

The transition from long lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

AYER'S ALMANAC FOR 1889.

This book, in twenty-one languages, should be a valuable addition to every library. It will be useful

1. To persons who may desire to refer to dates, the phases of the moon, the time of sun-rise and sun-set, &c., throughout the year 1889, and for occasional reference through many years following. The tables are adapted to various parts of the world.

2. To astronomical students, for its reliable information as to eclipses and the movements of the principal planets.

3. To students of comparative philology. Follow the name of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for example, through the different pamphlets here brought together.

4. To those who are interested in the latest improvements in printing. Read the introductory chapter.

5. To such as would know what to do in cases of accident. See the book of Emergencies, and Ayer's Handy Book at the end of the volume.

6. To students of history. See the events noticed on the calendar pages throughout the book, and observe how this information is made locally valuable; as for instance, in almanac No. 8, intended for India,—and see last cover page of that almanac for a curious table of the Holidays of India, Hindu, Mohammedan, Parsi, etc.

7. To students of religious customs. See the many saints' days and church festivals noticed in the Almanacs herein, intended for Catholic countries—Portuguese, Spanish, &c.

8. To persons curious in regard to the customs of foreign countries. See the numerous tables in the Portugese Almanac (No. 16) and the Days' Names—Dagarnes namn—at foot of the Swedish Calendars (No. 25) for example.

9. To the lovers of a little quiet fun. See numerous items at foot of the calendar pages. If you don't find anything sufficiently funny in English, try the Welsh or Bohemian.

10. To the sick and afflicted of various classes. The book is full of good advice. By its help, you may "take medicine in twenty-one languages," and the remedies it recommends are safe to use, the best of their kind, Ayer's Standard Family Medicines.

11. To the recipient of this volume the book should be especially valuable, because it is unique. It cannot be duplicated and the edition is exhausted.

12. Well, the above specifications are enough. We don't want to make this book seem so valuable that you will put it in a glass case never to be opened.

The Michigan Mortgage Tax Law.

The enactment of this law for the taxing mortgages arose from a feeling among the laboring classes, Grangers, Knights of Labor, mechanics and others, that the capitalists of our state did not pay their due proportion of the taxes, and was passed at their suggestion and request.

The foundation of this theory lid and no doubt does exist, and the theory of the law is correct, but the working of the law is only found to be a hardship and an additional tax upon the borrower, and none at all on the lender.

The rate of interest at all private and public banks immediately rose one per cent; very large amounts were taken from circulation here, to be loaned in other states, where they had no mortgage tax law; trust deeds were taken instead of mortgages and every private bank and money lender, who had a cousin, even, in another state took the mortgage in his or her name; so, in the end the law was successfully evaded and very little income derived from it, while the poor borrower had to pay, and the money lender quietly pocketed the extra one per cent; and now after two years trial there is a very general cry and demand for the prompt repeal of that law, coming from the very men who secured its enactment, and the wisest thing that our Senators and Representatives can do, is to hear and answer the call, and so once more allow our own capital to come back, or, at least remain in circulation in our state.

Capital knows enough and has both the means and the disposition to take care of itself, and any such attempt to interfere with the natural course of commerce or trade will always not only prove frutile, but, as in this instance, disastrous. The rules and laws of commerce, like our common laws, are the slow outgrowth of the wisdom and experience of ages, and any hasty or violent change or interference with them always has, and always will prove only harmful.

Weak eyes and inflamed lids indicate an impure condition of the blood. The best remedy is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It vitalizes the blood, regulates the secretions, and expels all scrofulous humors from the system. Try it Price, $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

TAMMANY DECLARES ITSELF.

Protesting Against a Proposed Change in the Election Laws.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Tammany hall uttered a whoop against electoral reform Friday night. Bourke Cochran sounded the note and every statesman in the new general committee, which had just been organized, took it up. The resolution, which Mr. Cochran supported, ran as follows:

COCHRAN.

"While we regard the electoral system of the state of New York as the most perfect that has ever been devised, the Democracy of this city should be ever ready to cooperate in any effort to improve it; but we believe that any attempt to alter it or to tamper with it should be carefully scrutinized and cautiously approached. We hold secrecy to be an essential feature of the ballot, and we earnestly protest against the enactment of any law which would substitute for secrecy a mere promise of secrecy. We protest against the adoption of any system which will permit the ballot of the voter to be marked by any person or even touched for the sole purpose of depositing it in the ballot-box."

THE GERMANS TO BLAME.

The East African Troubles Due to Teutonic Invasion—The Blacks Repulsed.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The English-African Missionary societies are unanimous in laying the blame of the troubles in East Africa upon the invasion of that territory by the Germans. The reverend Mr. Ashe, who has recently come from Uganda, says that he discovered no trouble whatever among the natives until, upon his return, he reached a point within 200 miles of the coast, where the influence of Germany was felt. From the opinion which prevailed there Mr. Ashe is inclined to believe that the trouble will spread inland and require a stronger force than has hitherto been brought to bear to suppress it. The whole course of the Germans, Mrs. Ashe asserts, has been aggressive, if not brutally oppressive, and he is unable to see anything to avert danger to all of the foreign missions laboring in the interior.

ZANZIBAR, Jan. 14.—The insurgent tribes of the coast have attacked the German mission at Dar-Es-Salaam. A stout defense was made and the blacks repulsed. The losses in killed and wounded were heavy on both sides. There has been continuous fighting for several days at Lindihelwa between boats from the German squadron and the enemy on shore. The latter are in such force that the boats can not effect a landing. The native villages have been shelled.

A BAD SHOWING.

Financial Affairs of Plymouth Church in a Strained Condition.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The financial affairs of Plymouth church, Henry Ward Beecher's old church, it is said, are in a somewhat strained condition, and there are indications that there may be great difficulty during the year in meeting the current expenses of the society and conducting its mission work. This was strongly brought out at the annual meeting Thursday evening. The income during last year was only a trifle over $20,000, and the expenditures exceeded that amount by $2,000. It was currently reported Friday that even in the face of this showing Dr. Abbott, who was paid $6,500 last year, wants his salary raised to $10,000 a year. For Plymouth church, which once raised $8,000 from free sale of its pews, and averaged $[illegible] for many years, the future does not look extremely prosperous in view of these facts.

ONE HUNDRED DROWNED.

Disastrous Shipwreck Off the Coast of Spain—Only Thirty Are Saved.

CORUNNA, Spain, Jan. 12.—A large steamer has been wrecked on the Lisargar Isles, off the coast. She ran on the rocks in a storm and went to pieces. Of the people on board thirty succeeded in getting ashore, the others, 100 in all, were drowned. The name of the steamer has not yet been ascertained.

The initatory steps toward the formation of a law and order league at Wabash, Ind., for the suppression of every kind of law-breaking were taken Thursday night.

AND Demorest's Monthly Magazine.

A WONDERFUL PUBLICATION.

Many suppose DEMOREST'S MONTHLY to be a fashion magazine. This is a great mistake. It undoubtedly contains the finest FASHION DEPARTMENT of any magazine published, but this is the case from the fact that great enterprise and experience are shown, so that each department is equal to a magazine in itself. In DEMOREST'S you get a dozen magazines in one, and secure amusement and instruction for the whole family. It contains Stories, Poems, and other Literary attractions, including Artistic, Scientific, and Household matters, and is illustrated with original Steel Engravings, Photogravures, Water-Colors, and fine Woodcuts, making it the MODEL MAGAZINE OF AMERICA.

Each copy contains a PATTERN ORDER entitling the holder to the selection of ANY PATTERN illustrated in any number of the Magazine, and IN ANY OF THE SIZES manufactured, each valued at from 20 cents to 50 cents, or over $3.00 worth of patterns per year, free.

Yearly subscription, $2.00. A trial will convince you that you can get ten times the value of the money paid. Single copies (each containing Pattern Order), 20 cents.

Published by W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, NEW YORK.

The above combination is a splendid chance to get our paper and DEMOREST'S MONTHLY at a reduced rate. Send your subscriptions to this office.

WEST FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

Quite a number assembled at Mr. Frank Grey's Jan. 11. After Willis Smith had been chosen Secretary pro tem, the minutes of the last meeting were read.

The program was then opened with music by F. Grey and Nellie Smith.

Rec.—"Miss Blake's visit to the White Mountains," Liva Wilber.

Song—Amy Alexander.

Rec.—"Van Winkle and his wife," Nettie Boyd.

Music—F. Grey and Miss Smith.

Song—Miss Alexander.

During recess the questions which had been written by the gentlemen were given to the following ladies to answer:

Mrs. Grey—"Is it profitable for a husband to consult his wife?"

Nettie Boyd—"Whose place is it to bring in the wood?"

Jennie Pawson—"Should a woman have a routine of work for the week?"

Mrs. Boyd—"Does fall ploughing pay?"

Mrs. Crittenden—"Does poultry raising pay?"

Mrs. Smith—"How many beaux should a young lady have at one time?"

Tina VanValkenburgh—"Ought a woman to neglect society to attend to home duties?"

Nellie Smith—"Should women vote?"

Mrs. Doty—"Which is the greater nuisance, the mosquito or the fly?"

Mrs. Wheaton—"Should a lady have a pocketbook of her own?"

Mr Grey's place was named the "Musical home."

After being favored with more music by Mr. Grey and Mrs Seaman, the club adjourned to meet again in four weeks at Mr. J. F. Smith's.

The Russell Steam Laundry.

The Jackson Steam Laundry at 131 West Cortland street has been purchased by E. E. Russell, of Tecumseh, and A. D. Haight. The latter gentleman for two and one-half years past superintendent of the Palace Steam Laundry at East Saginaw. The new proprietors are thoroughly experienced in their work and will run the establishment, which is the only steam laundry in the city, in first class shape. No Chinese labor! A new feature will be that of mending all torn or ripped garments, sewing on buttons, etc., free of cost to the owner. Goods called for and delivered. Branch offices at Hitchcock's grocery, corner of Blackstone and Trail streets, and at Ruston Bros., 223 East Main. All orders left at either of these places will receive prompt and careful attention. The laundry, under the new management will be finely equipped, and it is the intention of the proprietors to do a class of work that will make it very popular. The change takes place to-morrow morning. Send in your orders by telephone or otherwise.

The above is taken from the Jackson Patriot. Orders by their Tecumseh patrons may be left at Jones & Hazlett's clothing store.

ANDERSON & CO.

Parties who have contributed provisions and fancy articles for the Library association entertainment are requested to leave them at the opera house as soon after one o'clock Friday afternoon as possible.

We thought the measles had all left this vicinity but two weeks ago Jas. F. Miller, of Raisin, came home from Adrian college and his merry Christmas was spent with them. He has recovered and started back to college Monday.

We are indebted to A. R. Pardington for a copy of the first annual report of the M. E Hospital, of Brooklyn, N. Y., which gives a full resume of the growth and present condition of that institution

We are indebted to Frank Potter for a copy of the Fremont Daily Tribune of Jan. 1st. which is a mammoth illustrated 12 page edition, showing their growth of the past year. These booming western towns believe in the utility of printer's ink, which is one of the chief causes of their wonderful progress.

A late number of the St. Paul Pioneer Press contains a list of new railroad companies formed in Dakota during the past year, among which is the Whitewood & Wyoming. On looking over the list of directors for that road, we found the name of Fred Eccles among them. We have come to the conclusion that the west is the place to get rich, and if Fred will send us a pass over his road we would have a strong inclination to "go west and grow up with the country."

This soft weather is bad for the pork market.

Col. Church of Detroit was in town last Saturday.

Last Saturday was an old fashioned big day for trade.

M. W. Goodrich of Dundee, spent last Sunday with his old friends.

Born, at Cairo, Ill, Jan. 5th, 1880, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wiley, two sons.

The Philadelphia Times Almanac for 1889 is at hand. It is one of the most useful compendiums of statistics we have seen.

Good music will be in attendance at the opera house Friday evening. Admission free. Sandwiches and Coffee 10 cts. Ice cream and cake 10c.

John Hialey has disposed of twenty-five cutters already this season and he is putting up another big lot preparatory for a run of sleighing.

While at the opera house Friday evening dont fail to step in and see the museum. It will cost but a trifle and will benefit the library association.

Mrs. Jas. B. Colvin of Raisin, has been very sick for the past week, but her symptoms are much more favorable this morning, and her recovery seems assured.

A big load of Tecumseh Masons, some sixteen in number, visited the Clinton Lodge Saturday evening. They were right royally entertained, according to the usual custom of the Clinton fraternity.

Richard Caldwell has rented a part of Kyle's shop, the old Cummins carriage factory, and is putting up a lot of his Common Sense racks. This rack, if the sale is pushed, is destined to grow into an extensive business.

Next Sunday morning, Jan. 20th, at 10:30 the pastor of the Universalist church will give a sermon on "Living, not by Bread Alone." Text, Matthew 4:4. In the evening at 7 o'clock the third discourse of a series. Subject—"The Scope of Christ's Purpose." The public invited.

La Pointe, the Deerfield small-pox patient, died Monday, and more new cases are reported at that village. The disease seems to be spreading despite the precautions taken. The young lady who was sick with the disease, at Dundee, died Sunday afternoon, and was buried Sunday night.

The Library Association will give an entertainment at the opera house, Friday evening, Jan. 18. Doors open at six o'clock. Music will be furnished by the orchestra. A choice lot of fancy articles will be disposed of at private sale until 8:30, any remaining at that time will be sold at auction. Sandwiches and coffee 10c. Ice Cream and Cake 10c. The museum will be open the entire evening. Admission to the opera house free.

We have received Blake's tables of weather predictions for 1889. These tables have proven to be very accurate heretofore and the farmers of the states west of the Mississippi have placed much reliance upon them. They predict a universal and lengthy drought in Michigan covering the months of May, June, July and August. Farmers in this latitude had better prepare for a hot, dry season.

The ladies of Tecumseh W. C. T. U. will meet at Mrs. P. C. Temple's for the regular monthly sewing society, on Friday, Jan. 25th. Business meeting at 2 o'clock, P.M. All ladies interested in temperance work are cordially invited to join this branch of an organization whose influence is world-wide, and which in its forty departments of charitable and evangelistic work seeks only the glory of God, and the highest good to humanity. All gentlemen also who wish to aid in this work will be welcomed to supper from 5:30 to 6:30. Tickets, 10cts.

A minstrel show always draws in Tecumseh and Monday night was no exception. Stevens and Rice company played to a big house and their performance was above the average being different from the usual stale minstrels programe. Roller-skating tumbling, juggling and horizontal bar work formed the principal part of the entertainment and was the best ever seen in the village. The burlesque on "She" was great and would have made Rider Haggard had he seen it—(Excuse us for this last clause.)

Reading for the fireside of the most attractive and varied kind is afforded by "Peterson's Magazine" for February. The numerous wood-illustrations are all of exceptional merit, and the steel-plate, "The Last Day at Home," is a very beautiful picture. The opening story, "Lost and Found," is capitally illustrated, and the episode of the little wandering maid and her boy deliverer is well told. The two serials are among the best any magazine can offer. Edgar Fawcet has never written a more thrilling novelette than "The Murder in Layfayette Place," and "Nicholas Cleever's Money" is fully as interesting in an entirely different vein. The short stories and poems are every one worth reading, and the fashion and household departments are at their very best.

Jas. Heck went to Jackson Tuesday.

El. Hand commenced gathering his ice crop last Monday.

Miss. Clara Waldron is home from the Normal.

Ernest Gamble is taking his "off time" at home this week.

Scott Gunderman of North Hector, N. Y. is visiting friends in Tecumseh.

Wm. Chatterdon of Elkhart was visiting relatives in town last Saturday.

Dr. J. D. Alverson has a card on the eighth page to which we invite attention, call and see him.

Restoration and increase of pension has been granted to Mr. James A. Parker, of Adrian, and Mr. Theron J. Hills, Devils Lake.

Mrs. Henry Crane went to Chicago last week and will reside there in the future, as her husband makes his head-quarters in that city.

A new chime whistle on Brewer's foundry remind the men of the lapse of time. It was patterned after the one on the Lake Shore engine No. 3.7.

Spayde Bros have been putting some additional shelving in their store, which enables them to carry a larger stock of goods and still display them to good advantage.

Mr. J. S. Hendryx who has been very sick is much better and in a fair way to recover. His sickness was inflamation of the lungs and for a man of his great age, 88 next May his recovery is very remarkable.

Geo Adamson has returned from Ann Arbor, where he went to consult Prof Frothingham about his eyes. He is now taking a course of home treatment and believes that he will be much benefited.

Mr. Welcome Sherman died suddenly last Sunday at the home of Jerome Cleveland, of heart trouble. The funeral service was held Tuesday afternoon and was numerously attended by friends and relatives.

"Ryal" Miller and a tramp were transported to the county seat yesterday and will reside with Sheriff Baldwin for 20 and 60 days respectively. The former absorbed too much kill-em-quick, and the latter absorbed an axe from a hardware store.

Norman Mattison was called to Concord, by telephone on Tuesday to see his brother Frank Mattison who resides at Sturges. The two brothers have lived in Mich. since early childhood. Yet they have never seen each other since childhood over twenty-six years ago. Undoubtedly the meeting was a happy one.

The small pox scare is extending to Tecumseh. No cases are yet reported although several cases of varialoid exist in the country around the village. The school board have recommended having the scholars vaccinated and it is being complied with in the village in majority of cases. The board of health have appointed Dr. Catlin to vaccinate children, whose parents are unable to pay for the operation, free of charge.

The National Theatre closed a four nights engagements here Saturday evening, playing Hazel Kirke, Inshavogue, Lady Audleys Secret and Galley Slave. The company is composed of good material and showed themselves at home in comedy and tragedy. The Foresters made a decided hit in their specialties. The audience each night was not large, although the price of admission was cheap. They put in this week at Adrian.

MACON GRANGE.

The contest among the members of the Macon Grange is proving to be quite interesting. The fourth and last of this series will take place on Saturday, Jan. 19, at 7 o'clock P. M. The jury is requested to be present and give their verdict at the close of the entertainment. The social and dinner to be prepared for the winning class will be held on Saturday, Jan. 26, at 10 o'clock A. M. The officers elect for this year will be installed upon that occasion. Let the members all turn out. A good time is expected.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

Everything is progressing finely once more.

We are pleased to welcome the return of our former schoolmate, Miss Maggie Spafford.

Skating parties followed by oysters and refreshments at VanAntwerp's are all the rage at present.

Miss Anna Bailey gave a very interesting discussion on the subject "Music," Monday morning.

Tuesday morning we were favored with some excellent vocal music by Miss Grayson. She received a hearty encore to which she responded. Oscar Bills was then called upon for the Mocking Bird which he rendered, but asked to be excused from responding to the encore.

The Democratic State Convention has been called to meet on Thursday, Feb. 28th, at Grand Rapids. Lenawee county is entitled to 26 delegates.

The Michigan Almanac is at hand. Price only twenty cents. It is fully up to the standard of previous editions and is worth three times the money.

The Queen of Corea, it is said, "lives in veiled seclusion and smokes cigarettes." All cigarette smokers should live in veiled seclusion, but they don't.

Prosecuting Attorney Morgan's annual report to the attorney general shows that 363 criminal cases were tried in Lenawee county last year as against 266 in '87.

Even the sanctity of a church has no terrorizing influence on a thief. Last Sunday morning Lynn Miller, of Medina, hung up his overcoat in the vestibule of the Cong'l church, and while the gospel was being preached some one stole a good pair of gloves from said overcoat.—Morenci Observer.

The New York Sun has discovered that the real author of the now celebrated maxim, "Public office is a public trust," used by President Cleveland, is Hon. T. M. Cooley, of this state. He wrote it in a legal article published many years ago. Which causes an exchange to remark that "all good things come from Michigan."

The Odd Fellows of Adrian met in their new hall for the first time last week. It is a hand-some two story structure known as the Clark Memorial Hall, and is the outcome of the liberal bequest of the late E. L. Clark, who directed the establishment of a building to be used as a public library, and designating that $5,000 be used to purchase a library for the general public. The building is nearly completed, the first floor leased for a term of years and the society out of debt, or nearly so. The books have not yet been bought.

Mayor Kaiser has received a communication asking what Adrian would offer to have the New York National-American Non-Magnetic Watch & Case Company located here. It is a new enterprise, with a capital stock of $500,000, and the officials are now looking about for a suitable location, wherever the proper inducements are extended. The company will start up with a capacity for turning out 150 watches, and from 150 to 200 cases per day, with a prospect of soon manufacturing 1,000 watches and cases per day.—Adrian Times.

While a hunting party composed of seventeen young Addisonians were traveling through the woods west of town Tuesday afternoon one of the boys accidently stumbled over a deer's antler, which although considerably broken and wasted by long exposure to the elements still measures four feet in length and is an interesting relic. It was found in a swamp on G. T. Fisk's place, suggests something of the formidable appearance which the monarch of the forest whose head it graced must have presented.—Addison Courier.

LIBRARY ENTERTAINMENT.

The Library Association will give their entertainment, which has been in course of preparation for some time to-morrow (Friday) evening, Jan. 18th at the Opera House. Coffee, sandwiches, ice cream and cake will be serve from 6 until 8 o'clock for a small fee. After supper several other attractions will be presented among which will be a pantomime, and a museum, also an auction sale of fancy articles. S. P. Hosmer and Will Hayden will have charge of the museum, which is all that need be said on that point. The arrangements are in the hands of efficient committees, and all who wish to spend an enjoyable evening and help the Library fund will find this a good opportunity to gratify their wishes. We hope to see a large turn out. It will be the first entertainment given by the Association this winter and let us make it a rouser.

One of the chief attractions will be a dime museum. Here is a list of the natural curiosities it will contain:

Raphael's Angels, Frances Cleveland's lap dog in Grover's collar, Pocahontas' Slippers, Sleeping Beauty, Strange Twins, The man who loves his mother-in-law, Uncle Tom, Aunt Cloe, Eva, Simon LeGree, Miss St Clair, Fremont's Bugler, Two Headed Girl, Grecian Type of Beauty, Light of Other Days, Chicago Girl, Zulu Courtship, Indians, Cowboys, Lively Artist, Bones of a Spaniard.

Also a large and valuable collection of antiquites collected from north to south and east to west. A genuine nigger minstrel will be on hand to entertain the tired and sick members of the audience.

UTE BILL'S PARTNER.

Half way up the mountain which overshadows Cheyenne canyon is a rude log cabin of only two rooms.

Many years ago, when reports of the finding of gold drew men from every state in the Union, there appeared in this grand but desolate canyon a man by the name of Rivers—Stanley Rivers, he said—who at once proceeded to erect a cabin for himself. This completed, he kept well within its walls when not actually engaged in prospecting. He located his claim and went about it as readily as an old miner.

The little town of Colorado Springs, four miles distant, was often visited by the miners when they had accumulated a little dust, but Rivers had never accompanied them on these occasional sprees, although they had often urged him to do so.

A man in a mining camp who does not drink is considered, as a general thing, beneath the notice of the average miner, but it was not so in this case. Here he had the confidence and respect of the rough men, gathered around him, and, by his gentle ways, boyish face and pleading blue eyes, had won every man over to his side.

They no longer urged him to go with them; they went, and respected him. There was not a man in all the camps around who would not have taken the part of the "tenderfoot," as they jocularly called him. And not only that, he knew it.

His past was a blank, and he mildly resented all efforts to reveal it. On one occasion Ute Bill had pressed him too closely on the subject, and he reproved him by saying:

"Bill, I think you are a friend of mine, but I would rather have you throw me down that shaft of yours than ask me to tell you my past life. It is too painful."

If the boys could have seen Bill then; if they could have looked upon him as he stood abashed before this slender, pale looking young man; he, who had killed his man; this "Indian chewer," who had come out ahead in a hand to hand fight with a bear; this same Ute Bill, who figured as a desperado in the country round for a hundred miles, they would have wondered if he had suddenly taken leave of his senses.

But they were alone, and in an humble voice he said:

"Beg yer pardon, Mister Rivers, I didn't mean to hurt yer feelin's. I hev kinder taken a liken to ye, a sort of fatherly interest, and if ye say the word we'll be pards."

The word was said, and great was the surprise in camp when the new partnership was announced the next day. What had come over Bill? Was he going to reform? It was a seven days' wonder, but gradually died away until it was no longer an attraction to see Bill's six feet of muscle and brawn towering head and shoulders above his delicate looking "pard" as they prospected the country.

One day in their wanderings they found they had nearly reached the summit of the grand old peak at whose base flowed the waters of the San Juan creek, when Bill suddenly uttered an exclamation of amazement.

"Look here, pard, we've struck it this time; chunks of it!"

Rivers, who had been patiently clipping specimens off the ledges which jutted out here and there, hastened to his side and looked. Bill had a piece of dark looking rock in his hand, and was turning it excitedly over and over, his eyes glowing like stars in his intense excitement.

The news spread like wildfire through the camp. All the miners were half crazy over the find, and deserted their old claims to search for new ones. There was no doubt of the vast wealth that lay in the mine which Bill and Rivers had opened. It was a settled fact that the men had more money than they could ever realize beaming down on them as the mining ore should be turned out.

As the two men were lying on their rough beds in the little cottage they talked of the future and its grand prospects. Bill was full of enthusiasm, and pictured in glowing terms his highest ambitions, to be realized when he should count his thousands.

He would be a congressman. What thrilling speeches he would make. He would have every word of them printed in the newspapers. He would own a fast horse, and the "boys" should have all the drinks they wanted; they should not go dry while he was on top of sod. And he stopped suddenly and looked at his companion.

"What's yer lead, ole pard? Will yer hang onto yer dust, or spend it like yer got it?"

For a moment Rivers was silent.

"I dare not think what disposition I shall make of it. I will probably go back east. My plans are not definitely settled," he finally answered. So the subject was dropped.

Bill knew the quiet, retiring man at his side well enough to know all inquiries to be fruitless. So he turned over, and, after a few more words about the work of the morrow, he fell asleep.

When the morning dawned Bill was up and stirring. Rivers slept late, and at last Bill thought he had better awaken him. As he shook him in his rough way he noticed the bright spots on Rivers' cheeks and his short, irregular breathing.

"It is all right now, Lillian," murmured the sick man, tossing uneasily; "it's all right now. I've got the money to keep you where you should be." So tenderly, pathetically came the words that the rough miner brushed away the tears as he listened to the hidden story of his "pard's" past life. He told it all in his delirium, and seemed to live the long years over; how he had loved this delicate girl, reared in luxury and ease, and when he lost the fortune he had so slowly accumulated he dared not tell her of his love. He would not ask her to share his poverty and hardships. He had come away and staked his life and love in the search for gold, and found it. Yes, now he could clasp her slender hand in his and give her all the riches he possessed in return. Over and over again he called her name.

Bill softly stroked the brown hair from his forehead, and as he did so Rivers said: "It is so soft—her little hand—it rests me to feel it on my head." And he lapsed again into a restless sleep.

"Durn that big paw!" said Bill, looking at his rough, brawny hand, and then at the white forehead on the pillow. "And ther ain't a woman's hand in the camp to fix things easy for him. I'd give the hull bizness if he was only out of this mess."

But before two hours had elapsed there was a doctor from Colorado Springs bending over the sick man, and by the bedside sat a pale, slender girl, watching with intense interest every motion and word of the patient, and soothing him with her little hands holding his. She came with the doctor. Bill stood inside the door and looked like a bashful schoolboy in the presence of this stranger, who seemed to be taking his place and caring for Rivers when he ought to be doing so. But he asked no questions, and waited for the doctor's answer.

"Just keep the camp quiet, Bill, and Miss Lancaster will give the medicine and see to the rest. He is worn out with excitement, and a little quiet, with good nursing, will make things right. If the fever is no better in six hours let me know." And that was all the explanation Bill got from the doctor.

Was she a professional nurse? Bill guessed so. And he thought how nice it would be if he could be sick when Rivers got well.

The camp was still—Bill had ordered it so—and every man asked how the "tenderfoot" was, and about the "gal."

"Durno," was all the answer they got to the latter question, and Bill told all he knew when he said that.

Rivers was in a serious condition, and before the six hours were up a horseman dashed out of camp and after a doctor. It was Ute Bill. He could not stand by and see him toss back and forth in bed. It was too much. He wasn't used to it. The doctor had to make another trip—Bill said Rivers was worse.

When the doctor had made an examination of his patient he declared the worst was passed, and left Rivers sleeping quietly under a gentle narcotic.

All this time the girl had not released her watch by the bedside, and she seemed to be soothing away the delirium of the fever in gently passing her hands over the sick man's temples. Her eyes never left off their watch of every movement of the "tenderfoot's" face, and Bill stood by wonderingly, casting a furtive glance at the delicately featured face bending over his pard's pillow, and trying to solve the problem in his mind.

Hours passed, and finally, with a long sigh, Rivers opened his eyes and looked at Bill leaning over the foot of the bed. Then his wandering attention was fixed on the anxious face by his side. There was no glad cry of recognition—it was a mutual understanding. All the warmth of his great love was expressed in the gently whispered name, "Lillian," as he drew her face to his. Resting her head on his shoulders, she told him of the long years of waiting for tidings from him and the hasty letter from Omaha, which she had only received a few days before. She had left home, friends, everything, and gone to seek him in the wild west, she knew not where, but she had found him. And Bill had disappeared.

A few days afterward one of the "pards" gave up his claim to the little cabin, and the minister said the ceremony which linked two lives into a world of their own.

Many and hearty were the rough congratulations. That evening the miners gathered at the little home to say a word of welcome to the beautiful young bride. Even if it were spoken by a big, rowdy miner like Bill, there was a genuine ring of manliness about it, and made her feel quite at home in the wild, picturesque spot so far from every sign of civilization. As the men filed out slowly Rivers conducted his girl wife to the porch of the rude cabin, and, standing close by his side, she sang one verse of "Home, Sweet Home." The tender, sympathetic voice fell on the still night air with a wonderful sweetness, and awakened many old memories in the hearts of the rough, coarse miners gathered there.

Heads were uncovered and there were tears wiped hastily away as Bill led them to the saloon. Was there rough talking and coarse jests now? No. As each man raised his glass a solemn hush fell upon the group, broken at last by Ute Bill's voice. It was choked and unnatural.

"Boys," he said, "I never led but one pard, but I give him up to the best pard a man ever got. And I'll never hev another till I get one like his."

Bill set his glass down and walked away abruptly. It was not long until the saloon was deserted and the camp hushed in the repose of night.

After that Bill did not seem like his old self. He was quiet and solemn. He knew what was the matter, but did not care to let the boys know where the sunshine had fallen on his rough heart and then so suddenly been swept away.

The next spring came, and the doctor made another trip to the little cabin. When Ute Bill went up the next day Rivers led him into the dainty bedroom and gave him a peep at the tiny baby girl that had come that night. The big rough hand closed tightly over the one of a more delicate mold that was laid in his, and the two men understood each other. There were tears in Bill's eyes and an ache in his heart which no one but Rivers should ever know as he turned silently away.

The miners gathered again in the saloon to drink to the health of the mother and child, and hear Bill, now glowing with animation, tell about the baby and its queer ways until they all wanted to see the youngster. A vote was taken, and the camp was to be christened after the baby, and Bill had forgotten to ask her name. Away he went, and soon returned. He looked sheepish and finally came forward and said:

"Boys, yer got me this time. They've called her 'Utella!' as near my name as they could get, and it's my layout. What'll ye hev?"

The glasses clinked merrily, and Mr. Bill beamed with happiness.

Not a day passed that Bill did not visit the cottage, and as the wee babe grew to a toddling, lisping girl, Bill was her chief sympathizer, and the boys in camp at last called him "Uncle Bill."

"There's no harm in me lovin' her," he said one day as he stroked the curly brown head nestled against his breast; "the other wasn't for me." And Rivers glanced up quickly at Bill, and then to his wife, who was sitting by the doorway with her dainty fingers busy in mending a little frock.

"It was before I knew"—and Bill swallowed the big lump rising in his throat and tried to go on, but his voice broke and he trembled in the vain effort to suppress his emotion. Rising suddenly he left the cabin.

That was years ago. The mining camp has disappeared and only the lonely cottage marks the spot where it once stood. Stanley Rivers lives with his wife and dark eyed girl in an eastern city and enjoys the wealth he made in the picturesque spot which now bears the name of Cheyenne canyon. Bill never married; he loved the beautiful girl who sat by the bedside of his sick "pard;" he loved the tiny babe who played upon his knees and laid her soft cheek against his own. And when he died they found a little faded shoe which contained a slip of paper. It only said: "Give all my dust to my pard's baby." And Ute Bill, the roughest miner in the camp, was buried near the little cottage in Cheyenne canyon.—New York Star.

My Poor Back!

That "poor back" is held responsible for more than its share of the sufferings of mankind. If your dog bites a man who kicks it, do you blame the dog? On the same principle the kidneys utter their protest against nervousness, impure blood, and resulting constipation. These force them to do extraordinary work in ridding the system of the poisons which are the result of effete matter retained in the blood. Then the sufferer says the back aches; the kidneys are diseased. "Not yet," but they will be unless the nerves are strengthened, the blood purified, and the constipation removed. These are the causes of kidney troubles, and Paine's Celery Compound removes them quickly. With its tonic, purifying, and laxative effect, it also strengthens the weak kidneys, making it almost infallible in curing all diseases of the nerves and kidneys. If your hopes of cure have not been realized, try Paine's Celery Compound; it gives perfect health to all who complain of "their poor backs." Price $1.00.

F. E. C. WHAT IS IT?

KIDNEY F.E.C. TRADE MARK REMEDY

An interesting letter for Ladies: Hastings Centre, Oswego Co., N. Y., August 26, 1886. F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Dear Sirs—Pardon me the liberty of addressing strangers, but you are indeed benefactors of mankind. Your medicine is a boon and blessing to man, more especially women. It renews the vital principle in the system and takes away the terrible scourge of woman and in the place of weakness brings strength. It is indeed doing good for the afflicted, and no one need to suffer from the terrible drain on the system arising from a disordered state of the kidneys, or from female weakness, that will try this, for it is sure. Hoping you will not consider this letter impertinent, I remain, MARY H. BEEMAN.

That dreaded backache can be Cured. Rochester, N. Y., August 2, 1886. F. E. C. Medicine Co.—Dear Sir—Allow me to recommend your medicine to anyone suffering from backache and kidney trouble. HEALING OF THE LEPER.

LESSON III, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 20.

Text of the Lesson, Mark i. 35-45—Commit Verses 40, 41—Golden Text, Mark i. 42—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.)

35. "And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, He went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed." And so we find Him again at the close of this lesson, after healing the leper: "He withdrew Himself into the wilderness and prayed." (Luke v, 16.) When the Lord sent Ananias to Saul of Tarsus He said concerning him, "Behold he prayeth" (Acts ix, 11); but what are we to say of this man, the Lord Himself, who is ever going to some lonely place to pray, sometimes continuing all night, and sometimes rising up before day? Luke speaks of seven different occasions on which He is found praying (Luke iii, 21; v, 16; vi, 12; ix, 18, 29; xi, 1; xxii, 41, 44), but if ever man prayed without ceasing it was this Man, and if ever man needed not to pray, we would think it was this Man, for He was God manifest in the flesh. Now if He found it necessary to be alone and in communion with His Father in Heaven so much; if He deemed it more important than rest for the body, what conclusion can we come to, but that we are wonderfully unlike Him and not sensible of our need nor very intimately acquainted with our Father in Heaven! A supreme and all consuming desire to know the love and power of God and walk in fellowship with Him as His faithful representatives here on earth would surely send us to our knees and on our faces before God more often and more earnestly; if we have it not, let us seek till we obtain it, that we may be more like Jesus and more in sympathy with Him in seeking lost souls.

36. "Simon, and they that were with Him, followed after Him." Not to pray with Him, but to find Him for those who were seeking Him. It is a practical and pertinent question for those who have found Jesus and are saved by Him, "do I now seek Him and walk with Him that I may be happy, or that I may learn through Him to win others to Him that they too may be blessed?" The last is surely the highest aim, but the self in us is more apt to seek personal blessing than to be a blessing to others. Jesus pleased not Himself, nor sought His own will or glory: oh, to be more like Him.

37. "When they had found Him they said unto Him, all seek for Thee." Seeing that He had power over devils and disease, that He healed all freely and spoke such wonderful words and with such authority, they were irresistibly drawn to Him; but if they had only known who He really was, does it not seem as if they would have worshiped Him in truth? The disciples, not finding Him in the house when they rose in the morning, went out and sought till they found Him. Do we thus seek Him in the early morning?

38. "And He said unto them, let us go into the next towns that I may preach there also, for therefore came I forth." In Luke iv, 43, He says, "I must preach the Kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent." In verses 14, 15 of this chapter it is written that He preaches that the Kingdom of God was at hand, and that they should repent and believe the gospel. The time being fulfilled, He had come to set up the kingdom spoken of in Dan. ii, 44, and elsewhere; these miracles which He wrought were His credentials, as the prophets had foretold (Isa. xxxv, 5, 6; lxi, 1); He must make it known in all Israel, for He came forth from the Father sent by Him as son of David, son of Abraham, according to Matthew's gospel, and as the servant of God, according to this gospel.

39. "And He preached in their synagogues, throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils." Matthew says that He preached the gospel of the kingdom and healed all manner of sickness and disease (Matt. iv, 23). What a kingdom it will be when the devil and all his demons are cast out forever, when the inhabitant shall no more say "I am sick," when there shall be no more death, nor pain, nor sorrow, for He, this same Jesus, shall have subdued all things unto Himself, and the inheritance lost through Adam's sin shall be more than restored through Jesus Christ. Hallelujah! what a Saviour! do let us spread abroad His fame.

40. "And there came a leper to Him, beseeching Him, and kneeling down to Him." Matthew says that it was when He came down from the mountain that this leper came to Him (Matt. viii, 1, 2). Luke says that the man was full of leprosy, and that he fell on his face and besought Him (Luke v, 12). A poor outcast, shut away from home and kindred, full of this most loathsome of all diseases that sinful flesh seems heir to, an utterly hopeless case as far as human help is concerned, doomed to a lingering death by a slow but sure decay of the whole body; he makes bold to come near to this man with the wonderful power, for whether it was by hearing the sermon on the Mount or by seeing or hearing of some of the miracles of healing which Jesus had wrought, he has some way become possessed of such faith in Him that he cries: "Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean!" (Matt. viii, 2; Luke v, 12.) He is sure that Jesus has the power to cleanse him; he has firm faith as to that matter, and so he just casts himself at Jesus' feet, virtually saying: "Lord, if I rise up again a leper, it is because you refuse to heal me, for I believe you are more than man, and can heal me if you only will; so I cast myself on your mercy."

41. "And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth His hand and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean." Five times in the Psalms the Lord is said to be full of compassion, Ps. lxxviii, 38; lxxxvi, 15; cxi, 4; cxii, 4; cxlv, 8; the same word being translated "merciful" in eight other places, the first of which is Ex. xxxiv, 6, where we learn the name of the Lord; and he being full of compassion, could not help having compassion on this leper. He even puts forth His hand and touches him, for He is not afraid; but best of all, He says "I will." O what a thrill of joy indescribable must have gone through and through this poor man.

42. "As soon as He had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him and he was cleansed." With the word came the health, and instantly the man was whole.

43, 44. "See thou say nothing to any man." The reason of this charge and the result of the man's disobeying it is seen in the next verse. "Shew thyself to the priest." Jesus did not come to destroy but to fulfill the law.

45. "Jesus would no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places." This was the result of the man's blazing abroad the matter. Oh, for thousands of such publishers of glad tidings as this leper; then would the Gospel soon be preached to every creature and the glorious kingdom come. We are commanded to tell it to every creature, but from the conduct of Christians generally we might suppose they had received the command given to this leper and were diligently obeying it.

"They came to Him from every quarter." Only let us hold up Jesus in all His loveliness, and people will come to Him today, for He has said, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

RECKITS.

With sunkissed slope the mountains rise,
The plain is veiled in shadowy gray;
To high been paths I lift my eyes,
Who pray know the lowland way.
Men say the risks are steep and straight,
That dangers lurk on either hand;
But oh, the joy to him, elate,
Who from their summit views the land!

The valley, too, they say, is safe,
The roads be broad and smooth enough;
Yet happier the homeless waif
Than the chained mastiff by the door!
Far off they stand and mock at me,
My heavenly hills, serene and good;
Why should they show what may not be,
Why tempt me with unlike blood?

But would I have not weakness my change
Wherein to look, if not to reach?
I sure can thank the outstretched range
That heights there are, still onward beach.
And while I walk these weary ways,
Some one's in paths I only see,
Climbing the hills wherein I gaze,
Receives all good denied to me.

—Ruth Hall in Good Housekeeping.

STORY OF A MEWL.

(The story teller had been journeying along a road when he found himself suddenly cornered by a rifle in the hands of a boy, who took him for a man whom Marvin, the boy's father, was gunning for. The boy was finally convinced that he had made a mistake and the two waited for the boy's father. After he had come up and they had all had some conversation, the traveler was allowed to proceed.)

When I left young Marvin and his "pap" I hadn't a thought that the man who had been shot at would interfere with me, even if he hadn't been driven well out of the neighborhood. Any sensible man when fired upon will take the fact as a hint that he should be going, and I supposed this stranger would go so fast that there was no danger of my overtaking him.

I had followed the rocky trail for a mile and a half, and was descending into the depths of a dark ravine, when a man sprang out of the bushes into the trail and shouted at me:

"Who's you 'un, thar?"

"A traveler," I answered.

"Whar from?"

"Several places."

He came forward, his gun held ready to fire, and when he was near enough to look me over he growled:

"Shoo! you'un hain't he! Him's a coward or he'd gi'n me a show!"

"Are you the man who is looking for Lem Marvin?" I asked as I sat down on a handy bowlder.

"I ar! Whoop! Whar's him! Whoop! Bung his onery pictur', but whar's him?"

"I left him back there about a mile and a half. Did he shoot at you?"

"Him did; yes. Whoop! Him hid behind the rocks and got the drop on me, and him's bullet went through my hat! Look—a—that!"

He threw an old felt hat at my feet, and I picked it up and saw that a piece of the rim had been gouged out by a bullet.

"And mebbe the cowardly him sent you'un to git me off my guard while him skulks up fur another try!" howled the man as he danced around and threatened me with the gun.

"My friend," I answered, trying very hard to be cool, "I never saw Lem Marvin until an hour ago, and I never want to see him again. He's got a son named Davey."

"Yes, him has, bung his onery pictur'."

"Well, Davey stopped me on the road with his shotgun and held me prisoner until the old man came up. He was off hunting for you."

"Whoop! And what did him say when him cum back?"

"Said he had fired at you and missed."

"Whoop! Yes, him fired at me! Him may be right around yere now!"

The man sprang backwards and looked all around him, his gun held ready to shoot, and though I assured him that Marvin had given up the hunt and gone home, he still seemed to believe that my coming was a put up job to assassinate him. While he was whooping and dancing around and threatening I lighted a cigar and settled back for a smoke. This calmed him down after awhile and he stood before me and asked:

"Do you know why him wants to kill me?"

"Something about a mule, wasn't it?"

"Whoop! She was! And it's about that mule why I want to kill he!"

"Well, go ahead and tell me the story, and, by the way, it's a wonder you don't shoot yourself in the foot with that gun. You are the most careless man I ever saw. Put down the hammer and stand it up here and tell me your story."

"And you'un wants to grab it and shute me!"

"Bosh! You are no braver than Davey Marvin!"

"I haint, eh? Whoop-ee! I kin lick the hull Marvin family with my legs and hands tied! Don't go fur to run me down, stranger, or I'll shute."

I smoked away in silence, and by and by he put down his gun and began:

"I had'n mewl. It was seven years ago. He war a mewl to dote on. Thar's mewls about till ye can't rest, but they don't go fur shucks."

"Yes."

"I raised that 'ere mewl from a yearling, I did. I knowed him from top to bottom. He knowed me from head to feet. Whoop! I can't hold myself when I think of it!"

"Go on."

"I had that mewl in the family fur nine years," he continued. "He growed mo' dandy all the time. The old woman sot store by him, and the children sot store by him, and I'd hev gone without whisky to keep he from sufferin'. Whoopee! I'm a-gittin' dangerous! It rises me off my feet to think of what a fule I made of myself!"

"Did that mule have a name?" I asked.

"In course he did! I called him Damascus, and he'd cum at my holler as fur as he could hear it. He was a runnin' mewl. Stranger, that 'ere Damascus could beat greased lightnin' at runnin'! He never lost one outer forty scrub races."

"Well?"

"Wall, one day I was up in these diggins on that mewl's back, lookin' fur a race with somebody, and I got drunk. Whoopee! I want to shed blood when I think of it! Went and got so drunk that I lost my senses! In that condishun this Lem Marvin cum along with an old yaller mewl—a critter as couldn't stand still and look ye in the face—the poorest, meanest, wall eyedest, knockkneedest mewl in all the kentry! Him got me to trade. I kin remember that him told me his mewl was valued at $14,000, and that him could do 150 circus tricks. Whoop-e-e! Stranger, look up and witness a pictur of terror!"

"Go on."

"The fust thing I remember was of gittin' home with that ar' onery beast, and of the ole woman and children a-cryin' out arter the beloved Damascus. Their yells and howls sobered me up a bit, and when I found that I had dun gone and made a fule of myself I fainted dead away! Whoop! Whoop! Stranger, I am dangerous! I orter be tied to a tree!"

"You are all right—what else?"

"Wall, I cum back up yere to git Damascus, and Lem Marvin wouldn't gin he up. Him said it was a fair trade, and the only thing left was to shute he. I've tried to fix the last two years, but luck is against me. Hip! Woof! Stranger, I've got to hev blood or go to pieces! I reckon you'un laid in with the Marvins agin me! Yes, I reckon ye did!"

"I didn't care a copper whether you killed Marvin or he killed you. I don't believe in murder of this sort. Both of you ought to be arrested."

"Hear he! Whoop! Hear he sidin agin me an' wishin' I had been shot!" howled the man as he danced around.

"I don't side against you, though you braggin it on by getting drunk. I say that no man has a right to go gunning for human life. The law ought to make it hot for you."

"Hear he! Jist hearken to he! He's agin me and fur the Marvins! Whoopee! Stranger, I'll gin ye two minutes to pray. I can't let ye live—'deed I can't! When I go home the ole woman will ax me: 'Jim, did ye git Damascus?' 'No.' 'Did ye git Marvin?' 'No.' Then who did ye git? And I'll tell her that I met an onery critter about your size on the road, and dropped him for luck. Stranger?"—

I sized him up for a braggart, and while he was dancing around, I got out my revolver. As he seemed to be drawing the interview to a climax I covered him and said:

"If you move a hand I'll bore you!"

"He-he-heal'he!" he gasped, turning pale faster than a painter could have put it on with a brush.

"Do you want my life?"

"'Deed no, stranger! I wouldn't take it! I wouldn't hurt a hair on your head! I was a fule, stranger—a consarned fule for bluffin' at ye! I was a-doin' it to show off!"

"Shall we be friends?"

"If ye only will, stranger. I like yer looks, and I believe we kin be like brothers. Hurt ye, sah! Why, I'd stand to your back agin the hull world! I was braggin', sah—jist a braggin', and I hope ye won't lay it up agin me. I'll fire off the charge in the gun to prove my words."

He fired in the bushes, and we walked lovingly together for the next five miles. When we parted he held his hand out and said:

"Don't lay it up agin me, stranger. I was powerfully affected by the loss of that mewl, and onless I kin kill Lem Marvin I may never git over it."—"M. Quad" in Detroit Free Press.

How Mr. Bright Was Taken In.

Mr. Bright used to be fond of salmon fishing in the Highlands. One evening he and his party were returning to their inn after a day of poor sport to all except himself—and he had a brace of fine salmon. By the roadside on a heap of stones they passed a wretched looking man weeping, with his hands on his face and all in rags. In answer to Mr. Bright's inquiry he told a piteous tale of starvation at home, a sick child and five hungry children. The tribune put his hand in his pocket, but unluckily had no change. "Never mind, take that," he said, offering a salmon. "It will at least make a good dinner for you once." The sequel was as follows: After washing his hands Mr. Bright was coming down to dinner when a girl happened to be crossing to the larder with a fine fish. "That is my salmon," said Mr. Bright. "I know him, for he was hooked on the outside. Where did you get it?" "Oh, from Sandy," said the simple Scotch lassie, "and he is in the taproom." Mr. Bright, looking rather grim and stern, forced his way into the taproom, where his lachrymose friend sat with a number of cronies taking his "nip," and in full glee recounting his adventure. Nor was he a bit abashed at the stern face of the people's tribune, but had begun a long explanatory statement when the glance of scorn which had electrified parliaments and audiences swept over him. Without a word Mr. Bright returned to his place. Afterward he was not so lavish with his fish.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The Story of "Annie Laurie."

The famous song that is sung by all singers of the present day, I am informed, is a mystery as to the author. I was raised on the next farm to James Laurie, Annie Laurie's father, and was personally acquainted with her and her father, and also with the author of the song. Knowing these facts I have been requested by my friends to give the public the benefit of my knowledge, which I have consented to do. Annie Laurie was born in 1827, and was about 17 years old when the incident occurred which gave rise to the song bearing her name. James Laurie, Annie Laurie's father, was a farmer, who lived and owned a very large farm called Traglestown, in Dumfriesshire, Scotland. He hired a great deal of help, and among those that he employed was a man by the name of Wallace to act as foreman, and while in his employ Mr. Wallace fell in love with Annie Laurie, which fact her father soon learned and forthwith discharged him. He went to his home, which was in Maxwelton, and was taken sick the very night he reached there, and the next morning, when Annie Laurie heard of it, she came to his bedside and waited on him until he died, and on his death bed he composed the song entitled "Annie Laurie."—Chicago Herald.

A Freak of Nature.

At Tunnell Hill, Ills., there is a wonderful freak of nature. D. F. Beauman, proprietor of the Maple Grove stock farm, and one of the largest stock breeders in southern Illinois, has a full blooded short horn cow that gave birth to a two-headed bull calf recently. The heads are perfectly developed, and are on two separate necks. The lusus naturæ has four ears, four eyes, two mouths and two tongues. The heads are well developed in all respects, and it is curious to see them move as if by separate impulses. This double headed freak of nature is sound in body and perfectly formed, and seemingly is hearty and strong.—New York Telegram.

WHAT OR WHO

Is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

A LARGE SILK MILL BLOWN DOWN,

And Hundreds of Operatives, Mostly Girls, Frightfully Crushed and Mangled.

The Debris Takes Fire and Adds More Terror to the Scene—Searching for the Victims—The Storm Blows Down a Building at Pittsburg and Sixty-seven People Are Killed or Injured—Terrible Effects of the Storm in Other Localities.

READING, Pa., Jan. 10.—A cyclone struck this city shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, demolishing a number of buildings, including Grimshaw Brothers' silk mill. In the latter were upward of 200 operatives, who were buried in the ruins. Many have been killed.

When the cyclone struck Reading the Philadelphia & Reading Railway company's paint shop was unroofed, and in less than ten minutes the entire structure was enveloped in flames. Several gas chambers underneath the passenger cars exploded, and four persons were killed and several others badly injured. The killed are: George Schaffer, Sheridan Jones, Albert Laydonberger and John Kohler.

The storm then continued eastward, dealing out destruction in its path. Nine dwellings on North Eighth and Marion streets were unroofed and otherwise badly damaged. The cyclone cut a swath of about 250 feet, and everything in its way was either leveled to the ground or very badly wrecked. The next building in its track was the immense silk mill of Grimshaw Bros., located at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and Mason streets. This building was filled with operatives, and not a single soul escaped uninjured. The structure, which was four stories high and 200 by 70 feet, is a mass of ruins. Not a single brick remains of the beautiful building except the stock and engine-room. The fire department was called out, and 10,000 men, women, and children quickly assembled about the wrecked mill. The cries of the wounded and dying and their friends were heartrending. Willing hands, however, quickly set to work, and at 9.45 o'clock some seventy persons had been taken out. Twelve of these were dead and many fatally injured, those who were less seriously hurt were taken to their homes, while those who received more serious injuries were taken to the hospitals.

Probably seventy-five to 100 escaped or were dragged out by their friends. These victims worked on the upper floors and were thrown near the top of the debris. At some places the bricks were piled twenty feet deep, and underneath were lying human bodies by the score.

While the townspeople, firemen and police were hard at work rescuing the victims of the terrible calamity night fell, but in spite of the darkness and the driving storm the rescuers kept on. In a few minutes a portion of the wreck of the mill took fire, illuminating the ghastly and awful scene.

The work of clearing away the debris at the wrecked silk mill was continued throughout the night without interruption. Thursday morning a large addition was made to the working force and some twelve additional bodies were removed.

READING, Pa., Jan. 12.—No more bodies have been found since Thursday afternoon. The wreck has been thoroughly explored and all bodies have been removed. The official list of the killed furnished by the firm Friday morning is eighteen, as follows: Sallie C. Bickel, 18 years old; Amelia Christman, 17 years; Henry S. Crocker, 23 years (his body will be taken to Connecticut for burial); Sallie Faust, 16 years; Mary Fitzpatrick, 13 years; Tillie Grow, 16 years; Sallie Harner, 14 years; Laura Kershner, 17 years; Eva Leeds, 17 years; Emma Nester, 23 years; John Reber, 23 years (leaves a wife and two children); Ella Reichtnauer, 15 years; Lillie E. Schaffer, 14 years; Sallie Schaffer, sister of Lillie (died Thursday afternoon from the effects of her injuries); Barbara A. Seilheimer, 15 years; Sarah Shade, 17 years (taken out alive, but died after being removed to her home); William Snyder, 23 years (leaves a wife and one child); Sophia F. Winkelman, 22 years.

The number of killed was greatly exaggerated, owing to the confusion and failure of those who escaped to report the fact. Messrs. Grimshaw are positive no others were killed. Many of the injured, however, are in a critical condition, and it is likely some will die.

CATASTROPHE AT PITTSBURG.

Twelve Men Killed and Many Injured by a Falling Building.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 9.—There was an awful catastrophe at 12:30 Wednesday afternoon. The high wind that struck the city at that hour completely demolished the large brick building in process of construction in Diamond alley, immediately in the rear of Weldon & Co.'s store. The building was as far up as the seventh story, and the building is a complete wreck. As it went down it crushed in its fall the barber shop immediately next. The force of the crushing building was thrown against Weldon & Co.'s store, and pushed out the front into Wood street. The whole street in front of J. R. Weldon & Co.'s is full of debris. At least five men were killed and ten to fifteen injured. There were twenty men working on the new building. The rear of all the stores on Wood street as far up as the hat store of Paulson Bros. were wrecked. Six men were in the barber shop; two have been removed alive, two dead and two are still under the debris. There were fifteen printers in the rear of Weldons & Co. on the second floor and many of them were badly injured. As fast as the injured could be dug out they were carried on stretchers to the various hospitals. One man on the top of the new building fell into the basement. His skull was fractured and both legs broken.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 12.—The list of dead at the Weldin store disaster is nearly complete, and it numbers now fifteen, the last one dug out being Michael Carroll, a laborer. It is expected that more bodies will yet be recovered. There are 100 men and fifty teams at work day and night. Four of the injured will undoubtedly die and the remainder will recover. Dr. Reed's body was found yesterday morning. The damage to property is now estimated at $125,000.

The Storm in the West.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Winter began in the northwest yesterday, and lumbermen were made happy in Wisconsin by three feet of snow. The railway people are not so happy, however, as trains are badly delayed. The blizzard visited Michigan, Illinois and Indiana, and was pretty general all over the northwest.

WILLIAMSPORT AND CARLISLE.

Heavy Damages at Both Places and Several Lives Probably Lost.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Jan. 10.—A terrible storm of wind, accompanied by torrents of rain, swept down the West Branch valley yesterday afternoon. Considerable damage was done in all directions, the particulars of which are meager by reason of telegraph and telephone communication being interrupted. In this city the damage was particularly severe. About a dozen houses were demolished, the Mankey Decorative works unroofed and the buildings of the Demorest Sewing Machine company demolished. The damage sustained by the Mankey people will amount to $50,000, and that of the Demorest works $7,000. The brick walls of the foundry department in course of construction, a story in height, 200 feet long and 50 wide, were razed to the foundation. Several persons are reported as having been injured or killed, but this is not confirmed. Much damage has been done to other property in surrounding towns. From Sunbury word comes that the stack of the nail works mill was blown down, ten men buried in the ruins and one or two killed.

Niagara Suspension Foot Bridge Gone.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 11.—The storm raged here Wednesday night with great fury. The suspension foot bridge spanning the Niagara river below the falls was torn from its cables at 8 o'clock in the morning, and a portion of it lies on either bank, while the center portion of it is at the bottom of the river. The structure was cut clean from tower to tower. At Brundage's elevator on the American side of the whirl pool rapids a two-story building was blown into the rapids and swept away. At Battery's elevator, on the American side, Detterick's photograph gallery was swept into the whirl-pool. A part of Manning's elevator, on the American side was swept away and the lower part of the Rapids View elevator is gone. The tin roof of the International hotel was torn off. Several buildings on the reservation have been blown down, and many trees destroyed.

Blew Hard in Ohio.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 11.—Reports from many towns in northern Ohio say that the windstorm of Wednesday did considerable damage to property. At Ravanna, a small foundry was wrecked. At Madison, chimneys and trees were blown down and many windows were broken by the force of the wind. The temperature has fallen steadily. Thus far no loss of life is reported. In Cleveland hundreds of telephone and telegraph wires were blown down and canvas covered delivery wagons overturned. Trees were knocked to earth, insecure roofs and chimneys were demolished but there was no loss of life.

FUNERAL OF EUGENE WETHERELL.

The Husband of the Noted Singer Laid to Rest.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Jan. 12.—Emma Abbott accompanied the body of her husband, Eugene Wetherell, to its last resting place at his old home here Thursday. There was an unusual scene at the station. A great crowd of women and men blockaded the platform, beside which stood two black hearses. Two bodies were expected on the train. One was that of an old lady. The other was the husband of the singer. Miss Abbott was in the rear car. She was the first to get off, and under the direction of the master of arrangements, proceeded quickly to the carriage in waiting. She wore a black dress, over which was a long wrap and her face was completely hidden by a heavy veil. Her maid and private secretary followed, accompanied by M. L. Wetherell, brother of the deceased, and Mrs. Wetherell, his mother, who met the party at Boston. The burial took place Friday.

EMMA ABBOTT.

INCOME OF THE FARMS.

What the Wheat, Corn, and Oats in 1888 Was Worth—An Increase Over 1887.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 14.—The December report of the department of agriculture, which publishes in detail estimates of some of the more important crops, makes the product of corn 1,987,790,000 bushels, grown on 75,672,763 acres, valued on the farm at $677,561,580, or 34.1 cents per bushel, against 44.4 for the crop of 1887, a decrease of 23 per cent., the product of 1887 being 27 per cent. less in volume than that of 1888. The average yield of the commercial belt, or seven corn surplus states, averages 33.2 bushels per acre.

The wheat aggregate is 414,868,000 bushels, grown on 37,336,188 acres, valued at $384,248,030. The average yield, therefore, is 11.1 bushels per acre. The average farm value is 92.6 cents per bushel, against 68.1 cents for the previous crop, a difference due more to foreign than to domestic scarcity.

The aggregate for oats is 701,737,000 bushels, grown on 26,998,282 acres, and valued at $195,424,240. This is 27.8 cents per bushel, against 30 cents for the crop of 1887.

A comparison of aggregate values shows that the present corn crop is worth $31,000,000 more than the previous one; wheat, $74,000,000 more; oats, $5,000,000 less.

Central Inter-State Base Ballists.

PEORIA, Ills., Jan. 14.—The permanent organization of the Central Inter-State league was effected Saturday night by the selection of the following officers: President, Henderson Ridgley, of Springfield; secretary and treasurer, A. M. Brown, of Peoria; executive committee, Fred Wahl, of Quincy; Walter Viele, of Evansville; John S. Lee, of Peoria; E. A. Schaal, of Terre Haute, and Henderson Ridgley, of Springfield. Davenport had no representatives present, and the committeemen will be selected hereafter. The salary limit was placed at $1,200, with a $60-a-game guarantee. A forfeit of $500 is to be furnished by each club as an evidence of good faith in remaining to the end of the season.

Death of Mrs. Jay Gould.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Mrs. Jay Gould died at her home on Fifth avenue at 8:50 o'clock last night. The entire family waited about the bedside for the end to come. Dr. Baldwin said any attempt to prolong life would be not only useless, but even almost cruel. There was nothing to do but watch and wait. Mrs. Gould was too feeble to converse and answered the anxious inquiries of the loved ones about her with a simple "yes" or "no."

The Tennessee Senatorial Contest.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 12.—The Democratic members of the legislature held a caucus Friday night to nominate a senatorial candidate. One ballot was taken, standing: Isham G. Harris, 52; J. D. C. Atkins, 23, John H. Savage, 9; necessary to a choice, 42.

GREAT CONFUSION ON THE FLOOR.

The Senate Organized by Judge Mitchell, of the Supreme Court—Contest for the North Carolina Senatorship—The Situation in West Virginia—Senator Cullom Renominated—Political Items.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 12.—Lieutenant Governor Robertson stood at the door of the senate Thursday vainly seeking admission inside, from the refusal of the auditor of state to call the senate to order, because he said he had no authority, as a lieutenant governor had been elected. Judge Mitchell, of the supreme court, organized the senate, declaring the motion to elect Senator Cox as presiding officer was carried. The Republican minority was protesting at every step, and great confusion prevailed, recalling the divides of 1887. Alonzo Green Smith was elected clerk, and the caucus nominees were all elected. Resolution by Johnson to admit Robertson was ignored by the chair, but was put by Johnson and declared by him carried. The senate then adjourned to Friday.

ALONZO SMITH.

The house quietly was organized by the secretary of state. Caucus nominees were elected. A motion to not recognize Cox as presiding officer of the senate was rejected.

The scene around the senate chamber when the legislature met at 10 o'clock Friday morning, was a mild repetition of Thursday. Col. Robertson, accompanied by Senator DeMotte, of Valparaiso, again made an attempt to enter the chamber, but was stopped by the doorkeeper. Robertson later made another attempt, but was informed by the doorkeeper that his orders were to keep him out. The lieutenant governor remained near the entrance nearly the entire morning. The session was devoted to trivial matters, such as drawing for seats. President Pro Tem. Cox presided without protest from the Republican members. At 1 o'clock the senate adjourned to meet the house in joint session at 2 o'clock and receive the governor's message.

WAITING FOR THE COURTS.

West Virginia Statesmen Doing Nothing Until the Fight on Returns is Settled.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 12.—The senate met yesterday at 2:30 and was called to order by President Price. It was proposed to take a vote for president of the body, but as each member in casting his vote delivered an explanatory speech which gave rise to informal discussion extending to almost every member, it was 4 o'clock when the first ballot was concluded without any election, and the senate adjourned until 2:30 Monday afternoon. The house had a half hour session, at which no business was transacted, and adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

The motion to dismiss the writ of prohibition preventing Judge Guthrie from proceeding with a writ of mandamus against Secretary of State Walker, compelling him to report Kanawha county's vote on governor, was argued before the supreme court yesterday, but the court adjourned without rendering a decision. When this question is settled the Republicans will proceed to organize the senate and the returns will be opened in joint session and the result declared. The Democrats have no hope of organizing the body, and it is believed that Senator Carr, the Union Labor member, will have a walk-over when the time arrives.

FIGHT FOR A SENATOR.

Much Excitement in North Carolina Over the Matter.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 12.—There is no abatement in the excitement manifested in the election of a senator. The hardest work ever known here is being done, and the various candidates—Matt Ranson, S. B. Alexander, T. J. Jarvis, and A. M. Waddell—are all on the ground. The Democratic senatorial caucus will be held next Tuesday night. Ransom's friends assert that he has 65 votes pledged to him, 63 being necessary to nominate. It is said that not only is A. S. Merriman a candidate, but that Charles M. Steadman and Governor-elect Daniel C. Fowle are not averse to the senatorial prize falling their way. Mention is also made of Governor A. M. Scales as a possible candidate.

MATT RANSOM.

Refuse to Surrender the Offices.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 12.—The office-holders of Beaufort county refuse to surrender their offices to their successors who were recently elected. At the election there were two county tickets in the field—both Republican. The Democrats joined in the support of what is known as the Fusion ticket, and the candidates on that ticket were elected, but the old incumbents refuse to vacate. The circuit court has issued a mandamus ordering a surrender of the offices to the newly elected officials. The men now in office, however, say they will not obey this order, and it is likely that some of them will be committed to jail for contempt.

No Cabinet Members Selected.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The Times correspondent says that an old friend who called upon him Thursday Gen. Harrison stated emphatically that he has not yet determined upon a single member of his cabinet; that he will not be forced into making any man a member of his cabinet; and that the names selected will not be known until they are sent to the senate.

Prohibition for New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 12.—The constitutional convention Thursday afternoon adopted by a vote of 166 to 131 an amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors "except cider." A special committee was appointed to consider the woman suffrage amendment.

Governor Merriam Inaugurated.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 9.—In joint convention Wednesday morning the legislature heard the final and inaugural message of the outgoing and incoming governors, and Governor W. R. Merriam was duly installed in office.

Senator Cullom Renominated.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 12.—As a caucus of Republicans Thursday night in the state chamber Shelby M. Cullom was renominated to succeed himself as senator from Illinois.

THEY ARE AT IT AGAIN.

The National Lawmakers Resume Business at the Old Stand.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 9.—The senate yesterday passed the house bill requiring the delivery of special delivery letters whether postage is prepaid or not. Sherman introduced a bill providing a complete system of government regulation of elections for congressmen. By it the president appoints five persons in each state a board of canvassers, and three in each district as electoral boards and they appoint the precinct officers and oversee the count of the votes. The tariff bill then came up. A proposed amendment to put bagging for cotton on the free list provoked a long discussion, but it was finally rejected, as were one or two other propositions.

The house put an end to the dead-lock by adopting the plan of Monday night's caucus, the vote being 120 to 117 to recommit the resolution which was the bone of contention. A number of measures relating to house printing were passed, and then an attempt to get up the Smalls Elliott contested election case from South Carolina developed the fact that filibustering was still the weapon of the minority, and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 10.—As soon as the routine morning business was out of the way in the senate yesterday, the tariff bill was again taken up. Vance's amendment providing that no article in the pending schedule should be taxed at a rate exceeding 50 per cent. ad valorem was rejected. The wool schedule was passed over informally. Aldrich, in answer to a remark of Vest, said the silk schedule had been prepared at the treasury department, and increased the duty on silk wearing apparel from 35 per cent to 60 per cent. A motion to put bituminous coal on the free list was rejected, ten Democrats voting with the Republicans against it—Bate, Brown, Daniel, Faulkner, Gorman, Payne, Pugh, Turpie, Voorhees, and Wilson of Maryland. An amendment was adopted putting a duty on coal or culm such as will pass through a half-inch screen of 30 cents per ton. The duty on jewelry "not otherwise provided for" was increased from 25 to 40 per cent. A few other slight changes were made, and at 5:30 the senate adjourned.

The house wasted the day in filibustering again, lead by Weaver, who kept the house voting on dilatory motions until 3:10 p. m. before he would permit the journal to be read. Attempts to have days fixed for votes on the Oklahoma and Union Pacific funding bills failed, and at 3:30 the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 11.—The tariff bill again claimed the whole attention of the senate yesterday. The rate on cork or cork bark was raised to 30 per cent. ad valorem instead of 25 per cent, and the duty on pearls was reduced to 10 per cent. ad valorem. An attempt to increase the duty on precious stones, cut but not set, to 25 per cent. ad valorem instead of 10 was defeated by a tie vote. The opposition showed that diamonds could be too easily smuggled to make it practicable to collect a high duty. Importers could obtain them at 7 per cent, when the duty was 10. Precious stones, set, were increased from 25 to 40 per cent., and the same was done as to gold watches and watch-cases. This brought the consideration of the bill down to the free list. An amendment to take braids, plaits and laces for hat ornamentation off the free list and tax them 20 per cent. was rejected, on the ground that they could not be manufactured in this country.

Weaver again controlled the house, and with dilatory motions (his purpose being to force the consideration of the Oklahoma bill) completely paralyzed business. When Springer tried to get unanimous consent to fix a day for a vote on that bill, that was objected to by Buchanan, who wanted to see whether one man could rule the house. A resolution to appoint a committee to wait on Weaver and see on what terms he would allow business to proceed was ruled out of order. The house adjourned at 1:40 p. m.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 12.—Fresh fish was the subject of talk in the senate yesterday, but after a long debate, during which Plumb, speaking to his motion to admit fresh fish free, said it was a discrimination in favor of people living along the Canadian border to give the New Englanders their salt free and make the rest of the country pay a duty thereon, the amendment was rejected and the fish subjected to ½ a cent per pound duty. Several paragraphs were passed over informally. The duty on osier and willow was made 10 per cent. ad valorem, and this ended the free list. The senate then adjourned until noon to-day, the attempt to begin at 11 a. m. yesterday having developed but six senators in their seats at that hour.

In the house a disposition to shut off Weaver was manifested. That gentleman began his filibustering tactics by moving an adjournment before the journal had been read. A conference between the speaker and several prominent Democrats had been held at the speaker's desk, and the result was soon seen in rulings against Weaver, which permitted some business to be transacted, Weaver getting in all the obstruction he could. The conference reports on the bills for the erection of a public building at Milwaukee, and the one appropriating $400,000 for a site and to begin a public building at Omaha were agreed to. Upon another conference report Weaver so blocked work that a recess was taken to 7:30 p. m., at which time Kilgore raised the point of no quorum and gave notice that in retaliation against Weaver no private bill could be passed while the present state of affairs existed. The house then adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 14.—In the senate Saturday Morgan gave notice of an amendment to the tariff bill repealing all laws by which goods in transit to or from Canada are permitted to cross American territory free of duty. The section relating to methylated spirits was amended to include other substances for methylating besides wood naptha. The duty on wood pulp was made $2.50, $6, $8 per ton for the three different qualities thereof. Gray offered an amendment admitting free lumber, timber, agricultural iron and machinery for construction and equipment of vessels. The Republicans objected to this, especially as to machinery, though Frye intimated that with machinery left out of the amendment he would vote for it. The amendment was pending when the senate went into secret session, after which it adjourned. The reading of the tariff bill was completed and amendments are now in order.

Weaver "let up" his obstruction in the house, and after the receipt and disposition of several executive documents, a resolution to rescind the rule requiring the house to adjourn at 5 p. m. each day was offered by Randall, and referred to the rules committee, and Weaver said he would cease obstructing the business until the rules committee's report was made. The pension bill was passed, and the conference report on the bill appropriating $800,000 for a site for a public building in San Francisco was agreed to. The consular and diplomatic appropriation bill was then considered and passed, and pending a decision on a point of order against the fortification bill that all the items except one for repairs of fortifications were outside the jurisdiction of the appropriations committee, the house adjourned.

Prince Bismarck's health is again reported vigorous.

Medical Value of Wines.

As a general rule the use of wine is not necessary for young persons in good health, breathing country air and not exposed to over work. As however, life advances and the circulation becomes languid, natural red wine used in moderation, becomes an essential artical and in many cases absolutely necessary, but it must be the pure product of the grapes. And even in the Eastern States the physician meets large numbers of town people, especially women, who cannot digest the food and drinks suited to out-door laboring. In such cases they resort to the beverage of tea which gives rise to a distressing dyspepsia. The wines produced in New Jersey, especially the Burgundy and the Port Grape Wines from Alfred Speer's Vineyards, at Passaic, are the more reliable and the most sought after by physicians and those who have traveled abroad and known what wines are.

ESTATE OF ELIZA LOWRY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 24th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Eliza Lowry, late of said county, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Thomas Lowry, the husband of said deceased, alleging among other things that Simpson Boyd, a half brother and one of the heirs-at-law of said deceased, resides in Ireland in the kingdom of Great Britain, a foreign country, and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Charles Burridge, or some other suitable person, and notice of the pendency of and the day appointed for hearing such application having this day been given to the Consul of Great Britain in the City of New York as required by the statute in such case made and provided; a letter press copy of which notice is now on file in this court.

It is ordered that Monday, the 11th day of February next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next of kin of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the FRIENDSHIP HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

A Letter. We have been asked, by several citizens of literary and enquiring minds, residents to this berg and vicinity, the following question: "Are you the correspondent to the Tecumseh HERALD?" We answer in the affirmative. They then ask: "What is the matter with "Holloway Hash?" We havn't seen any for the past few weeks. We generally answer them as best suits our train of thought for the time being; for to tell them the truth under such circumstances and at such a time might possibly invoke an unpleasant surprise that would injure our physical appearance and consequently leave a poor impression in the minds of the public as to our being able to hold up our end of the contest. The unblemished truth from from our standpoint of the case is—That Holloway is dead! Not in its literal sense to be sure, but in its lack of anything startling either venturesome or adventurous, that the people at large would care to spend their time in its perusal if published. For a town of its size Holloway is as busy and prosperous as any.

Geo. Hoxie is running his machine shop on full time with six men constantly employed; he is building a large combined boring and turning lathe, for his own use, and also fitting up a sixteen horse traction engine for Burt Holdridge, which the latter will use, as soon as completed, for sawing pickets. The engine has an upright boiler and the drive wheels are seven feet in diameter. She will make the sand fly when Burt gets her started on the road once.

Al. Hoxie is busy buying and shipping butter and eggs to his brother Verne, in Detroit.

M. M. Florence also ships about 30 quarts of milk to the same destination, every morning.

The clerks at the several stores are kept on the move doing up sundry articles for residential consumption. Dr. Begel employs his time to good advantage, attending his physically afflicted patients and preparing to fight that dread disease, small pox, should it appear in our midst.

Bill Cox, Willis Chatfield and others hold down the counters and dry goods boxes at H. H. Osgood's and B. E. Begel's, discussing the current topics of the day and night.

The feed mill of Sutherland and Kelly may be heard Tuesday's and Saturday's, grinding away in full blast.

Carpenter, our worthy blacksmith, says: "The open winter has knocked the bottom clear out of horseshoeing, but that an occasional accident or breakdown supplies him with work at least part of the time."

Surprise parties and an occasional dance are the prime amusements of old and young this winter.

The removal of the P. O. from the hands of the Democrats to that of the Republicans is agitating the minds of some of our worthy Hollowayites, but still she (the P. O.) remains totally indifferent.

Nearly every week some one ships a carload of stock from this station and Philo Lossing is piling up a quantity of dressed pork in the depot for future shipment.

Will Florence of PennYan, Yates Co. N. Y., is visiting with his uncle and cousins at this place.

On the 15th inst. Andy Gillis received a valuable addition to his family in the shape of a nine pound boy. Mother and child doing well.

On the 17th inst. Mr. Josiah Guiwits of Tecumseh and Mrs. Frances Earl of Union City, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's son, Mac Sleeper, on Main street.

We have been informed that the board of directors in the Doty school district met and expelled one of the scholars for using profane language within the school limits; this is a step in the right direction; and we venture the opinion that were each and every scholar guilty of the same offense similarly dealt with, the majority of the present population of the school would be on the outside instead of inside its walls. This example may however be a damper on the young sprouts inclined to profanity.

And yet, in the face of all this we say, Holloway is dead! If there is anything "going on" they are mighty mum when they see our reportorial phiz appear on the scene. But still they enquire, "What's the matter with Halloway Hash? Alas, the hash has no seasoning, hence we are afraid of offering it to our readers for fear of its being discarded as too flat, and consequently our reputation for serving the dish would have to suffer.

A Western newspaper says that the latest sensation is a St. Louis horse that chews tobacco; but the greatest sensation is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Do not forget "Hazel Kirke" at the Town Hall, Jan. 29 and 30. Price of admission, 25 cents. Miss Stella Miller who plays the part of "Hazel" and instructs the other players in their various parts, arrived in town Tuesday. She is visiting her friend Mrs. E. VanDeMark.

Mrs. Lambert is at her daughter's, Mrs. Peter Kishpaugh's. She has been spending the winter with her daughter in Dundee, and came to Tecumseh for a short visit a few weeks ago, and being unable to return there came on here to wait until the small-pox scare is over.

The report was on the streets here last Saturday that Ella Frost who has been living at East Milan for some time past was sick with the small-pox, and that later a telegram had been received announcing her death. Her brother, however, says that the report is entirely without foundation, her family having had no information of her sickness.

The hop at Manchester was well represented by Clinton people. Geo. Freese, O. A. Sinclair, Geo. Codling and C. F. Mrs. Laura VanDeMark has been here for several days visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Dow Draper spent several days of last week at Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. David Brooks returned from Mt Summit, Ind. last Friday. Mr. Brooks was under the weather part of the time during his absence, and was not looking as well as usual upon his return. He went to Adrian Monday as juror.

The air in this vicinity is heavy with the scent of orange blossoms.

Miss Russell, of Macon, visited friends here last week.

Mr. Samuel Berry, of Albion, was in town last Friday soliciting orders for harnesses.

Mrs. John Hause has been quite sick for a few weeks past but is slowly improving.

Frank Thompson's lucky star was in the ascendency again last Saturday. Smith & Amspoker sold ten cent tickets to the number of twenty-five for a twenty-two pound turkey. The last ticket out of the hat which was the winning one belonged to the above gentleman and he escorted his feathered friend home in triumph.

Miss Tillie Becker who has been at Fayette, O., came home sick last Monday. Dr. Tuttle pronounced her threatened with typhoid fever.

Died, Sunday morning, January 20, at his home in Bridgewater, Mr. Henry Katner.

A. W. Muir had a whole chapter of accidents last Saturday. When he was hitching up his team in the morning one of the horses stepped on his foot, and wrenched off a toe nail. After nursing the wounded member and using strong language for a short time he drove out in the country. As he started to drive out of Walter Hess' yard one of the horses slipped on a piece of ice and fell against the pole of the wagon and broke it. Here was a place for more strong language, but with the aid of straps, etc. he was able to mend the wagon and start on his way home. When near Charles Gadd's residence the strap with which the pole was mended, broke. The calf rack in which were three calves, slipped, and the animals began to separate in all directions, one cleared the wagon at one bound, another got caught in a wheel, and the other which Ed. Coffin was trying to hold, asserted its independence in such a way as to make Ed. think that his breathing apparatus had left him, never to return. After getting straightened around Will succeeded in reaching home without further accident, and is now able to laugh at his experience.

Our law abiding people were treated to a law suit Friday, brought by Jas. Kehoe and Jas. Campbell against Ex deputy Sheriff Teachout, of Adrian, for excessive expenses connected with the proceeding of a certain writ of replevin on the dry goods stock of McAdam & Mensing. A jury trial was held and a verdict of $10.25 for the plaintiffs was given. It is the opinion of many that Mr. Teachout acted in good faith but was obliged to exceed the law limit in legitimate expenses, particularly in the amount paid appraisers per diem.

The Young People's Society of the Baptist church will hold a military social in their rooms, Tuesday evening, Jan. 29th. All are invited.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmers' Social club held its annual election of officers at R. B. Gillespie's, Tuesday evening, Jan. 8th, which resulted as follows:

Pres.—A. P. Coddington.
Vice Pres.—I. H. Schreder.
Sec. and Treas.—Will Fisher.

Program for next meeting at J. Fisher's, Tuesday evening, Jan. 29th:

The President's Message.
Inst. Music—Ellen Fisher.
Select Reading—Mrs. Grant Schreder.
Rec.—Edgar Coddington.
Essay—Mrs. F. V. Horton.
Charade—John Fisher.
Song—Kit Griswold.
Rec.—Edna Hendershot.
Question continued from last meeting. Which is the most profitable to the farmer, to sell the products of his farm or feed it out to stock?

SMALL POX AT DEERFIELD.

A corespondent of the Adrian Times sends the following to that paper. The report printed in several papers in the state, that young LaPointe had died of small pox here, should be corrected.

LaPointe, who brought the disease here from Azalia, is rapidly recovering.

His uncle, Malosh, Mrs. Malosh and their two children have it, but are doing well, with the exception of the wife, and if nothing unfavorable develops, will be out of all danger in a very few days.

The disease has not appeared any where else in the township, and the Health Officer thinks there is no danger of any new cases, as all known exposures were more than two weeks ago.

Our people are feeling safe. There probably will be no new cases. Schools, which were closed throughout the township, will be opened again Monday, and quarantined persons will be released.

A Practical Lesson to a Duds.

Mr. W. S. Brown, the handsome, polite and urbane passenger agent of the Lake Shore, tells a great story about a couple of dude travelling men. They were way up swells here in Toledo when at home, so it won't do to give any names. They left here Saturday morning on the Adrian train, and turning the back of a seat sat facing each other, occupying four seats—leaving no vacant seats in the car. At Richards two young ladies came in. The dudes looked at each other and laughed intending to make the ladies take seats by them. The ladies, mortified and blushing, stood in the aisle. In a moment a large man, weighing something in the neighborhood of 200 pounds and with a kind of a John L. appearance about him, who was seated a little back on the other side, strode across the car, seized the dude facing him by the collar, yanked him up the roof and smashed him down into the seat beside his companion. Then turning the back of the front seat he leaned and said, smiling as sweetly as though dude squelching was his daily amusement. "Ladies there's a seat for you." The cheering of the passengers, Mr. Brown said, was worth going 10 miles to hear, and the two poor dudes were so completely done up that they were not heard to speak until the train reached Blissfield.—Toledo Bee.

Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomache and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 24.

Half the winter gone and winter has just arrived.

The weather clerk promised snow last Sunday and it came. Well done, young man. Do so some more.

The bill to grant Gen. Sheridan's widow a pension of $3,500 should be passed at once. We do not believe a word of opposition will be offered from any source whatever.

Arguments in favor of the bill to provide a house for the Governor in Lansing: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the State of Michigan hath not where to rest its head."—Lansing Republican.

The newspapers are still engaged in the laudable undertaking of making Gen. Harrison's cabinet. It is quite possible however, that Harrison himself will have something to say on that subject before a final settlement of the question.

What dreadfully shocking news the cable does sometimes transmit, to be sure! The Prince of Wales is growing bald behind the ears and quite gray, and Henry Irving has a cold. Such intelligence must sadden the marines, as they listen to it humming along the wires.—N. Y. Star.

In learning a trade young Jimmy Blaine is doing something that his father never did. The elder Jim set his son a shining example as an individual who has always lived by his wits. Working for a living will make a Democrat out of the boy.—Chicago Herald.

Candidates for justice of the Supreme Court, regents, pension agent, collectors of customs, United States district attorneys and marshals, postmasters, etc., have filled the political woods so full now-a-days that it is dangerous to fire at political game of any kind lest you should hit some of these hunters.

The tax on tin plates is simply a revenue tax. It doesn't "protect" any industry whatever and the country is not suffering for revenue money in the treasury just now. It is probable that the American traffic in canned goods would soon be doubled if tin plates were admitted free of duty. The proposed reduction to one cent per pound can only be refused in the interest of a few persons to the injury of many.

The Detroit Free Press pays our new Senator elect—Hon. James McMillan—a very handsome compliment. Mr. McMillan's record as a statesman is still before him, that is true, but he is one of Michigan's most enterprising citizens, a man of broad views and great liberality, and we believe he will be a worthy successor to Tom Palmer.

Horatio Seymour on being asked what the farmers most needed at the hands of the government, replied: "Relief from some of the burdens of taxation." To the inquiry "what was their next greatest need" he replied: "relief from some more of the burdens of taxation." That is just what the farmers want to-day—relief from some of the burdens of taxation.

The advocates of the war taxes claim that the high tariff system by stimulating one class of industries—manufactures—stimulates in a like degree the agricultural and other industries of the country. If that be true it would be well for the tariff barons to explain why it is in 1860 the farmers of this country owned nearly half the national wealth, and in 1880 they had possessiog of only about a quarter of it. The war taxes do not seem, from this fact, to have stimulated agriculture or added to the farmers' profits.

If a high tariff raises wages by keeping out the foreign goods, why is it that China, which has been protected for centuries only pays twenty cents a day for skilled labor? As one of our protection friends remarked the other day, "China is so thickly settled, that makes wages lower." Apply that argument to England, then. She is much more thickly settled than this country. Is that not ample reason for wages being lower, according to our protectionist friend? But why, if protection lowers wages, have wages in England increased fifty per cent since she adopted free trade? Will some of our protection friends study over that problem a little.

MEN OF CONSCIENCE IN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY—AN EARNEST WORD.

Dr. Charles F. Deems says to us:

"Editors The Voice: When you say about me one-tenth of what you have said about Quay and Clarkson, be ready instantly to meet a $100,000 libel suit."

Any man who cares for his reputation, or has a reputation to care for, and is not guilty of the crime charged, would say that same thing.

The New York Herald says:

"That is a serious charge which The Voice—Prohibition organ—brings against Senator Quay and others, principally from advance sheets . . . and Senator Quay, who has some little reputation left, must compel The Voice to swallow its charges and publicly apologize, otherwise he will rest under the suspicion that silence is a confession of guilt. Will he or dare he do it?"

Think of it: We have charged these men in the most public way possible with having committed a penitentiary offense, with having purchased goods which they knew to be stolen—a crime punishable as follows by the laws of the State of New York:

"A person who buys or receives any stolen property . . . knowing the same to have been stolen . . . is guilty of criminally receiving such property, and is punishable by imprisonment in a State prison not more than five years or in county jail for not more than six months, or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

Recently, before one of the New York city courts, a man was accused of having purchased the stolen mailing list of Demorest's Monthly. The Judge from the bench said to him, "You have done as dishonest a thing as I ever knew a man to do. It is an act that destroys the very foundations upon which business is established."

We have charged Messrs. Quay and Clarkson with this crime; we have charged that they conspired with employes of a business concern to betray the confidence of their employers, and to steal from them; we have published the confessions of the thieves, evidence so conclusive as to carry conviction to every honest mind, and yet not a whisper of denial worthy of the name has come from these men, not a whisper of libel. All the land has rung with this charge: the telegraph flashed it across the continent; everywhere the great dailies have discussed it, and the weeklies are now discussing it. We made the libel a monstrous one, if libel it is. We sent a marked copy of last week's Voice containing the charge and the evidence to every one of the 15,000 newspapers in America; we sent a copy to every one of the 60,000 preachers; and we had posted in conspicuous places thousands of posters giving the names of the criminals and characterizing their crimes, and we have scattered hundreds of thousands of copies of The Voice. Yet these accused men are silent. Silent, why? Because the evidence is so overwhelming, and because they know that other proof accessible to us is so conclusive, they dare not utter a denial or lisp libel.

And think of it—you men of conscience in the Republican party—and your name is legion, these men, guilty of a penitentiary crime, are the head and front of your party, its National Chairman, Vice-Chairman and treasurer, the men who led your party to victory in the last campaign, the men who to-day stand behind the President-elect, the men who have the machinery of the Republican party in their hands. And then remember that this penitentiary offence that we have proven against these men is only an incident that illustrates a rascality, a corruption of methods in the better of the two old parties, so common as to scarcely create surprise!

Says the New York Evening Post, the paper edited for half a century by William Cullen Bryant, and which until recent years has been Republican:

"When Quay was selected for the chairmanship, every Republican in the country knew the kind of canvass he would make, and the newspapers chuckled over it. The theft of a mail list is in a line with the persistent publication of the forged extracts from the English papers, with the enormous expenditure of money in concealed ways, with the burning of the accounts when the canvass was over, and the expulsion of Johnny O'Brien for not pulling straight with the bribery money . . . . A party, estimable Voice, does not become suddenly depraved any more than a man. The process of corruption, which has made Quay a great statesman, and gives people who stuffed his pockets with money a claim to Cabinet positions, and makes the stealing of your papers good fun, began a good while ago. It has been going on for years. What shocks you now is that there is so little blushing over it, but you must be prepared for even less blushing."

So corrupt have politics become in the Republican party (a party which we always admit without waste of argument to be the better of the two old parties) that thievery is condoned with an "all is fair in politics." The honestest, cleanest Republican paper in this city is the New York Press. The comment of that paper on the crime the day after exposure closed as follows:

"Politicians of all parties made merry over the story last night. Several congratulatory dispatches were indited to Messrs. Quay, Clarkson, and Dudley by those to whom the intelligence was news."

We were well aware that it was no "news" to The Press, as that paper was a beneficiary of the crime. Copies of that journal were sent to the subscribers of The Voice, whose names were upon the stolen list. A crime as bad as that of the pickpocket a fit subject of congratulation to the leaders of the party of Lincoln and Sumner!

DOWDALL GOES FREE.

The Case of Attempted Assault Against Him Nolle Prosed.

PEORIA, Ills., Jan. 19.—Col. W. T. Dowdall, with his attorneys, appeared in the circuit court Friday as defendant in the case of attempted assault on the person of Lena Selleck, a domestic, for which he was indicted at the December term of court. The state's attorney made a statement that the prosecuting witness, Lena Selleck, called on him a few days after the indictment was found and requested its dismissal. He informed her that this was impossible. She then disappeared and has not since been heard from. As he did not believe that she would appear at either this or any other term of court, and as her presence was absolutely necessary, he moved that the case be nolle prosed, which was done. Col. Dowdall said that he had spent considerable money in trying to find the girl, but had been unable to do so. The charge on which the indictment was found was that Col. Dowdall entered her room while she was employed by him and made an unsuccessful attack on her, by which she was physically injured.

CHARGES OF BRIBERY.

A Sensational Feature of the Minnesota Senatorial Fight.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 19.—A sensation was created in the state senate Friday morning when Senator Ward, who championed the cause of United States Senator Sabin in the Republican caucus Thursday night, introduced a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the charges of bribery in the senatorial fight. Generally, the legislators express great surprise at the resolution, stating that no such charges had been heard by them. In the senate, however, the resolution was immediately adopted, there being only one negative vote. Vague charges had been made, but nothing definite was stated until this resolution passed. Senator Ward says: "The investigation will develop all I know," and refuses to be further interviewed. A bill for a constitutional prohibitory amendment was introduced in the house Friday by Representative Hompe. In the state house of representatives Friday a resolution was adopted for the appointment of a committee to investigate the question of "watered stock" of Minnesota railroads.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in lining membranes of the nose and eustachin tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proven this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. DIXON & SON, 303 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

LYNCHED THE WHOLE PARTY.

Two Men and a Woman Strung Up for a Horrible Crime.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—A Memphis, Tenn., special to The Herald says: At Tiptonville, Tenn., a landing on the Mississippi river, about 150 miles north of here, some weeks ago a young man married the daughter of Mrs. J. F. Atcheson, a widow. The young man's father learning that his son's mother-in-law possessed $500 or $400, concocted the plan for him, his son and the young wife to murder the old lady for the purpose of robbery. The plan was agreed to and the crime was committed. The neighbors learned of the crime, fixed the guilt upon the trio, and the latter hastily departed. A posse of indignant citizens followed, overtook and hanged the entire party to the limb of a tree. Tiptonville is practically almost as remote as Shanghai, being without railroad or telegraph connection with the outside world.

A Narrow Escape.

Mrs L. S. Pickerell, of Middlebury, Ind., had a very narrow escape from the insane asylum. For years she was subject to headache, palpitation, spinal pain, sleeplessness and nervous prostration. For three years she had convulsions, often as many as fifty a night. Able physicians failed to help her. At last after taking that wonderful remedy, Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for six weeks she was entirely cured. It is a recent discovery by one of the greatest of living physicians, and is working wonders. Trial bottle free at Baker and Hall's, Drug Store.

Mahone on the Negro.

South Carolina Colored Men Ask a Few Questions

AND RECEIVE VERY PLAIN ANSWERS

Advised to Make Haste Slowly in Regard to Political "Recognition"—No Shadow of a Chance in the Cabinet—A Georgia Man Closeted with Gen. Harrison.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 19.—The Sun's special from Charleston, S. C., says: Before leaving here Thursday night Gen. William Mahone, of Virginia, was waited upon by a number of the young colored Republicans, who asked him to say something about the colored question in politics. He advised them not to draw the color line too tightly, as it would drive off a great many Democrats who would otherwise be pacified and won over to a political organization which would more evenly distribute party and public patronage. He advised that the colored element should act wisely, and not be imprudent or unnecessarily aggressive. If they pursued any other line of conduct it would be injurious and might prevent the coalition which he looked forward to between the negroes and the conservative whites in the south.

GEN. WILLIAM MAHONE.

He was asked what he thought of a colored man in Harrison's cabinet.

"I have heard," was the reply, "that the colored men desire representation in the cabinet, but they are too advanced in asserting themselves in that particular. It is not approved of by the Republican party as a whole. There are fanatics who desire such a consummation, but none others. In unity of sentiment with the larger and more liberal element of the Republican party, I do not approve of any such pretension. In fact, I regard such a proposition too absurd to enter into the factorage of the political situation. There will be no colored man in Harrison's cabinet. The time for that has not yet arrived. I do not approve of colored men thrusting themselves forward as candidates for prominent positions. However correct it may be in American citizenship and in the ultra-republican creed for such candidacy, it is wrong in policy just now. The colored man is entitled to all the rights that properly pertain to him, but his place is not in the extreme front yet. My advice is for the negro to address his energies and enterprise to industrial and educational matters until such time as he shall be undoubtedly qualified for the higher places of trust and emolument. If the negro persists in putting himself forward unduly he will alienate his best friends. The best minds of the north and of the Republican party feel that he is a heavy load to carry, for so feel Senator Hoar and other great men who are at this date bound to admit that it was a great mistake to make him a participant in a function of the government which requires intelligence and a judicious use of franchise to discharge properly."

IN CONFAB WITH A SOUTHERNER.

Significant Meeting Between Gen. Harrison and A. E. Buck, of Georgia.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—A. E. Buck, of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of the Republican state central committee of Georgia, accompanied by Col. Locke, Dr. Arnold and a number of other gentlemen, called yesterday on President-elect Harrison. Mr. Buck is being pressed for a cabinet position by Georgia Republicans, and, it is said, came here on invitation of Gen. Harrison.

After returning to the hotel Mr. Buck left his companions, and taking a hack went immediately back to the Harrison residence, and he and the president-elect were closeted together for two hours. The fact that Gen. Harrison did not refer while the other gentlemen were present to the object for which he requested Mr. Buck to call, and that Mr. Buck made a second call alone, is regarded as very significant, especially in connection with Mr. Buck's prominence as a cabinet possibility. What passed between them, however, is not known.

Fred Simon, who told the president-elect that he was a "Utah gentile and a Jerusalem Jew," called yesterday to urge that the subject of Mormonism be made prominent in his inaugural address. He says Mormonism is decidedly on the increase in Salt Lake City, and that nothing but the most vigorous policy will be able to stamp it out.

Looking into Alleged Frauds.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—The federal grand jury continued its investigation into the election frauds yesterday, and examined thirty-five witnesses. It is more than probable that another partial report will be made by the grand jury to-day, and if it is done not less than thirty indictments will be returned.

Great Scott! What Next?

WOLVERHAMPTON, England, Jan. 19.—The Evening Express, whose proprietor is a close friend of Andrew Carnegie, says that a cable from New York announces that Harrison has offered Carnegie the secretaryship of the interior.

FREE SPEECH IN CHICAGO.

Judge Tuley Gives a Decision Favorable to the Anarchists.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—In the case of the petition for an injunction restraining the city authorities from interfering with Anarchist meetings, Judge Tuley yesterday delivered his decision. He refused to grant the injunction asked for, but at the same time, in effect, expressed his opinion that the police have no right to forbid the holding of a public meeting or to interfere with its proceedings so long as it is not guilty of actually advocating or committing acts of violence or lawlessness.

Powderly Denounces Tom Barry.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 17.—T. V. Powderly arrived here yesterday on Knights of Labor business. He says one of his reasons for coming is to give the members here an opportunity to ask any questions they desire about the recent sweeping charges against the order made by Mr. Barry. Mr. Powderly states that the order is in prosperous condition and is not only holding its own, but gaining rapidly in membership. Mr. Powderly denounces Barry as the secret agent of the Anarchists.

White-Cap Assailants Fined.

EXETER, N. H., Jan. 17.—The thirteen "White-Caps" arrested at North Salem for assault upon John E. Welch, were fined $15 and costs each yesterday, upon payment of which they were released.

THE DOG AND THE SHADOW

A Dog, crossing a bridge over a stream with a piece of flesh in his mouth, saw his own shadow in the water, and took it for that of another Dog, with a piece of meat double his own in size. He therefore let go his own, and fiercely attacked the other Dog, to get his larger piece from him. He thus lost both.—Æsop's Fables.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR SKIN DISEASES

OF diseases of the skin there are some 12 or 15 classes, in each class from two to four varieties. These are modified according to the particular condition of the blood, for disease of the skin means disease of the blood. These are either the result of stomach, liver or kidney difficulties, and for a cure depend upon a healthy action of these organs.

Erysipelas, or St. Anthony's Fire

Is the result of an impure condition of the blood, and for a cure depends, primarily, upon the condition of the stomach, liver and kidneys, and, secondarily upon the condition of the blood as manufactured by these organs.

HIBBARD'S RHEUMATIC SYRUP,

Containing POKE, BURDOCK, MANDRAKE, QUEEN'S ROOT, and others of the best Blood Remedies, very carefully and scientifically compounded, strikes at the root of the evil and eradicates the disease, whether of a Scrofulous, Rheumatic or Syphiletic Taint. It is a never failing remedy.

Six weeks since I was attacked with Erysipelas; my eyes were nearly closed, my head and face terribly inflamed. Two bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup cured me. B. F. KNAPP, Wolcott, N. Y.

MY little boy has been troubled with a severe type of Skin Disease, with intense itching and burning, which constantly grew worse until his face was covered with scabs. Seeing Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup advertised to cure skin and blood diseases, we tried it, and to-day our child's skin is as clear and smooth as ever. We believe Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is a positive cure for Skin and Blood Diseases. MRS. EDMOND PALMER, 85 Summit St., Rochester, N. Y.

SALT RHEUM

I have been troubled with Rheumatism for years, and Salt Rheum has been nearly all over my body. I have used nearly every remedy but found no relief except from Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I could not lie in bed at night. Have taken ten bottles, and am now a well man. It is truly a great blood purifier. NELSON MOORE, Wolcott, N. Y.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

ECONOMY, as wise folks say,
Is wealth pronounced another way,
So while "hard times" the people cry,
The Toilet Soaps they should not buy.
Let all who buy such Soaps take care
To weigh the cake exact and fair,
And find they pay in figures round
A dollar, more or less per pound.

What course should people then pursue?
In short, the only thing to do,
Though rich in bonds, or worldly poor,
The "IVORY SOAP" they should procure,
Which may be bought from coast to coast,
At sixteen cents per pound at most,
And does more satisfaction grant
Than all the Toilet Soaps extant.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

A BACHELOR'S BALLAD.

Returning home at the close of day,
Who gently chides my long delay,
And by my side delights to stay?

Who sets for me my easy chair,
Prepares the room with greatest care,
And lays my slippers ready there?

Who regulates the evening fire,
And piles the blazing fuel higher,
And bids me draw my chair still nigher?

When sickness comes to rack my frame,
And grief disturbs my troubled brain,
Who sympathizes with my pain?
Nobody.

—American Queen.

TAGGART'S GHOST.

"Ah," said Lawyer Drake as he dictated the last word of a brief to his clerk, "I think that will do. Have a good copy early to-morrow. Hulloa! I'm just too late to catch the 6 o'clock train. Guess I'll take my dinner in the city."

He rose and stretched his arms with a long drawn yawn. Then he changed his coat, put on his hat and went out, leaving the weary clerk transcribing his notes. After walking a few blocks down Broadway he turned into a narrow street near Trinity. He was wondering what friends he would meet at the restaurant, when he chanced to look across the street. At an open window in the second story sat a man with his hat tipped back on his head—his hands apparently clasped in front of him.

"Hulloa, Taggart!" exclaimed Mr. Drake, bowing and smiling.

The man in the window smiled back faintly, but said nothing. He looked inquiringly at the lawyer and gestured with both hands. Mr. Drake stopped and asked, with a puzzled expression: "What is it?" The man in the window continued to gesture. Mr. Drake thought he meant to say by his beckoning that he wanted the lawyer to reserve a chair for him at the restaurant. "All right," called out the lawyer, and he continued his walk. But he did not see the expression of pain and disappointment that came over that man's features, or hear the suppressed "Great God!" that burst from his pale lips.

Mr. Drake tipped up a chair at his side when he had selected a table and ordered his dinner. He invited a brother lawyer, who dropped in at the same time, to sit at the table, saying: "Taggart will be here shortly." In two minutes they were deeply interested in a discussion of the latest sensation of the courts. The waiter was about to serve dessert before they thought of Taggart again.

"By Jove!" exclaimed Mr. Drake, "I wonder where the man is? If you will excuse me a minute I will step across the street and see. I may have mistaken his meaning. He waved his arms this way and that, and I thought he meant he would meet me here. Perhaps he wanted to have me come."

When he reached the sidewalk he looked up at the open window and saw the man sitting there as he had been at first, but now his face was turned away and he seemed to be looking to the further corner of the room. Mr. Drake hurried up the stairs and opened the door without ceremony. The man at the window sprang up with a start, and, rushing forward, seized the lawyer's hands and gripped them hard.

"Thank God, you've come!" he exclaimed in a weak voice. "I was afraid you did not understand me."

"Well, I certainly did not, and do not now," answered the lawyer. "Why! what is the matter—you are all of a tremble, and your hands are like ice?"

"Come this way, Mr. Drake, to the window where it is light, and I will tell you. That's it; sit down there and I can see your face plainly."

The trembling man's voice choked and he sank into a chair, covering his face with his hands. The lawyer looked at him anxiously.

"Come, Taggart," he said, soothingly, "there's nothing new wrong, is there? You've been brooding over that rascally partner of yours too much. Come, come! that will be all cleared up in time; don't worry."

"Mr. Drake," said the other, unsteadily, "I'm not a man to break down under business cares. I have brooded over my trouble somewhat, I admit, for when a man is played false by an associate, who has been his life long friend, it goes harder than the loss of money and the temporary loss of confidence and credit. Ruin I can retrieve, but the wound made by my partner never can be healed. But there is something more. What it is I do not know; I dare not think."

He turned his head and glanced furtively at the safe in the corner of the room. The office was in its usual orderly condition, and Mr. Drake's keen eyes, following the fearful glance of his friend, could discern nothing in the shadow cast by the massive safe against the wall.

"Go on, Taggart," he said, quietly; "what is it?"

Mr. Taggart turned his pale face once more to the light, and, looking the lawyer straight in the eyes, continued:

"It is now twelve days since my partner disappeared. You remember that I came to the office unusually early on that morning, and found the safe open and all the cash and securities gone. Harding and I were the only men in the world who knew that combination. The safe had not been tampered with; the proper combination had been worked, that was clear. You know I refused to believe that anything was wrong. I tried to persuade myself that Harding had been nervous about the money, some $50,000 that had been received the day before too late for deposit. I said that Harding had come down early, as I did, with the idea of seeing that the money was deposited as soon as the banks should open. I thought his nervousness had caused him to forget to lock the safe again. But all the easily convertible securities were gone, too. Well, I stayed here all day waiting for him to return. The next day his own family put detectives on the case. Not a sign of him has been found. He was traced from his house on that morning to this office, and there every clew vanishes. Strange, was it not?

"Since that time I have been in the office throughout every day, and have remained until long after business hours, as I did to-night. I cannot say why I have done this; it seems, somehow, as if Harding would turn up, and I—I thought he might not come unless I was alone. Mr. Drake, Harding—has—appeared." Mr. Taggart shuddered violently and then covered his face with his hands. His agitation began to tell on the lawyer, who nevertheless inquired, with a show of calmness, "Well, Taggart, how was it?"

"It was about ten minutes before you came along," said Taggart, huskily. "I had been sitting here brooding for more than an hour. Almost all that time I had been looking at the safe. Still thinking deeply and wondering what had become of Harding, I turned my head toward the street. I looked out absently, did not notice what was before me, and in a few seconds turned my head again toward the safe. Oh, God! Right there in the shadow stood a man, haggard, pale, terribly emaciated, in such an attitude that it seemed as if he must totter and fall forward. I would have thought it was some decrepit beggar who had entered stealthily had I not recognized unerringly my partner's features. 'Harding!' I cried, starting up, and then—God help me, Drake—he was not there."

"Oh, come, Taggart," exclaimed the lawyer, hastily, his blood chilling in spite of himself at his friend's dramatic recital, "I told you you had been thinking too much of this matter."

"Stop, Drake," interrupted Taggart, "that is all. I sank back in my chair, not knowing what to do or think. I was absolutely certain of the testimony of my own eyes, and yet I doubted. I knew what I had seen, but what was the significance of it? I dared not look again until I could reason myself out of the tremendous excitement that stirred me. Just then you passed. I tried to call out to you, but, in spite of everything, I could not open my mouth. I wanted you to come up at once, for, to tell the truth, I—I think I was frightened. After you went on I turned about and looked again at the safe. As sure as I sit here now Harding stood there. He seemed to be back of the wall a bit and leaning, as I told you, a trifle forward. The whole scene wavered indistinctly an instant and then went out, and I went clear up to the safe and touched the wall where he had stood. After that I came back and had not taken my eyes off the spot until you came in. I expected him to appear a third time, and I was dreadfully afraid nobody would be here to see him with me. Ah! Look!" and Mr. Taggart leaned away over the arm of his chair and strained his eyes at the shadow, which was getting rapidly deeper, for the sun had set.

"You don't mean to say you see anything now, do you?" whispered the lawyer.

"No—no—I was mistaken that time. I was mistaken—mistaken. But not before; no, sir, not before."

"I am afraid you were, Taggart," said the lawyer, gravely. "Let's investigate here and be convinced that you are mistaken." He went to the further side of the room and Taggart rose and leaned against a desk watching him. Mr. Drake grasped the handle of the safe door and tried to shake it, saying, as he did so, in a careless tone: "That seems to be all right." Then he passed his hand along the wall and thumped. "Ah!" he added, "you have a thin partition or a hollow wall here."

"It is a condemned chimney," said Mr. Taggart, whose agitation was increasing. "The department for the inspection of buildings sealed it up several months ago. We used to have a fireplace there, and Harding had it boarded over and papered to correspond with the rest of the room."
